21 [13] I find then that when I would do good; I am thus yoked, that evil is preſent with me.

22 For I delight in the law of God, concerning the [b] inner man.

23 But I ſee another law in my members, rebelling againſt the law of my [c] mind, and leading me captive unto the law of ſin, which is in my members.

24 [14] O [d] wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death!

25 I [e] thank God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Then I [f] myſelf in my mind ſerve the law of God, but in my fleſh the law of ſin.

CHAP. VIII.

1 He concludeth that there is no condemnation to them who are grafted in Chriſt through his Spirit, 3 howſoever they be as yet burdened with ſins: 9 For they live through that Spirit, 14 whoſe teſtimony 15 driveth away all fear, 18 and relieveth our preſent miſeries.

NOW [1] then there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus, which [2] walk not after the [a] fleſh, but after the Spirit.

[p] Though ſin be in us, yet it is not known for ſin, neither doth it ſo rage, as it rageth after that the law is known.

[5] He ſetteth himſelf before us for an example, in whom all men may behold, firſt, what they are by nature before they earneſtly think upon the law of God: to wit, blockiſh, and heady to ſin and wickedneſs, without all true ſenſe and feeling of ſin; then what manner of perſons they become, when their conſcience is reproved by the teſtimony of the law, to wit, ſtubborn and more inflamed with the deſire of ſin, than ever they were before.

[q] When I knew not the law, then methought I lived indeed: for my conſcience never troubled me, becauſe I knew not my diſeaſe.

[r] When I began to underſtand the commandment.

[s] In ſin, or by ſin.

[6] The concluſion: That the law of itſelf is holy, but all the fault is in us which abuſe the law.

[t] Touching not coveting.

[7] The propoſition: that the law is not the cauſe of death, but our corrupt nature being therewith not only diſcovered, but alſo ſtirred up: and took occaſion thereby to rebel, as which the more that things are forbidden it, the more it deſireth them, and from hence cometh the guiltineſs, and occaſion of death.

[u] Beareth it the blame of my death?

[x] That ſin might ſhew itſelf to be ſin, and bewray itſelf to be that which it is indeed.

[y] As evil as it could, ſhewing all the venom it could.

[8] The cauſe of this matter, is this, becauſe that the law requireth a heavenly pureneſs, but men ſuch as they be born, are bondſlaves of corruption, which they willingly ſerve.

[9] He ſetteth himſelf being regenerate, before us, for an example, in whom may eaſily appear the ſtrife of the Spirit and the fleſh, and therefore of the law of God, and our wickedneſs. For ſince that the law in a man not regenerate bringeth forth death only, therefore in him it may eaſily be accuſed; but ſeeing that in a man which is regenerate it bringeth forth good fruit, it doth better appear that evil actions proceed not from the law but from ſin, that is, from our corrupt nature: And therefore the apoſtle teacheth alſo what the true uſe of the law is in reproving ſin in the regenerate, unto the end of the chapter: as a little before (to wit, from the ſeventh verſe unto this fifteenth) he declareth the uſe of it in them which are not regenerate.

[10] The deeds of my life, ſaith he, anſwer not, nay, they are contrary to my will: Therefore by the conſent of my will with the law, and repugnancy with the deeds of my life, it appeareth evidently, that the law and a right ruled will, do perſuade one thing; but corruption which hath her ſeat alſo in the regenerate, another thing.

[11] It is to be noted, that one ſelf-ſame man is ſaid to will and not to will, in divers reſpects: to wit, he is ſaid to will, in that, that he is regenerate by grace: and not to will, in that, that he is not regenerate, or in that, that he is ſuch an one as he was born. But becauſe the part which is regenerate, at length becometh conqueror, therefore Pau ſuſtaining the part of the regenerate, ſpeaketh in ſuch ſort as if the corruption which ſinneth willingly, were ſomething without a man: although afterward he granteth that this evil is in his fleſh, or in his members.

[z] That natural corruption, which cleaveth faſt even to them that are regenerate, and is not clean conquered.

[12] This vice, or ſin, or law of ſin, doth wholly poſſeſs thoſe men which are not regenerate, and hindereth them or holdeth them back that are regenerate.

[a] This doth indeed agree to that man, whom the grace of God hath made a new man: for where the Spirit is not, how can there be any ſtrife there?

[13] The concluſion: As the law of God exhorteth to goodneſs, ſo doth the law of ſin (that is, the corruption wherein we are born) force us to wickedneſs: but the Spirit, that is, our mind, in that that it is regenerate, conſenteth with the law of God: but the fleſh, that is, the whole natural man, is bondſlave to the law of ſin. Therefore to be ſhort, wickedneſs and death are not of the law, but of ſin, which reigneth in them that are not regenerate: for they neither will, nor do good; but will, and do evil: but in them that are regenerate, it ſtriveth againſt the Spirit or law of the mind, ſo that they cannot neither live ſo well as they would, or be ſo void of ſin as they would.

[b] The inner man, and the new man are all one, and are anſwerable and ſet as contrary to the old man, neither doth this word, Inner man, ſignify man's mind and reaſon; and the old man, the powers that are under them, as the philoſophers imagine; but by the outward man is meant whatſoever is either without or within a man from top to toe, ſo long as that man is not born anew by the grace of God.

[c] The law of the mind in this place, is not to be underſtood of the mind as it is naturally, and as our mind is from our birth, but of the mind which is renewed by the Spirit of God.

[14] It is a miſerable thing to be yet in part ſubject to ſin, which of its own nature maketh us guilty of death; but we muſt cry to the Lord, who will by death itſelf at length make us conquerors, as we are already conquerors in Chriſt.

[d] Wearied with miſerable and continual conflicts.

[e] He recovereth himſelf, and ſheweth us that he reſteth only in Chriſt.

[f] This is the true perfection of them that are born anew, to confeſs that they are imperfect.

[1] A concluſion of all the former diſputation, from ver. 16. chap. 1. even to this place; ſeeing that we, being juſtified by faith in Chriſt, do obtain remiſſion of ſins, and imputation of righteouſneſs, and are alſo ſanctified, it followeth hereof, that they that are grafted into Chriſt by faith, are out of all fear of condemnation.

[2] The fruits of the Spirit, or effects of ſanctification which is begun in us, do not ingraft us into Chriſt, but do declare that we are grafted into him.

[a] Follow not the fleſh for their guide: for he is not ſaid to live after the fleſh, that hath the Holy Ghoſt for his guide, though ſometimes he ſtep awry.

A. D. 60.

2 [3] For the [b] law of the Spirit of [c] life, which is in [d] Chriſt Jeſus, hath [e] freed me from the law of ſin and of death.

3 [4] For, (that that was [f] impoſſible to the law, in as much as it was weak, becauſe of the [g] fleſh) God ſending his own Son, in the ſimilitude of [h] ſinful fleſh, and for [i] ſin, [k] condemned ſin in the fleſh,

4 That that [l] righteouſneſs of the law might be fulfilled [5] in us, which walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit.

5 [6] For they that are after the [m] fleſh, ſavour the things of the fleſh: but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit.

6 [7] For the wiſdom of the fleſh is death: but the wiſdom of the Spirit is life and peace.

7 [8] Becauſe the wiſdom of the fleſh is enmity againſt God: [9] for it is not ſubject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

8 [10] So then they that are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God.

9 [11] Now ye are not in the fleſh, but in the Spirit, becauſe the Spirit of God dwelleth in you: but if any man hath not the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſame is not his.

10 [12] And if Chriſt be in you, the [n] body is dead becauſe of ſin: but the Spirit is life for righteouſneſs ſake.

11 [13] But if the Spirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, dwell in you, he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit [o] that dwelleth in you.

12 [14] Therefore, brethren, we are debtors not to the fleſh, to live after the fleſh:

13 [15] For if ye live after the fleſh, ye ſhall die: but if ye mortify the deeds of the body by the Spirit, ye ſhall live.

14 [16] For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God.

15 [17] For ye have not received the [p] Spirit of bondage to [q] fear again: but ye have received the Spirit of [r] adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father.

16 The

[3] A preventing of an objection. Seeing that the virtue of the Spirit which is in us ſo weak, how may we gather thereby, that there is no condemnation to them that have that virtue? Becauſe, ſaith he, that virtue of the quickening Spirit which is ſo weak in us, is moſt perfect and moſt mighty in Chriſt, and being imputed unto us which believe, cauſeth us to be ſo accounted of, as though there were no relics of corruption and death in us. Therefore hitherto, Paul diſputed of remiſſion of ſins, and imputation of fulfilling the law, and alſo of ſanctification which is begun in us: but now he ſpeaketh of the perfect imputation of Chriſt's manhood, which part was neceſſarily required to the full appeaſing of our conſciences. For our ſins are defaced by the blood of Chriſt, and the guiltineſs of our corruption is covered with the imputation of Chriſt's obedience, and the corruption itſelf (which the apoſtle calleth ſinful ſin) is healed in us by little and little by the gift of ſanctification; but yet lacketh beſide that, another remedy, to wit, the perfect ſanctification of Chriſt's own fleſh, which alſo is to us imputed.

[b] The power and authority of the Spirit, againſt which is ſet the tyranny of ſin.

[c] Which mortifieth the old man, and quickeneth the new man.

[e] For Chriſt's ſanctification being imputed to us, perfecteth our ſanctification which is begun in us.

[4] He uſeth no argument here, but expoundeth the myſtery of ſanctification, which is imputed unto us. For becauſe, ſaith he, that the virtue of the law was not ſuch (and that by reaſon of the corruption of our nature) that it could make man pure and perfect, and for that it rather kindled the diſeaſe of ſin, than did put it out or extinguiſh it, therefore God cloathed his Son with fleſh like unto our ſinful fleſh, wherein he utterly aboliſhed our corruption, that being accounted thoroughly pure and without fault in him, apprehended and laid hold on by faith, we might be found to have fully that ſingular perfection which the law requireth, and therefore that there might be no condemnation in us.

[f] Which is not proper to the law, but cometh by our fault.

[g] In man not born anew, whoſe diſeaſe the law could point out, but it could not heal it.

[h] Of man's nature which is corrupt through ſin, until he ſanctified it.

[i] To aboliſh ſin in our fleſh.

[l] The very ſubſtance of the law of God might be fulfilled, or that ſame which the law requireth, that we may be found juſt before God. For if with our juſtification there be joined that ſanctification which is imputed to us, we are juſt, according to that perfect form which the law requireth.

[5] He returneth to that which he ſaid: that the ſanctification which is begun in us, is a ſure teſtimony of our ingrafting into Chriſt, which is a moſt plentiful fruit of a godly and honeſt life.

[6] A reaſon why to walk after the fleſh, agreeth not to them which are grafted in Chriſt; but to walk after the Spirit, agreeth and is meet for them: Becauſe, ſaith he, that they which are after the fleſh ſavour the things of the fleſh, but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit.

[m] They that live as the fleſh leadeth them.

[7] He proveth the conſequent, becauſe that whatſoever the fleſh ſavoureth, that engendereth death; and whatſoever the Spirit ſavoureth, that tendeth to joy and life everlaſting.

[8] A reaſon and proof why the wiſdom of the fleſh is death, becauſe, ſaith he, it is the enemy of God.

[9] A reaſon why the fleſh is enemy to God, becauſe it neither will, neither can, be ſubject to him; and by fleſh he meaneth a man not regenerate.

[11] He cometh to the others, to wit, to them which walk after the Spirit, of whom we have to underſtand contrary things to the former. And firſt of all, he defineth what it is to be in the Spirit, or to be ſanctified; to wit, to have the Spirit of God dwelling in us. Then he declareth that ſanctification is ſo joined and knit to our grafting in Chriſt, that it can by no means be ſeparated.

[12] He confirmeth the faithful againſt the relies of fleſh and ſin, granting that they are yet (as appeareth by the corruption which is in them) touching one of their parts (which he calleth the body, that is to ſay, a lump) which is not yet purged from this earthly filthineſs, in death. But therewithal willing them to doubt nothing of the happy ſucceſs of this combat, becauſe that even this little ſpark of the Spirit, (that is, of the grace of regeneration) which appeareth to be in them by the fruits of righteouſneſs, is the ſeed of life.

[n] The fleſh, or all that which as yet ſticketh faſt in the clefts of ſin and death.

[13] A confirmation of the former ſentence. You have the ſelf-ſame Spirit which Chriſt hath: Therefore at length it ſhall do the ſame in you, that it did in Chriſt, to wit, when all infirmities being utterly laid aſide, and death overcome, it ſhall cloath you with heavenly glory.

[o] By the virtue and power of it, which ſhewed the ſame might, firſt in our head, and daily worketh in his members.

[14] An exhortation to oppreſs the fleſh daily more and more by the virtue of the Spirit of regeneration, becauſe (ſaith he) you are debtors unto God, for ſo much as you have received ſo many benefits of him.

[15] Another reaſon of the profit that enſueth: for ſuch as ſtrive and fight valiantly, ſhall have everlaſting life.

[16] A confirmation of this reaſon: for they be the children of God, which are governed by his Spirit, therefore ſhall they have life everlaſting.

[17] He declareth and expoundeth by the way in theſe two verſes, by what right this name, to be called the children of God, is given to the believers, becauſe, ſaith he, they have received the grace of the goſpel, wherein God ſheweth himſelf, not (as before in the publiſhing of the law) terrible and fearful, but a moſt benign and loving Father in Chriſt, ſo that with great boldneſs we call him Father, the Holy Ghoſt ſealing this adoption in our hearts by faith.

[p] By the Spirit, is meant the Holy Ghoſt, whom we are ſaid to receive, when he worketh in our minds.

[q] Which fear is ſtirred up in our minds by the preaching of the law.

[r] Which ſealeth our adoption in our minds, and therefore openeth our mouths.

A. D. 60.

16 The ſame Spirit beareth witneſs with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God.

17 [18] If we be children, we are alſo [s] heirs, even the heirs of God, and heirs annexed with Chriſt: [19] if ſo be that we ſuffer with him, that we may alſo be glorified with him.

18 [20] For I [t] count that the afflictions of this preſent time are not worthy of the glory which ſhall be ſhewed unto us.

19 [21] For the fervent deſire of the [u] creature waiteth when the ſons of God ſhall be revealed:

20 Becauſe the creature is ſubject to [x] vanity, not of its [y] own will, but by reaſon [z] of him which hath ſubdued it under [a] hope:

21 Becauſe the creature alſo ſhall be delivered from the [b] bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God.

22 For we know that every creature groaneth with us alſo, and [c] travaileth in pain together unto this preſent.

23 [22] And not only the creature, but we alſo which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even we do ſigh in our [d] ſelves, waiting for the adoption, even * [e] the redemption of our body.

* Luke 21. 28.

24 [23] For we are ſaved by hope: but [f] hope that is ſeen, is not hope: for how can a man hope for that which he ſeeth?

25 But if we hope for that we ſee not, we do with patience abide for it.

26 [24] Likewiſe the Spirit alſo [g] helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray as we ought: but the Spirit itſelf maketh [h] requeſt for us with ſighs which cannot be expreſſed.

27 But he that ſearcheth the hearts, knoweth what is the [i] meaning of the Spirit: for he maketh requeſt for the ſaints, [k] according to the will of God.

A. D. 60.

28 [25] Alſo we know that [l] all things work together for the beſt unto them that love God, even to them that are called of his [m] purpoſe.

29 For thoſe which he knew before, he alſo predeſtinated to be made like to the image of his Son, that he might be the firſt born among many brethren.

30 Moreover, whom he [n] predeſtinated, them alſo he called: and whom he called, them alſo he juſtified: and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.

31 [26] What ſhall we then ſay to theſe things? If God be on our ſide, who can be againſt us?

32 Who ſpared not his own Son, but gave him for us all to death, how ſhall he not with him [o] give us all things alſo?

33 [27] Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's choſen? it is [p] God that juſtifieth,

34 Who ſhall condemn? it is Chriſt which is dead: yea, or rather, which is riſen again, who is alſo at the right hand of God, and maketh requeſt alſo for us.

35 Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of [q] Chriſt? ſhall tribulation, or anguiſh, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or peril, or ſword?

36 As it is written, * For thy ſake are we killed all day long: we are counted as ſheep for the ſlaughter.

* Pſ. 44. 22.

37 Never-

---

[18] A proof of the conſequent of the confirmation: becauſe that he which is the Son of God, doth enjoy God with Chriſt.

[s] Partakers of our Father's goods, and that freely, becauſe we are children by adoption.

[19] Now Paul teacheth by what way the ſons of God do come to that felicity, to wit, by the croſs, as Chriſt himſelf did: and therewithal openeth unto them fountains of comfort: as firſt that we have Chriſt a companion and fellow of our afflictions: ſecondly, that we ſhall be alſo his fellows in that everlaſting glory.

[20] Thirdly, that this glory which we look for, doth a thouſand parts ſurmount the miſery of our afflictions.

[t] All being well conſidered, I gather.

[21] Fourthly, he plainly teacheth us, that we ſhall certainly be renewed from that confuſion and horrible deformation of the whole world, which cannot be continual, as it was not at the beginning. But as it had a beginning by the ſin of man for whom it was made by the ordinance of God, ſo ſhall it at length be reſtored with the elect.

[y] Not by their natural inclination.

[z] That they ſhould obey the Creator's commandment, whom it pleaſed to ſhew by their fickle ſtate, how greatly he was diſpleaſed with man.

[a] God would not make the world ſubject to everlaſting curſe, for the ſin of man, but gave it in hope that it ſhould be reſtored.

[b] From the corruption which they are now ſubject to, they ſhall be delivered and changed into that bleſſed ſtate of incorruption, which ſhall be revealed, when the ſons of God ſhall be advanced to glory.

[c] By this word is meant, not only exceeding ſorrow, but alſo the fruit that followeth of it.

[22] Fifthly, if the reſt of the world look for a reſtoring, groaning as it were for it, and that not in vain, let it not grieve us alſo to ſigh, yea, let us be more certainly perſuaded of our redemption to come, foraſmuch as we have the firſt-fruits of the Spirit.

[d] Even from the bottom of our hearts.

[e] That laſt reſtoring, which ſhall be the accompliſhment of our adoption.

[23] Sixthly, hope is neceſſarily joined with faith: ſeeing then that we believe thoſe things which we are not yet in poſſeſſion of, and hope reſpecteth not the thing that is preſent, we muſt therefore hope and patiently wait for that which we believe ſhall come to paſs.

[f] This is ſpoken by the figure Metonymia: Hope, for that which is hoped for.

[24] Seventhly, there is no cauſe why we ſhould faint under the burden of afflictions, ſeeing that prayers miniſter unto us a moſt ſure help: which cannot be fruſtrate, ſeeing they proceed from the Spirit of God which dwelleth in us.

[g] Beareth our burden, as it were, that we faint not under it.

[h] Provoketh us to prayers, and telleth us, as it were, within, what we ſhall ſay, and how we ſhall groan.

[i] What ſobs and ſighs proceed from the inſtinct of the Spirit.

[k] Becauſe he teacheth the godly to pray according to God's will.

[25] Eighthly, we are not afflicted either by chance, or to our harm, but by God's providence, for our great profit: who as he choſe us from the beginning, ſo hath he predeſtinate us to be made like to the image of his Son: and therefore will bring us in his time, being called and juſtified, to glory, by the croſs.

[m] He calleth that, Purpoſe, which God hath from everlaſting appointed with himſelf according to his good will and pleaſure.

[n] He uſeth the time paſt for the time preſent, as the Hebrews uſe, who ſometime ſet down the thing that is to come, by the time that is paſt, to ſignify the certainty of it; and he hath alſo a regard to God's continual working.

[26] Ninthly, we have no cauſe to fear that the Lord will not give us whatſoever is profitable for us, ſeeing that he hath not ſpared his own Son to ſave us.

[o] Give us freely.

[27] A moſt glorious and comfortable concluſion of the whole ſecond part of this epiſtle, that is of the treatiſe of juſtification: There are no accuſers that we have need to be afraid of before God, ſeeing that God himſelf abſolveth us as juſt: and therefore much leſs need we to fear damnation, ſeeing that we reſt upon the death and reſurrection of the almighty power and defence of Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore what can there be ſo weighty in this life, or of ſo great force and power, that might fear us, as though we might fall from the love of God, wherewith he loveth us in Chriſt? Surely nothing, ſeeing that it is in itſelf moſt conſtant and ſure, and alſo in us being confirmed by ſtedfaſt faith.

[p] Who pronounceth us not only guiltleſs, but alſo perfectly juſt in his Son.

[q] Wherewith Chriſt loveth us.

A. D. 60.

37 [r] Nevertheleſs, in all theſe things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.

38 For I am perſuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come,

39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.

[r] We are not only not overcome with ſo great and many miſeries and calamities, but alſo more than conquerors in all of them.

[1] The third part of this epiſtle, even to the twelfth chapter, wherein Paul aſcendeth to the higher cauſes of faith: and firſt of all, becauſe he purpoſed to ſpeak much of the caſting off of the Jews, he uſeth an inſinuation, declaring by a double or triple oath, and by witneſſing of his great deſire towards their ſalvation, his ſingular love towards them, and therewithal granting unto them all their prerogatives

[a] The apoſtle loved his brethren ſo entirely, that if it had been poſſible, he would have been ready to have redeemed the caſting away of the Iſraelites with the loſs of his own ſoul for ever: for this word, Separate, betokeneth as much in this place.

[b] Being brethren by fleſh, as of one nation and country.

[c] The ark of the covenant, which was a token of God's preſence.

[f] The ceremonial law.

[g] Which were made to Abraham and to his poſterity.

[2] A moſt manifeſt teſtimony of the Godhead and divinity of Chriſt.

[3] He entereth into the handling of predeſtination, by a kind of preventing an objection: How may it be, that Iſrael is caſt off, but that therewithal we muſt alſo make the covenant which God made with Abraham and his ſeed, fruſtrate and void? He anſwereth therefore, that God's word is true, although that Iſrael be caſt off; for the election of the people of Iſrael is ſo general and common, that notwithſtanding the ſame God chuſeth by his ſecret counſel, ſuch as it pleaſeth him. So then, this is the propoſition and ſtate of this treatiſe: The grace of ſalvation is offered generally in ſuch ſort, that notwithſtanding it, the efficacy thereof pertaineth only to the elect.

[4] The firſt proof is taken from the example of Abraham's own houſe, wherein Iſaac only was accounted the ſon, and that by God's ordinance: although that Iſhmael alſo was born of Abraham, and circumciſed before Iſaac.

[i] Iſaac ſhall be thy true and natural ſon, and therefore heir of the bleſſing.

[5] A general application of the former proof or example.

[k] Which are born of Abraham by the courſe of nature.

[6] A reaſon of that application: becauſe that Iſaac was born by the virtue of the promiſe, and therefore he was not choſen, nay, he was not at all, but by the free will of God: whereby it followeth, that the promiſe is the fountain of predeſtination, and not the fleſh, from which promiſe the particular election proceedeth, that is, that the elect be born elect, and not that they be firſt born, and then after elected in reſpect of God, who doth predeſtinate.

[7] Another forcible proof taken from the example of Eſau and Jacob, which were both born of the ſame Iſaac, which was the ſon of the promiſe, of one mother, and at one birth, and not at divers, as Iſhmael and Iſaac were: and yet notwithſtanding, Eſau being caſt off only, Jacob was choſen: and that before their birth, that neither any goodneſs of Jacob's might be thought to be the cauſe of his election, neither any wickedneſs of Eſau's, of his caſting away.

[m] God's decree which proceedeth of his meer good will, whereby it pleaſeth him to chuſe one, and refuſe the other.

[8] Paul ſaith not, might be made, but, being made might remain. Therefore they are deceived which make foreſeen faith the cauſe of election, and foreknown infidelity the cauſe of reprobation.

[9] He proveth the caſting away of Eſau by that, that he was made ſervant to his brother: and proveth the chuſing of Jacob, by that, that he was made lord of his brother, although his brother was the firſt begotten. And leſt any man might take this ſaying of God, and refer it to external things, the apoſtle ſheweth out of Malachi, who is a good interpreter of Moſes, that the ſervitude of Eſau was joined with the hatred of God, and the lordſhip of Jacob with the love of God.

[10] The firſt objection, If God doth love or hate upon no conſideration of worthineſs, or unworthineſs, then is he unjuſt, becauſe he may love them which are unworthy, and hate them that are worthy. The apoſtle deteſteth this blaſphemy, and afterward anſwereth it ſeverally point by point.

[11] He anſwereth firſt, touching them which are choſen to ſalvation: in the chuſing of whom he denieth that God may ſeem unjuſt, although he chuſe and predeſtinate to ſalvation them that are not yet born, without any reſpect of worthineſs. Becauſe he bringeth not the choſen to the appointed end, but by the means of his mercy, which is a cauſe next under predeſtination. Now mercy preſuppoſeth miſery; and again, miſery preſuppoſeth ſin, or voluntary corruption of mankind; and corruption preſuppoſeth a pure and perfect creation. Moreover, mercy is ſhewed by her degrees; to wit, by calling, by faith, by juſtification and ſanctification, ſo that at length we come to glorification, as the apoſtle will ſhew afterward. Now all theſe things orderly following the purpoſe of God, do clearly prove that he can by no means ſeem unjuſt in loving and ſaving his.

[o] I will be merciful and favourable to whom I liſt to be favourable.

A. D. 60. will have [p] compaſſion on him, on whom I will have compaſſion.

16 [12] So then it is not in him that [q] willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercy.

17 [13] For the [r] ſcripture ſaith unto Pharaoh, * For this ſame purpoſe have I [s] ſtirred thee up, that I might [14] ſhew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth. * Exod. 9. 16.

18 [15] Therefore he hath mercy on whom he [t] will, and whom he will he hardeneth.

19 [16] Thou wilt ſay then unto me, Why doeth he yet complain? for who hath reſiſted his will?

20 [17] But O man, who art thou which pleadeſt againſt God? [18] ſhall the * thing [u] formed ſay to him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus? * Iſa. 45. 9.

21 * [19] Hath not the potter power of the clay, to make of the ſame lump one [20] veſſel to [x] honour, and another unto [21] diſhonour? * Jer. 18. 6. A. D. 60.

22 [22] What, and if God would, to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power known, ſuffer with long patience the [y] veſſels of wrath, prepared to [23] deſtruction?

23 And that he might declare the [z] riches of his glory upon the veſſels of mercy which he hath prepared unto glory?

24 [24] Even us whom he hath called, not of the [a] Jews only, but alſo of the Gentiles.

25 [25] As he ſaith alſo in Hoſea, * I will call them my people, which were not my people: and her beloved, which was not beloved. * Hoſea 2. 23. 1 Pet. 2. 10.

26 And it ſhall be in the place where it was ſaid unto them, * Ye are not my people, that there they ſhall be called, The children of the living God. * Hoſea 1. 10.

27 [26] Alſo Eſaias crieth concerning Iſrael,

[p] I will have compaſſion on whomſoever I will have compaſſion.

[12] The concluſion of the anſwer. Therefore God is not unjuſt in chuſing and ſaving, of his free goodneſs, ſuch as it pleaſeth him; as he alſo anſwered Moſes when he prayed for all the people.

[q] By will, he meaneth the thought and endeavour of heart, and by running, good works, to neither of which he giveth the praiſe, but only to the mercy of God.

[13] Now he anſwereth concerning the reprobate, or them whom God hateth, being not yet born, and hath appointed to deſtruction, without any reſpect of unworthineſs. And firſt of all he proveth this to be true, by alledging the teſtimony of God himſelf touching Pharaoh, whom he ſtirred up to this purpoſe, that he might be glorified in his hardening and juſt puniſhing.

[r] God ſo ſpeaketh unto Pharaoh in the ſcripture, or, the ſcripture bringeth in God, ſo ſpeaking to Pharaoh.

[14] Secondly, he bringeth the end of God's counſel, to ſhew that there is no unrighteouſneſs in him. Now this chiefeſt end is, not properly and ſimply the deſtruction of the wicked, but God's glory which appeareth in their rightful puniſhment.

[15] A concluſion of the full anſwer to the firſt objection. Therefore ſeeing God doth not ſave them whom he freely choſe according to his good will and pleaſure, but by juſtifying and ſanctifying them by his grace, his counſel in ſaving them cannot ſeem unjuſt. And again, there is no injuſtice in the everlaſting counſel of God, touching the deſtruction of them whom he liſteth to deſtroy, for that he hardeneth before he deſtroyeth: therefore the third anſwer for the maintenance of God's juſtice in the everlaſting counſel of reprobation, conſiſteth in this word Hardening: which notwithſtanding he concealed in the former verſe, becauſe the hiſtory of Pharaoh was well known. But the force of the word is great, for hardening, which is ſet againſt mercy, preſuppoſeth the ſame things that mercy did, to wit, a voluntary corruption, wherein the reprobates are hardened: and again, corruption preſuppoſeth a perfect ſtate of creation. Moreover, this hardening alſo is voluntary, for God ſo hardeneth being offended with corruption, that he uſeth their own will whom he hardeneth, to the executing of that judgment. Then follow the fruits of hardening, to wit, unbelief and ſin, which are the true and proper cauſes of the condemnation of the reprobate. Why doth he then appoint to deſtruction? Becauſe he will: Why doth he harden? Becauſe they are corrupt: Why doth he condemn? Becauſe they are ſinners. Where is then unrighteouſneſs? Nay, if he ſhould deſtroy all after this ſort, to whom ſhould he do injury?

[16] Another objection, but only from the reprobate, riſing upon the former anſwer. If God do appoint to everlaſting deſtruction, ſuch as he liſteth, and if that cannot be hindered nor withſtanded, that he hath once decreed, how doth he juſtly condemn them, which periſh by his will?

[17] The apoſtle doth not anſwer that it is not God's will, for that God doth not either reject or elect according to his pleaſure, which thing the wicked call blaſphemy, but he rather granteth his adverſary both the antecedents, to wit, that it is God's will, and that it muſt of neceſſity ſo fall out, yet he denieth that God is therefore to be thought an unjuſt revenger of the wicked: for ſeeing it appeareth by manifeſt proof, that this is the will of God, and his doing, what impudency is it for man, which is but duſt and aſhes, to diſpute with God, and as it were to call him into judgment? Now if any man ſay that the doubt is not ſo diſſolved and anſwered, I anſwer, that there is no ſurer demonſtration in any matter, becauſe it is grounded upon this principle, That the will of God is the rule of righteouſneſs.

[18] An amplification of the former anſwer, taken from a compariſon, whereby alſo it appeareth that God's determinate counſel is ſet of Paul the higheſt of all cauſes: ſo that it dependeth not upon any reſpect of the ſecond cauſes, but doth rather frame and direct them.

[u] This ſimilitude agreeth very fitly to the firſt creation of mankind.

[19] Alluding to the creation of Adam, he compareth mankind not yet made, (but in the Creator's mind) to a lump of clay: whereof afterward God made, and doth daily make according as he purpoſed from everlaſting, both ſuch as ſhould be elect, and ſuch as ſhould be reprobate, as alſo this word, Making, declareth.

[20] Whereas in the objection propounded, mention was only made of veſſels to diſhonour, yet he ſpeaketh of the other alſo in this anſwer, for that he proveth the Creator to be juſt in either of them, as the rule of contraries requireth.

[21] Seeing then that in the name of diſhonour, the ignominy of everlaſting death is ſignified, they ſpeak with Paul which ſay, that ſome are made of God to moſt juſt deſtruction, and they that are offended with this kind of ſpeech bewray their own folly.

[22] The ſecond anſwer is this, that God, moreover and beſides that he doth juſtly decree whatſoever he doth decree, uſeth that moderation in executing of his decrees, as declareth his ſingular lenity even in the reprobate, in that that he ſuffereth them a long time, and permitteth them to enjoy many and ſingular benefits, until at length he juſtly condemn them: and that to good end and purpoſe, to wit, to ſhew himſelf to be an enemy and revenger of wickedneſs, that it may appear what power he is of by theſe ſevere judgments, and finally by compariſon of contraries to ſet forth indeed, how great his mercy is towards the elect.

[23] Therefore again, we may ſay with Paul, that ſome men are made of God the Creator to deſtruction.

[z] The unmeaſurable and marvellous greatneſs.

[24] Having eſtabliſhed the doctrine of the eternal predeſtination of God on both parts, that is, as well of the reprobate as of the elect, he cometh now to ſhew the uſe of it, teaching us that we ought not to ſeek the teſtimony of it in the ſecret counſel of God, but by the vocation which is made manifeſt, and ſet forth in the church, propounding unto us the example of the Jews and Gentiles, that the doctrine may be better perceived.

[a] He ſaith not that all and every one of the Jews are called, but ſome of the Jews, and ſome of the Gentiles.

[25] Our vocation or calling is free, and of grace, even as our predeſtination is; and therefore there is no cauſe why either our own unworthineſs, or the unworthineſs of our anceſtors, ſhould cauſe us to think that we are not the elect and choſen of God, if we be called of him, and ſo embrace through faith the ſalvation that is offered us.

[26] Contrariwiſe, Neither any outward general calling, neither any worthineſs of our anceſtors, is a ſufficient witneſs of election, unleſs by faith and belief we anſwer God's calling: which things came to paſs in the Jews, as the Lord had forewarned.

* Iſa. 20 21.

* Though the number of the children of Iſrael were as the ſand of the ſea, yet ſhall but a remnant be ſaved.

28 For he will make his account, and gather it into a [b] ſhort ſum with righteouſneſs: for the Lord will make a ſhort account in the earth.

* Iſa. 1. 9.

29 * And as Eſaias ſaid before, Except the Lord of [c] hoſts had left us a [d] ſeed, we had been made as Sodom, and had been like to Gomorrah.

30 [27] What ſhall we ſay then? That the Gentiles, which followed [e] not righteouſneſs, have attained unto righteouſneſs, even the righteouſneſs which is of faith:

31 [28] But Iſrael, which followed the law of righteouſneſs, could not attain unto the law of righteouſneſs.

32 Wherefore? Becauſe they ſought it not by faith, but as it were by the [f] works of the law: for they have ſtumbled at the ſtumbling-ſtone.

BRETHREN, [1] mine heart's deſire and prayer to God for Iſrael is, that they might be ſaved.

2 For I bear them record, that they have the zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 [2] For they, [a] being ignorant of the righteouſneſs of God, and going about to [b] eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves to the righteouſneſs of God.

* Deut. 30. 14.

8 [5] But what ſaith it? * The [f] word is near thee, even in thy mouth, and in thine heart. This is the word of faith which we preach.

15 And how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? as it is written, * How beautiful are the feet of them which bring glad tidings of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

[b] God purpoſeth to bring the unkind and unthankful people to an extreme fewneſs.

[c] Armies, by which word the chiefeſt power that is, is given to God.

[d] Even a very few.

[27] The declaration and manifeſtation of our election, is our calling, apprehended by faith, as it came to paſs in the Gentiles.

[e] So then the Gentiles had no works to prepare and procure God's mercy beforehand. And as for that that the Gentiles attained to that which they ſought not for, the mercy of God is to be thanked for it; and in that the Jews attained not to that which they ſought after, they can thank none for it but themſelves, becauſe they ſought it not aright.

[28] The pride of men is the cauſe that they contemn vocation, ſo that the cauſe of their damnation need not be ſought for any other where but in themſelves.

[f] Seeking to come by righteouſneſs, they followed the law of righteouſneſs.

[1] Purpoſing to ſet forth in the Jews an example of marvellous obſtinacy, he uſeth an inſinuation.

[2] The firſt entrance into the vocation unto ſalvation, is to renounce our own righteouſneſs: the next is, to embrace that righteouſneſs by faith, which God freely offereth us in the goſpel.

[a] The ignorance of the law which we ought to know, excuſeth none before God, eſpecially it excuſeth not them that are of his houſhold.

[b] Ignorance hath always pride joined with it.

[3] The proof: The law itſelf hath reſpect unto Chriſt, that ſuch as believe in him ſhould be ſaved. Therefore the calling to ſalvation by the works of the law, is vain and fooliſh: but Chriſt is offered for ſalvation to every believer.

[c] The end of the law is, to juſtify them that keep the law: but ſeeing we do not obſerve the law, through the fault of our fleſh, we attain not unto this end: but Chriſt ſalveth this diſeaſe, for he fulfilled the law for us.

[d] Not only to the Jews, but alſo to the Gentiles.

[4] That the law regardeth and tendeth to Chriſt, this is a manifeſt proof, for that it propoundeth ſuch a condition as can be and is fulfilled of none but of Chriſt only: which being imputed unto us by faith, our conſcience is quieted, ſo that now no man can aſk, Who can aſcend up into heaven, or bring us from hell, ſeeing the goſpel teacheth that both of theſe is done by Chriſt, and that for their ſakes, which with true faith embrace him which calleth them.

[5] Vocation cometh by the word preached.

[f] By the word, Moſes underſtood the law which the Lord publiſhed with his own voice: and Paul applieth it to the preaching of the goſpel, which was the perfection of the law.

[6] That is indeed true faith, which is ſettled not only in the head, but alſo in the heart of man, whereof alſo we give teſtimony by our outward life, and which tendeth to Chriſt as to our alone and only Saviour, even as he ſetteth forth himſelf in his word.

[g] If thou profeſs plainly, ſincerely, and openly, that thou takeſt Jeſus only to be thy Lord and Saviour.

[h] The Father, who is ſaid to have raiſed the Son from the dead: and this is not ſpoken to ſhut out the divinity, of the Son, but to ſet forth the Father's counſel touching our redemption in the reſurrection of the Son.

[i] Faith is ſaid to juſtify, and furthermore ſeeing the confeſſion of the mouth is an effect of faith, and confeſſion is the way to come to ſalvation, it followeth that faith is alſo ſaid to ſave.

[7] Now he proveth the other part which he propounded afore in the fourth verſe, to wit, that Chriſt calleth whomſoever he liſteth, without any difference, and this he confirmeth by a double teſtimony.

[k] To believe in God, is to yield and conſent to God's promiſe of our ſalvation by Chriſt, and that not only in general, but when we know that the promiſes pertain to us, whereupon riſeth a ſure truſt.

[8] True calling upon the name of God is the teſtimony of true faith; and true faith, of true vocation or calling; and true calling, of true election.

[9] That is, true faith, which ſeeketh God in his word, and that preached, according as God hath appointed in the church.

2 [3] God hath not caſt away his people which he [a] knew before. [4] Know ye not what the ſcripture ſaith of Elias, how he communeth with God againſt Iſrael, ſaying,

6 [5] And if it be of grace, it is [e] no more of works: or elſe were grace no more grace: but if it be of works, it is no more grace, or elſe were work no more work.

10 Let their eyes be darkened that they ſee not, and bow down their back always.

11 [7] I demand then, Have they ſtumbled, that they ſhould fall? God forbid: but through their fall, ſalvation cometh unto the Gentiles, to provoke them to follow them.

12 Where-

[10] Whereſoever faith is, there is alſo the word; but not contrariwiſe, whereſoever the word is, there is faith alſo: for many refuſe and reject the word.

[l] He ſpeaketh this, becauſe of the Jews.

[11] A concluſion of the former gradation: we muſt aſcend from faith to our vocation, as by our vocation we came to the teſtimony of our election.

[m] By God's commandment.

[12] An objection: If calling be a teſtimony of election, were not the Jews called? why ſhould I not grant that, ſaith the apoſtle, ſeeing that there is no nation which hath not been called? much leſs can I ſay, that the Jews were not called.

[13] The defender and maintainer of the Jews cauſe, goeth on ſtill to aſk, whether the Jews alſo knew not God which called them? Iſaiah (ſaith the apoſtle) denieth it: and witneſſeth that the goſpel was tranſlated from them to the Gentiles, becauſe the Jews neglected it. And therewithal the apoſtle teacheth, that that outward and univerſal calling, which is ſet forth by the creation of the world, ſufficeth not to the knowledge of God: yea, and that the particular alſo which is by the word of God, is of itſelf of ſmall or no efficacy, unleſs it be apprehended or laid hold on by faith, by the gift of God: otherwiſe by unbelief it is made unprofitable, and that by the only fault of man, who can pretend no ignorance.

[n] He calleth all prophane people, a nation that is no nation, as they are not ſaid to live but to die, which are appointed for everlaſting condemnation.

[o] Speaketh without fear.

[1] Now the apoſtle ſheweth how this doctrine is to be applied to others, abiding ſtill in his propounded cauſe. Therefore he teacheth us, that all the Jews in particular are not caſt away, and therefore we ought not to pronounce raſhly of private perſons, whether they be of the number of the elect, or not.

[2] The firſt proof: I am a Jew, and yet elected, therefore we may, and ought, fully to reſolve upon our election, as hath been before ſaid: but of another man's we cannot be ſo certainly reſolved, and yet ours may cauſe us to hope well of others.

[3] The ſecond proof: Becauſe that God is faithful in his league or covenant, although men be unfaithful: ſo then, ſeeing that God hath ſaid, that he will be the God of his unto a thouſand generations, we muſt take heed, that we think not that the whole race and offſpring is caſt off, by reaſon of the unbelief of a few, but rather that we hope well of every member of the church, becauſe of God's league and covenant.

[4] The third proof taken from the anſwer that was made to Elias: even then alſo, when there appeared openly to the face of the world no elect, yet God knew his elect and choſen, and of them alſo great ſtore and number. Whereupon this alſo is concluded, that we ought not raſhly to pronounce of any man as of a reprobate, ſeeing that the church is oftentimes brought to that ſtate, that even the moſt watchful and ſharp-ſighted paſtors think it to be clean extinct and put out.

[b] He ſpeaketh of remnants and reſerved people which were choſen from everlaſting, and not of remnants that ſhould be choſen afterward, for they are not choſen, becauſe they were not idolaters: but therefore they were not idolaters, becauſe they were choſen and elect.

[c] Baal ſignifieth as much, as maſter, or patron, or one in whoſe power another is, which name the idolaters at this day give their idols, naming them Patrons and Patroneſſes, or Ladies.

[d] The election of grace is, not whereby men choſe grace, but whereby God choſe us of his grace and goodneſs.

[5] Although that all be not elect and choſen, yet let them that are elected, remember that they are freely choſen: and let them that ſtubbornly refuſe the grace and free mercy of God, impute it unto themſelves.

[e] This ſaying, beateth down flat to the ground all the doctrine of all kinds and manner of works, whereby our juſtifiers of themſelves do teach, that works are either wholly, or partly, the cauſe of our juſtification.

[f] Look Mark 3. 5.

[6] And yet this hardneſs of heart cometh not but by God's juſt decree and judgment, and yet without fault, when as he ſo puniſheth the unthankful by taking from them all ſenſe and perſeverance, and by doubling their darkneſs, that the benefits of God which are offered unto them, do redound to their juſt deſtruction.

[g] A very dead ſleep, which taketh away all ſenſe.

[h] That is, eyes unfit to ſee.

[i] As unhappy birds are enticed to death by that which is their ſuſtenance, ſo did that only thing turn to the Jews deſtruction, out of which they ſought life, to wit, the law of God, for the prepoſterous zeal whereof, they refuſed the goſpel.

[7] God appointed this caſting-off of the Jews, that it might be an occaſion to call the Gentiles: and again, might turn this calling of the Gentiles, to be an occaſion to reſtore the Jews, to wit, that they being inflamed and provoked by emulation of the Gentiles, might themſelves at length embrace

A. D. 60.

12 Wherefore if the fall of them be the [k] riches of the world, and the diminiſhing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more ſhall their [l] abundance be?

13 [8] For in that I ſpeak to you Gentiles, inaſmuch as I am the apoſtle of the Gentiles: [m] I magnify mine office,

14 To try if by any means I might provoke them of my fleſh to follow them, and might ſave ſome of them.

15 For if the caſting-away of them be the reconciling of the world, what ſhall the receiving be, [n] but life from the dead?

16 [9] For if the [o] firſt fruits be holy, ſo is the whole lump: and if the root [p] be holy, ſo are the branches.

17 * [10] And though ſome of the branches be broken off, and thou being a wild olive-tree, waſt grafted [q] in for them, and made [r] partaker of the root and fatneſs of the olive-tree:

* Jer. 11. 6.

18 [s] Boaſt not thyſelf againſt the branches: and if thou boaſt thyſelf, thou beareſt not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt ſay then, The branches are broken off, that I might be grafted in.

20 Well: through unbelief they are broken off, and thou ſtandeſt by faith: be not high-minded, but [t] fear.

21 For if God ſpared not the [u] natural branches, take heed, leſt he alſo ſpare not thee.

22 [11] Behold therefore the [x] bountifulneſs and ſeverity of God: toward them which have fallen, ſeverity: but toward thee, bountifulneſs, if thou continue in his [y] bountifulneſs: or elſe thou ſhalt alſo be cut off.

A. D. 60.

23 [12] And they alſo, if they abide not ſtill in unbelief, ſhall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again.

24 For if thou waſt cut out of the olive-tree, which was wild by [z] nature, and waſt grafted contrary to nature in a [a] right olive tree, how much more ſhall they that are by nature, be grafted in their own olive-tree?

25 [13] For I would not, brethren, that ye ſhould be ignorant of this ſecret (leſt ye ſhould be arrogant in [b] yourſelves) that partly obſtinacy is come to Iſrael, until the fulneſs of the Gentiles be [c] come in.

26 And ſo all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, as it is written, * The deliverer ſhall come out of Sion, and ſhall turn away the ungodlineſs from Jacob.

* Iſa. 59. 20.

27 And this is my covenant with them, * When I ſhall take away their ſins.

* Iſa. 27. 9.

28 [14] As concerning the [d] goſpel, they are enemies for your ſakes: but as touching the [e] election, they are beloved for the Father's ſake.

29 [15] For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

brace the goſpel. And hereby we may learn, that the ſeverity of God ſerveth as well to the ſetting-forth of his glory, as his mercy doth, and alſo that God prepareth himſelf a way to mercy, by his ſeverity: ſo that we ought not raſhly to deſpair of any man, nor proudly triumph over other men, but rather to provoke them to an holy emulation, that God may be glorified in them alſo.

[k] By riches, he meaneth the knowledge of the goſpel to everlaſting life: and by the world, all nations diſperſed throughout the whole world.

[l] Of the Jews, when the whole nation, without exception, ſhall come to Chriſt.

[8] He witneſſeth by his own example, that he goeth before all other in this behalf.

[m] I make noble and famous.

[n] It ſhall come to paſs that when the Jews come to the goſpel, the world ſhall, as it were, quicken again, and riſe up from death to life.

[9] The nation of the Jews being conſidered in their ſtock, and root, that is, in Abraham, is holy, although that many of the branches be cut off. Therefore in judging of our brethren, we muſt not ſtick in their unworthineſs, to think that they are at once all caſt off, but we ought to conſider the root of the covenant, and rather go back to their anceſtors which were faithful, that we may know that the bleſſing of the covenant reſteth in ſome of their poſterity, as we alſo find proof hereof in ourſelves.

[o] He alludeth to the firſt-fruits of thoſe loaves, by the offering whereof all the whole crop of corn was ſanctified. And they might uſe the reſt of the year following with good conſcience.

[p] Abraham.

[10] There is no cauſe why the Gentiles which have obtained mercy, ſhould triumph over the Jews which contemn the grace of God, ſeeing they are grafted into the Jews anceſtors. But let them rather take heed, that that alſo be not found in them which is worthily condemned in the Jews. And hereof alſo this general doctrine may be gathered and taken, that we ought to be ſtudious of God's glory, even in reſpect of our neighbours: ſo far ought we to be from bragging and glorying, for that, that we are preferred before other by a ſingular grace.

[q] In place of theſe boughs which are broken off.

[r] It is againſt the common courſe of huſbandry, that the barren juice of the imp is changed with the juice of the good tree.

[s] We may rejoice in the Lord, but ſo that we deſpiſe not the Jews, whom we ought rather to provoke to that good ſtriving with us.

[t] See that thou ſtand in awe of God modeſtly and carefully.

[u] He calleth them natural, not becauſe they had any holineſs of nature, but becauſe they were born of them whom the Lord ſet apart for himſelf from other nations, by his league and covenant, which he freely made with them.

[11] Seeing the matter itſelf declareth that election cometh not by inheritance (although the fault be in men, and not in God, why the bleſſing of God is not perpetual) we muſt take good heed that that be not found in ourſelves, which we think blame-worthy in others; for the election is ſure, but they that are truly elect and ingrafted, are not proud in themſelves with contempt of other, but with due reverence to God, and love towards their neighbour, run to the mark which is ſet before them

[x] The tender and living heart.

[y] In that ſtate which God's bountifulneſs hath advanced thee unto; and we muſt mark here, that he ſpeaketh not of the election of every private man, which remaineth ſtedfaſt for ever, but of the election of the whole nation.

[12] Many are now for a ſeaſon cut off, that is, are without the root, which in their time ſhall be grafted in: and again there are a great ſort, which after a ſort, and touching the outward ſhew, ſeem to be ingrafted, which notwithſtanding through their own fault, afterward are cut off, and clean caſt away: which thing is eſpecially to be conſidered in nations and people, as in the Gentiles and Jews.

[z] Underſtand nature, not as it was firſt made, but as it was corrupted in Adam, and ſo derived from him to his poſterity.

[a] Into the people of the Jews, which God had ſanctified of his mere grace: and he ſpeaketh of the whole nation, not of every one apart.

[13] The blindneſs of the Jews is neither ſo univerſal that the Lord hath no elect in that nation, neither ſhall it be continual: for there ſhall be a time wherein they alſo (as the prophets have forewarned) ſhall effectually embrace that which they do now ſo ſtubbornly, for the moſt part, reject and refuſe.

[b] That ye be not proud within yourſelves.

[c] Into the church.

[14] Again, that he may join the Jews and Gentiles together as it were in one body, and eſpecially may teach what duty the Gentiles owe to the Jews, he beateth this into their heads, that the nation of the Jews is not utterly caſt off without hope of recovery.

[d] Foraſmuch as they receive it not.

[e] In that God reſpecteth not what they deſerve, but what he promiſed to Abraham.

[15] The reaſon or proof: becauſe the covenant made with that nation, of life everlaſting, cannot be fruſtrate and vain.

[16] Another reaſon; becauſe that although they which are hardened, are worthily puniſhed, yet hath not this ſtubbornneſs of the Jews ſo come to paſs properly for an hatred to that nation, but that an entry might be, as it were, opened

A. D. 60. believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief.

31 Even ſo now have they not believed by the mercy ſhewed unto you, that they alſo may obtain mercy.

32 For God hath ſhut up [f] all in unbelief, that he might have mercy on all.

33 [17] O the deepneſs of the riches, both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his [g] judgments, and his [h] ways paſt finding out!

34 * [18] For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who was his counſellor? * Job 41. 2. Iſa. 40. 13. 1 Cor. 2. 16.

35 Or who hath given unto him [i] firſt, and he ſhall be recompenſed?

CHAP. XII.

1 He exhorteth 2 to that worſhip which is acceptable to God: 9 to love unfeigned, 14, 20 even towards our enemies.

I Beſeech [1] you therefore, brethren, [a] by the mercies of God, that ye [b] give up your [c] bodies a [d] living ſacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your [e] reaſonable ſerving of God.

2 [2] And faſhion not yourſelves like unto this world, but be ye changed by the renewing of your [f] mind, that ye may * prove what that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God is. * Eph. 5. 17. 1 Theſſ. 4. 3.

3 [3] For I [g] ſay through the grace that is given unto me, to every one that is among you, that no man [h] preſume to underſtand above that which is meet to underſtand, but that he underſtand according to [i] ſobriety, as God hath dealt to every man the * meaſure of [k] faith. * 1 Cor. 12. 11. 4 [4] For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not one office,

5 So we being many, have one body in Chriſt, and every one, one another's members.

6 * [5] Seeing then that we have gifts that are divers, according to the grace that is given unto us, whether we have prophecy, let us propheſy according to the [l] portion of faith: * 1 Pet. 4. 10.

opened to bring in the Gentiles, and afterward the Jews, being inflamed with emulation of that mercy which is ſhewed to the Gentiles, might themſelves alſo be partakers of the ſame benefit, and ſo it might appear that both Jews and Gentiles are ſaved only by the free mercy and grace of God, which could not have been ſo manifeſt, if at the beginning God had brought altogether into the church, or if he had ſaved the nation of the Jews without this interruption.

[f] Both Jews and Gentiles.

[17] The apoſtle crieth out as aſtoniſhed with this wonderful wiſdom of God, which he teacheth us, ought to be religiouſly reverenced, and not curiouſly and profanely to be ſearched beyond the compaſs of that that God hath revealed unto us.

[g] The courſe that he holdeth in governing all things both generally and particularly.

[h] The order of his counſels and doings.

[18] He bridleth three manner of ways, the wicked boldneſs of man: firſt, becauſe that God is above all moſt wiſe, and therefore it is very abſurd, and plainly godleſs to meaſure him by our folly. Moreover, becauſe he is debtor to no man, and therefore no man can complain of injury done unto him. Thirdly, becauſe all things are made for his glory, and therefore we muſt refer all things to his glory, much leſs may we contend and debate the matter with him.

[i] This ſaying overthroweth the doctrine of foreſeen works and merits.

[k] To wit, for God, to whoſe glory all things are referred, not only things that were made, but eſpecially his new works which he worketh in his elect.

[1] The fourth part of this epiſtle, which after the finiſhing of the chief points of Chriſtian doctrine, conſiſteth in declaring of precepts of Chriſtian life. And firſt of all, he giveth general precepts and grounds: the chiefeſt whereof is this, that every man conſecrate himſelf wholly to the ſpiritual ſervice of God, and do as it were ſacrifice himſelf, truſting to the grace of God.

[a] By this preface he ſheweth that God's glory is the utmoſt end of all our doings.

[b] In times paſt the ſacrifices were preſented before the altar: but now the altar is every where.

[c] Yourſelves: in times paſt, other bodies than our own, now our own muſt be offered.

[d] In times paſt, dead ſacrifices were offered, but now we muſt offer ſuch as have the Spirit of life in them.

[2] The ſecond precept is this, That we take not other men's opinions or manners for a rule of life, but that we wholly renouncing this world, ſet before us as a mark the will of God, as it is manifeſted and opened unto us in his word.

[f] Why then there is no place left for reaſon, which the heathen philoſophers place as a queen in a caſtle, nor for man's free will, which the popiſh ſchoolmen dream on, if the mind muſt be renewed. Look Epheſ. 1. 18. and 2. 3. and 4. 17. and Coloſſ. 1. 21.

[3] Thirdly, he admoniſheth us very earneſtly, that every man keep himſelf within the bounds of his vocation, and that every man be wiſe according to the meaſure of grace that God hath given him.

[g] I charge.

[h] That he pleaſe not himſelf too much, as they do which perſuade themſelves they know more than indeed they do.

[i] We ſhall be ſober, if we take not that upon us which we have not, and if we brag not of that we have.

[k] By faith he meaneth the knowledge of God in Chriſt, and the gifts which the Holy Ghoſt poureth upon the faithful.

[4] There is a double reaſon of the precept going afore: the one is, becauſe God hath not committed every thing to be done of every man: and therefore he doth backwardly, and not only unprofitably, but alſo to the great diſprofit of others, wearieth himſelf and others, which paſſeth the bounds of his vocation: the other is, for that this diverſity and inequality of vocations and gifts redoundeth to our commodity: ſeeing that the ſame is therefore inſtituted and appointed, that we ſhould be bound one to another. Whereupon it followeth, that no man ought to be grieved thereat, ſeeing that the uſe of every private gift is common.

[5] That which he ſpake before in general, he applieth particularly to the holy functions, wherein men offend with great danger. And he divideth them into two ſorts: to wit, into prophets and deacons: and again, he divideth the prophets into doctors and paſtors. And of deacons he maketh three ſorts: to wit, the one to be ſuch as are (as it were) treaſurers of the church-coffers, whom he calleth properly deacons: the other to be the governors of the diſcipline, who are called Seniors, or Elders: the third, to be ſuch as properly ſerved in the help of the poor, of which ſort the company of widows were.

[l] That every man obſerve the meaſure of that which is revealed unto him.

[m] Whoſe office is only to expound the ſcriptures.

[n] Who in other places is called the paſtor.

[o] To wit, the alms, that he diſtribute them without reſpect of perſon.

[p] The elders of the church.

[q] They that are buſied about tending on the poor, muſt do it with chearfulneſs, leſt they add ſorrow to ſorrow.

[6] Now he cometh to the duties of the ſecond table, which he deriveth from charity, which is, as it were, the fountain of them all. And he defineth Chriſtian charity, by ſincerity, hatred of evil, earneſt ſtudy of good things, good affection to help our neighbour, and whoſe final end is the glory of God.

3 [4] For magiſtrates are not to be feared for good works, but for evil. [5] Wilt thou then be without fear of the power? Do well: ſo ſhalt thou have praiſe of the ſame.

4 For he is the miniſter of God for thy wealth: [6] but if thou do evil, fear: for he beareth not the ſword for nought: for he is the miniſter of God to [c] take vengeance on him that doeth evil.

5 [7] Wherefore ye muſt be ſubject, not becauſe of wrath only, but [d] alſo for conſcience ſake.

[r] This piece is well put in, for it maketh difference between chriſtian duties and philoſophical duties.

[7] He reckoneth up divers other virtues together with their effects, to wit, hope, patience in tribulation, equanimity, continuance in prayer, liberality toward the ſaints, hoſpitality, moderation of mind even in helping our enemies, a ſelf-ſame feeling with others, as well in adverſity as proſperity, modeſty, endeavour to maintain honeſt concord, ſo nigh as we may, with all men, which cannot be extinguiſhed by any man's injuries.

[s] A true rule of charity, when we are no leſs touched with other men's wants, than with our own, and having that feeling, help them as much as we can.

[t] Not upon pleaſures and needleſs duties, but upon neceſſary uſes.

[u] There is nothing that doth ſo much break concord as ambition, when as every man loatheth a baſe eſtate, and ſeeketh ambitiouſly to be aloft.

[x] Be not puffed up with opinion of your own wiſdom.

[y] After this ſort doth Solomon point out the wrath of God that hangeth over a man.

[1] Now he ſheweth ſeverally, what ſubjects owe to their magiſtrates, to wit, obedience: From which he ſheweth that no man is free: and in ſuch ſort that it is not only due to the higheſt magiſtrate himſelf, but alſo even to the baſeſt, which hath any office under him.

[a] Yea, though an apoſtle, though an evangeliſt, though a prophet: Chryſoſtom. Therefore the tyranny of the pope over all kingdoms muſt down to the ground.

[2] A reaſon taken of the nature of the thing itſelf: for to what purpoſe are they placed in higher degree, but that the inferior ſhould be ſubject unto them?

[3] Another argument of great force: becauſe God is author of this order; ſo that ſuch as are rebels ought to know, that they make war with God himſelf: wherefore they cannot but purchaſe to themſelves great miſery and calamity.

[b] Be diſtributed: for ſome are greater, ſome ſmaller.

[4] The third argument, taken from the end wherefore they were made, which is moſt profitable: for that God by this means preſerveth the good, and bridleth the wicked: by which words, the magiſtrates themſelves are put in mind of that duty which they owe to their ſubjects.

[5] An excellent way to bear this yoke, not only without grief, but alſo with great profit.

[6] God hath armed the magiſtrate even with a revenging ſword.

[c] By whom God revengeth the wicked.

[7] The concluſion: we muſt obey the magiſtrate, not only for fear of puniſhment, but much more becauſe that (although the magiſtrate hath no power over the conſcience of man, yet ſeeing he is God's miniſter) he cannot be reſiſted by any good conſcience.

[d] So far as lawfully we may: for if unlawful things be commanded us, we muſt anſwer as Peter teacheth us, It is better to obey God than men.

[8] He reckoneth up the chiefeſt things wherein conſiſteth the obedience of ſubjects.

[e] Obedience, and that from the heart.

[f] Reverence, which (as reaſon is) we muſt give to the magiſtrate.

[9] He ſheweth how very few judgments need to be executed, to wit, if we ſo order our life as no man may juſtly require any thing of us, beſides that only that we owe one to another by the perpetual law of charity.

[10] He commendeth charity as an abridgment of the whole law.

[g] He hath not only done one commandment, but performed generally that which the law commandeth.

[h] For the whole law commandeth nothing elſe, but that we love God, and our neighbour. But ſeeing Paul ſpeaketh here of the duties we owe one to another, we muſt reſtrain this word, Law, to the ſecond table.

[11] An amplification taken of the circumſtance of the time: which alſo itſelf putteth us in mind of our duty, ſeeing that this remaineth, after that the darkneſs of ignorance and wicked affections by the knowledge of God's truth be driven out of us, that we order our life according to that certain and ſure rule of all righteouſneſs and honeſty, being fully grounded upon the virtue of the Spirit of Chriſt.

[i] In other places we are ſaid to be in the light, but yet ſo, that it appeareth not as yet what we are, for as yet we ſee but as it were in the twilight.

A. D. 60. let us therefore caſt away the works of [k] darkneſs, and let us put on the armour of light, 13 So that we walk honeſtly, as in the day: not in * gluttony, and drunkenneſs, neither in chambering and wantonneſs, nor in ſtrife and envying: * Luke 21. 34.

14 * But [l] put ye on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and take no thought for the fleſh, to fulfil the luſts of it. * Gal. 5. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 11.

CHAP. XIV.

3 He willeth that we ſo deal with the weak in faith, 10 that through our fault they be not offended, 15 and on the other ſide he commandeth them not raſhly to judge of the ſtranger: 19 That within the bounds of edification, 20 and charity, 22 Chriſtian liberty may conſiſt.

HIM [1] that is weak in the faith, [a] receive unto you, but not for [b] controverſies of diſputations.

2 [2] One [c] believeth that he may eat of all things: and another, which is weak, eateth herbs.

3 [3] Let not him that eateth, deſpiſe him that eateth not: and let not him which eateth not, condemn him that eateth: for [4] God hath received him.

4 * [5] Who art thou that condemneſt another man's ſervant? he ſtandeth or falleth to his own maſter: yea, he ſhall be eſtabliſhed: for God is able to make him ſtand. * James 4. 12.

5 [6] This man eſteemeth one day above another day, and another man counteth every day alike: [7] let [d] every man be fully perſuaded in his mind.

6 [8] He that [e] obſerveth the day, obſerveth it to the Lord: and he that obſerveth not the day, obſerveth it not to the [f] Lord. He that [g] eateth, eateth to the Lord, [9] for he giveth God thanks: and he that eateth [h] not, eateth not to the Lord, and giveth God thanks.

7 [10] For none of us liveth to [i] himſelf, neither doth any die to himſelf:

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord: or whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For Chriſt therefore died, and roſe again, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and the quick.

10 [11] But why doeſt thou condemn thy brother? or why doeſt thou deſpiſe thy brother? * for we ſhall all appear before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt. * 2 Cor. 5. 10.

11 For it is written, * I [k] live, ſaith the Lord: and every knee ſhall bow to me, and all tongues ſhall [l] confeſs unto God, * Iſa. 45. 23. Phil. 2. 10.

12 So

[k] That kind of life which they lead, that flee the light.

[l] To put on Chriſt, is to poſſeſs Chriſt, to have him in us, and us in him.

[1] Now he ſheweth how we ought to behave ourſelves toward our brethren in matters and things indifferent, offending in the uſe of them, not of malice, or damnable ſuperſtition, but for lack of knowledge of the benefit of Chriſt. And thus he teacheth that they are to be inſtructed gently, and patiently, and ſo that we apply ourſelves to their ignorance in ſuch matters, according to the rule of charity.

[a] Do not for a matter or thing that is indifferent, and ſuch as you may do or not do, ſhun his company, but take him to you.

[b] To make him by your doubtful and uncertain diſputations, go away more in doubt than he came, or ſtart back with a troubled conſcience.

[2] He propoundeth for an example the difference of meats, which ſome thought was neceſſary to be obſerved, as a thing preſcribed by the law (not knowing that it was taken away) whereas on the contrary ſide, ſuch as had profited in the knowledge of the goſpel, knew well that this ſchoolmaſterſhip of the law was aboliſhed.

[c] Knoweth by faith.

[3] In ſuch a matter, ſaith the apoſtle, let neither them which know their liberty, proudly deſpiſe their weak brother, neither let the unlearned crabbedly or frowardly condemn that that they underſtand not.

[4] The firſt reaſon: becauſe that ſeeing both he that eateth and he that eateth not, is notwithſtanding the member of Chriſt: neither he which eateth not, can juſtly be contemned; neither he which eateth, be juſtly condemned: now the firſt propoſition is declared in the ſixth verſe following.

[5] Another reaſon which hangeth upon the former: why the ruder and more unlearned ought not to be condemned of the more ſkilful, as men without hope of ſalvation: becauſe, ſaith the apoſtle, he that is ignorant to-day, may be indued to-morrow with further knowledge, ſo that he may alſo ſtand ſure: therefore it belongeth to God and not unto man, to pronounce that ſentence of condemnation.

[6] Another example of the difference of days according to the law.

[7] He ſetteth againſt this contempt, and haſty or raſh judgments, a continual deſire to profit, that the ſtrong may be certainly perſuaded of their liberty, of what manner and ſort it is, and how they ought to uſe it: and again the weak may daily profit, leſt either they abuſe the gift of God, or theſe pleaſe themſelves in their infirmity.

[d] That he may ſay in his conſcience, that he knoweth and is perſuaded by Jeſus Chriſt, that nothing is unclean of itſelf, and this perſuaſion muſt be grounded upon the word of God.

[8] A reaſon taken from the nature of indifferent things, which a man may with a good conſcience do, and omit: for ſeeing that the difference of days and meats was appointed by God, how could they which as yet underſtood not the abrogating of the law, and yet otherwiſe acknowledged Chriſt as their Saviour, with good conſcience neglect that which they knew was commanded of God? And on the contrary ſide, they that knew the benefit of Chriſt in this behalf, did with good conſcience neither obſerve days nor meats: Therefore ſaith the apoſtle, verſe 10. Let not the ſtrong condemn the weak for theſe things, ſeeing that the weak brethren are brethren notwithſtanding. Now if any man would draw this doctrine to theſe our times and ages, let him know that the apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch things indifferent, as they which thought them not to be indifferent, had a ground in the law, and were deceived by ſimple ignorance, and not of malice, (for to ſuch the apoſtle yielded not, no not for a moment) nor ſuperſtition, but of a religious fear of God.

[f] God ſhall judge whether he do well or no: and therefore you ſhould rather ſtrive about this, how every one of you may be allowed of God, than to think upon other mens doings.

[g] He that maketh no difference of meats.

[9] So the apoſtle ſheweth that he ſpeaketh of the faithful, both ſtrong and weak: but what if we have to do with infidels? Then muſt we here take heed of two things, as alſo is declared in the epiſtle to the Corinthians. The one is, that we count not their ſuperſtition among things indifferent, as they did which ſat down to meat in idols temples: the other is, that then alſo when the matter is indifferent (as to buy a thing offered to idols, in the butchers ſhambles, and to eat it at home, or in a private banquet) we wound not the conſcience of our weak brother.

[h] He that toucheth not meats which he taketh to be unclean by the law.

[10] We muſt not ſtick, ſaith he, in the meat itſelf, but in the uſe of the meat, ſo that he is juſtly to be reprehended that liveth ſo, that he caſteth not his eyes upon God, for both our life, and our death is dedicated to him: and for this cauſe Chriſt hath properly died, and not ſimply, that we might eat this meat or that.

[11] The concluſion: we muſt leave to God his right, and therefore in matters, which, according as the conſcience is affected, are either good or evil, the ſtrong muſt not deſpiſe their weak brethren, much leſs condemn them. But this conſequent cannot be taken of equal force in the contrary, to wit, that the weak ſhould not judge the ſtrong, becauſe the weak do not know, that they which do not obſerve a day and eat, obſerve it not to the Lord, and eat to the Lord, as the ſtrong men know that the weak which obſerve a day and eat not, obſerve the day to the Lord, and eat not to the Lord.

[k] This is a form of an oath, proper to God only, for he and none but he liveth, and hath his being of himſelf.

[l] Shall acknowledge me for God.

A. D. 60.

12 So then every one of us ſhall give accounts of himſelf to God.

13 [12] Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but uſe your judgment rather in [m] this, that no man put an occaſion to fall, or a ſtumbling-block before his brother.

14 [13] I know, and am perſuaded through the [n] Lord Jeſus, that there is nothing unclean of [o] itſelf: but unto him that judgeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if thy brother be grieved for the meat, now walkeſt thou not charitably: * [14] Deſtroy not him with thy meat, for whom [15] Chriſt died.

* 1 Cor. 8. 11.

16 [16] Cauſe not your commodity to be evil ſpoken of.

17 [17] For the kingdom of God is not meat nor drink, but righteouſneſs and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

18 For whoſoever in [p] theſe things ſerveth Chriſt, is acceptable unto God, and is approved of men.

19 [18] Let us then follow thoſe things which concern peace, and wherewith one may edify another.

20 Deſtroy not the work of God for meat's ſake: * all things indeed are pure: but it is evil for the man which eateth with offence.

* Tit. 1. 15.

21 * It is good neither to eat fleſh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother ſtumbleth, or is offended, or made weak:

* 2 Cor. 8. 13.

22 [19] Haſt thou [q] faith? have it with thyſelf before God? bleſſed is he that condemneth not himſelf in that thing which he [r] alloweth.

23 For he that [s] doubteth, is condemned if he eat, becauſe he eateth not of faith: and whatſoever is not of faith, is ſin.

A. D. 60.

CHAP. XV.

1 The ſtronger muſt employ their ſtrength to ſtrengthen the weak, 3 by Chriſt's example, 7 who receiveth 8 not only the Jews, 10 but alſo the Gentiles. 15 The cauſe why he wrote this epiſtle.

WE [1] which are ſtrong, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to [a] pleaſe ourſelves.

2 Therefore let every man pleaſe his neighbour in that that is [b] good to edification.

3 [2] For Chriſt alſo would not pleaſe himſelf: but as it is written, * The rebukes of them which rebuke thee, fell on me.

* Pſ. 69. 10.

4 [3] For whatſoever things are written [c] aforetime, are written for our learning, that we, through patience and comfort of the [d] ſcriptures, might have hope,

5 [4] Now the God of patience and conſolation give you that ye be * like minded one towards another, according to Chriſt Jeſus.

* 1 Cor. 1. 10.

6 That ye with one mind, and with one mouth, may praiſe God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

7 Wherefore receive ye one another as Chriſt alſo [e] received us, to the glory of God.

8 [5] Now I ſay, that Jeſus Chriſt was a miniſter of the [f] circumciſion, for the [g] truth of God, to confirm the promiſes made unto the fathers.

9 [6] And let the Gentiles praiſe God for his mercy, as it is written, * For this cauſe I will confeſs

* Pſ. 18. 50.

[12] After that he hath concluded what is not to be done, he ſheweth what is to be done: to wit, we muſt take heed that we do not utterly caſt down, with abuſing our liberty, our brother which is not yet ſtrong.

[m] He rebuketh by the way theſe malicious judgers of others, which occupy their heads about nothing, but to find fault with their brethren's life, whereas they ſhould rather beſtow their wits upon this, that they do not with their diſdainfulneſs either caſt their brethren clean down, or give them ſome offence.

[13] The preventing of an objection: it is true that the ſchoolmaſterſhip of the law is taken away by the benefit of Chriſt, to ſuch as know it; but yet notwithſtanding we have to conſider, in the uſe of this liberty, what is expedient, that we may have regard of our weak brother, ſeeing that our liberty is not loſt thereby.

[n] By the Spirit of the Lord Jeſus, or by the Lord Jeſus, who I am ſure will brake down the wall at his coming.

[o] By nature.

[14] It is the part of a cruel mind to make more account of meat, than of our brother's ſalvation. Which thing they do, that preſume to eat with the offence of any brother, and ſo give him occaſion to go back from the goſpel.

[15] Another argument: we muſt follow Chriſt's example: who was ſo far from deſtroying the weak with meat, that he gave his life for them.

[16] Another argument: for that by this means the liberty of the goſpel is evil ſpoken of, as though it openeth the way to attempt any thing whatſoever, and boldeneth us to all things.

[17] A general reaſon, and the ground of all the other arguments: the kingdom of heaven conſiſteth not in theſe outward things, but in the ſtudy of righteouſneſs and peace, and comfort of the Holy Ghoſt.

[p] He that liveth peaceably, and dieth righteouſly, through the Holy Ghoſt.

[18] A general concluſion: the uſe of this liberty, yea, and our whole life, ought to be referred to the edifying one of another, inſomuch that we eſteem that thing unlawful by reaſon of the offence of our brother, which is of itſelf pure and lawful.

[19] He giveth a double warning in theſe matters: one, which pertaineth to the ſtrong, that he which hath obtained a ſure knowledge of this liberty, keep that treaſure, to the end he may uſe it wiſely and profitably, as hath been ſaid: the other which reſpecteth the weak, that they do nothing raſhly by other mens example with a wavering conſcience, for that cannot be done without ſin, whereof we are not perſuaded by the word of God, that he liketh and approveth it.

[q] He ſhewed before, verſe 14. what he meaneth by faith, to wit, for a man to be certain and out of doubt in matters and things indifferent.

[1] Now the apoſtle reaſoneth generally of tolerating or bearing with the weak, by all means, ſo far forth as may be for their profit.

[a] And deſpiſe others.

[b] For his profit and edification.

[2] A confirmation taken of the example of Chriſt, who ſuffered all things, to bring not only the weak, but alſo his moſt cruel enemies, overcoming them with patience, to his Father.

[3] The preventing of an objection: ſuch things as are cited out of the examples of the ancients, are propounded unto us to this end and purpoſe, that according to the example of our Fathers, we ſhould in patience and hope bear one with another.

[c] By Moſes and the prophets.

[d] The ſcriptures are ſaid to teach and comfort, becauſe God uſeth them to teach and comfort his people withal.

[4] We muſt take an example of patience of God: that both the weak and the ſtrong, ſerving God with a mutual conſent, may bring one another to God, as Chriſt alſo received us unto himſelf, although we were never ſo unworthy.

[e] He did not diſdain us, but received us of his own accord, to make us partakers of God's glory.

[5] An applying of the example of Chriſt to the Jews, whom he vouchſafed this honour, for the promiſes which he made unto their fathers, although they were never ſo unworthy, that he executed the office of a miniſter among them with marvellous patience: therefore much leſs ought the Gentiles deſpiſe them for certain faults, whom the Son of God ſo much eſteemed.

[f] Of the circumciſed Jews, for as long as he lived, he never went out of their quarters.

[g] That God might be ſeen to be true.

[6] An applying of the ſame to the Gentiles, whom alſo the Lord of his incomprehenſible goodneſs had regard of, ſo that they are not to be contemned of the Jews, as ſtrangers.

A. D. 60. [h] confeſs thee among the Gentiles, and ſing unto thy name.

* Deut. 32. 43. 10 And again he ſaith, * Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

* Pſ. 117. 11 And again, * Praiſe the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud ye him, all people together.

* Iſa. 11. 20. 12 And again Eſaias ſaith, * There ſhall be a root of Jeſſe, and he that ſhall riſe to reign over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt.

13 [7] Now the God of [i] hope fill you with [k] all joy, and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghoſt.

14 [8] And I myſelf alſo am perſuaded of you, my brethren, that [l] ye alſo are full of goodneſs, and filled with all knowledge, and are able to admoniſh one another.

15 Nevertheleſs, brethren, I have ſomewhat boldly after a ſort written unto you, as one that putteth you in remembrance, through the grace that is given me of God,

16 That I ſhould be the miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt toward the Gentiles, miniſtering the goſpel of God, that the [m] offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being ſanctified by the Holy Ghoſt.

17 [9] I have therefore whereof I may rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus in thoſe things which pertain to God:

18 For I dare not ſpeak of any thing which [n] Chriſt hath not wrought by me, to make the Gentiles obedient in word and deed,

19 With the [o] power of ſigns and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God: ſo that from Jeruſalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have cauſed to abound the goſpel of Chriſt.

20 Yea, ſo I enforced myſelf to preach the goſpel, not where Chriſt was named, leſt I ſhould have built on another man's foundation,

* Iſa. 52. 15. 21 But as it is written, * To whom he was not ſpoken of, they ſhall ſee him, and they that heard not, ſhall underſtand him.

* Ch. 1. 11. 22 * [10] Therefore alſo I have been oft let to come unto you:

23 But now ſeeing I have no more place in
* 1 Theſſ. 1. 17. theſe quarters, and alſo have * been deſirous many years agone to come unto you,

24 When I ſhall take my journey into Spain I will come to you: for I truſt to ſee you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, after that I have been ſomewhat filled with your company. A. D. 60.

25 But now go I to Jeruſalem, to [p] miniſter unto the ſaints.

26 For it hath pleaſed them of Macedonia and Achaia, to make a certain diſtribution unto the poor ſaints which are at Jeruſalem.

27 [11] For it hath pleaſed them, and their debtors are they: * for if the Gentiles be made par- * 1 Cor. 6. 11.
takers of their ſpiritual things, their duty is alſo to [q] miniſter unto them in carnal things.

28 When I have therefore performed this, and have [r] ſealed them this [s] fruit, I will paſs by you into Spain.

29 [12] And I know when I come, that I ſhall come to you with abundance of the bleſſing of the goſpel of Chriſt.

30 Alſo, brethren, I beſeech you for our Lord Jeſus Chriſt's ſake, and for the [t] love of the Spirit, that ye would ſtrive with me by prayers to God for me,

31 That I may be delivered from them which are diſobedient in Judea, and that my ſervice which I have to do at Jeruſalem may be accepted of the ſaints,

32 That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreſhed.

33 Thus the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

CHAP. XVI.

1 He commendeth Phebe. 3 He ſendeth greeting to many, 17 and warneth to beware of them which are the cauſes of diviſion.

I[1] Commend unto you Phebe our ſiſter, which is a ſervant of the church of Cenchrea:

2 That ye receive her in the [a] Lord, as it becometh ſaints, and that ye aſſiſt her in whatſoever buſineſs ſhe needeth of your aid: for ſhe hath given hoſpitality unto many, and to me alſo.

helpers in Chriſt Jeſus,

[h] I will openly profeſs, and ſet forth thy name.

[7] He ſealeth up, as it were, all the former treatiſe with prayers, wiſhing all that to be given them of the Lord, that he had commanded them.

[i] In whom we hope.

[k] Abundantly and plentifully.

[8] The concluſion of the epiſtle, wherein he firſt excuſeth himſelf, that he hath written ſomewhat at large unto them, rather to warn them, than to teach them, and that of neceſſity, by reaſon of his vocation, which bindeth him peculiarly to the Gentiles.

[l] Of your own accord, and of yourſelves.

[m] By the offering up of the Gentiles, he meaneth the Gentiles themſelves, whom he offered to God a ſacrifice.

[9] He commendeth his apoſtleſhip highly by the effects, but yet ſo, that moreover and beſides that he ſpeaketh all things truly, he giveth all the glory to God as the only author; and doth not properly reſpect himſelf, but this rather, that men might leſs doubt of the truth of the doctrine which he propounded unto them.

[n] Chriſt was ſo with me in all things, and by all means, that if I would never ſo fain, yet I cannot ſay what he hath done by me, to bring the Gentiles to obey the goſpel.

[o] In the firſt place, this word, Power, ſignifieth the force and working of the wonders in piercing men's minds; and in the latter, it ſignifieth God's mighty power which was the worker of theſe wonders.

[10] He writeth at large to the Romans, and that familarly, his ſingular good will towards them, and the ſtate of his affairs, but ſo, that he ſwerveth not a jot from the end of apoſtolical doctrine: for he declareth nothing but that which appertaineth to his office, and is godly; and commending by a little digreſſion, as it were, the liberality of the churches of Macedonia, he provoketh them modeſtly to follow their godly deed.

[p] Doing this duty for the ſaints, to carry them that money which was gathered for their uſes.

[11] Alms are voluntary, but yet ſuch as we owe by the law of charity.

[q] To ſerve their turns.

[r] Performed it faithfully, and ſealed it as it were with my ring.

[s] This money which was gathered for the uſe of the poor; which alms is very fitly called fruit.

[12] He promiſeth them through the bleſſing of God, not to come empty unto them; and requiring of them the duty of prayers, he ſheweth what thing we ought chiefly to reſt upon in all difficulties and adverſities.

[t] For that mutual conjunction, wherewith the Holy Ghoſt hath tied our hearts and minds together.

[1] Having made an end of the whole diſputation, he cometh now to familiar commendations and ſalutations, and that to good conſideration and purpoſe, to wit, that the Romans might know who are moſt to be honoured and made account of amongſt them: and alſo whom they ought to ſet before them to follow; and therefore he attributeth unto every of them peculiar and ſingular teſtimonies.

[a] For Chriſt's ſake, which is proper to the Chriſtian, for the heathen philoſophers have reſemblances of the ſame virtues.

[b] The company of the faithful, for in ſo great a city as that was, there were divers companies.

[c] For he was the firſt of Achaia that believed in Chriſt: and this kind of ſpeech is an alluſion to the ceremonies of the law.

[d] Ingrafted by faith.

[e] He calleth that an holy kiſs, which proceedeth from an heart that is full of that holy love: now this to is be referred to the manner uſed in thoſe days.

[2] As by namely deſcribing them which were worthy of commendation, he ſufficiently declared whom they ought to hear and follow, ſo doth he now paint out unto them whom they ought to take heed of, yet he nameth them not, for that it was not needful.

[f] Warily and diligently, as though you ſhould ſcout out for your enemies in a watch-tower.

[g] The word which he uſeth, ſignifieth a promiſing, which performeth nothing, and if thou heareſt any ſuch, thou mayeſt aſſure thyſelf that he that promiſeth thee, is more careful of thy matters, than of his own.

[h] Furniſhed with the knowledge of the truth and wiſdom, that you may embrace good things, and eſchew evil, beware of the deceits and ſnares of falſe prophets, and reſiſt them openly: and this place doth plainly deſtroy the Papiſts faith of credit, whereas they maintain it to be ſufficient for one man to believe as another man believeth, without further knowledge, or examination what the matter is, or what ground it hath: uſing theſe daily ſpeeches, We believe as our fathers believed, and we believe as the church believeth.

[i] As men that know no way to deceive, much leſs do deceive indeed.

[4] We muſt fight, with a certain hope of victory.

[5] He annexeth ſalutations, partly to renew mutual friendſhip, and partly to the end that this epiſtle might be of ſome weight with the Romans, having the confirmation of ſo many that ſubſcribed unto it.

[k] Wrote it as Paul uttered it.

[6] Now taking his leave of them this third time, he wiſheth that unto them, whereupon dependeth all the force of the former doctrine.

[7] He ſetteth forth the power and wiſdom of God with great thankſgiving, which eſpecially appear in the goſpel, and maketh mention alſo of the calling of the Gentiles, to confirm the Romans in the hope of this ſalvation.

[l] That ſecret and hidden thing, that is to ſay, the calling of the Gentiles.

The Firſt Epiſtle of the Apoſtle PAUL to the CORINTHIANS.

A. D. 59.

CHAP. I.

1 After the ſalutation, 10 which in effect is an exhortation, 12 he reprehendeth the Corinthians ſects and diviſions, 17 and calleth them from pride to humility: 20 For, overthrowing all worldly wiſdom, 23, 25 he advanceth only the preaching of the croſs.

PAUL [1] called to be an [2] apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, through the will of God, and our brother [3] Soſthenes,

2 [4] Unto the church of God, which is at Corinthus, to them that are * [5] ſanctified in [a] Chriſt Jeſus, * ſaints by [b] calling, * with all that [c] call on the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in every place, both their Lord, and ours:

* Acts 15. 9. 1 Theſſ. 4. 7. * Rom. 1. 7. Eph. 1. 1. Coloſſ. 1. 22. 1 Tim. 1. 9. Tit. 2. 13. * 2 Tim. 2. 22.

3 [6] Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

4 [7] I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you in Jeſus Chriſt,

5 That in all things ye are made rich in him, [8] in [d] all kind of ſpeech, and in all knowledge:

6 [9] As the teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt hath been [e] confirmed in you:

A. D. 59.

7 So that ye are not deſtitute of any gift: * [10] waiting for the [f] appearing of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, * Tit. 2. 11. Phil. 3. 20.

8 * [11] Who ſhall alſo confirm you unto the end, that ye may be [g] blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. * 1 Theſſ. 3. 13. and 5. 23.

9 * God is [h] faithful, by whom ye are called unto the fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. * 1 Theſſ. 5. 24.

10 [12] Now I beſeech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that [13] ye all ſpeak one thing, and that there be no diſſenſions among you: but be ye [i] knit together in one mind, and in one judgment.

11 [14] For it hath been declared unto me, my brethren, of you, by them that are of the houſe of Cloe, that there are contentions made among you.

12 Now [k] this I ſay, that every one of you ſaith, I am Paul's, and I am * Apollos, and I am Cephas, and I am Chriſt's. * Acts 18. 24.

13 [15] Is Chriſt divided? was [16] Paul crucified

[1] The inſcription of the epiſtle, wherein he chiefly goeth about to procure the good-will of the Corinthians towards him, yet notwithſtanding, ſo that always he letteth them, to wit, that he is the ſervant of God, and not of men.

[2] If he be an apoſtle, then he muſt be heard, although he ſometimes reprehend them ſharply, ſeeing he hath not his own cauſe in hand, but is a meſſenger that bringeth the commandments of Chriſt.

[3] He joineth Soſthenes with himſelf, that this doctrine might be confirmed by two witneſſes.

[4] It is a church of God, although it hath great faults in it, ſo that it obey them which admoniſh it.

[5] A true definition of the catholic church which is one.

[a] The father ſanctifieth us, that is to ſay, ſeparateth us from the wicked, in giving us to his Son, that he may be in us, and we in him.

[b] Whom God of his gracious goodneſs and mere love hath ſeparated for himſelf: or whom God hath called to holineſs: the firſt of theſe two expoſitions, ſheweth from whence our ſanctification cometh: and the ſecond ſheweth to what end it tendeth.

[c] He is ſaid properly to call on God, who crieth unto the Lord when he is in danger, and craveth help at his hands, and by the figure Synecdoche, it is taken for all the ſervice of God: and therefore to call upon Chriſt's name, is to acknowledge and take him for very God.

[6] The foundation and the life of the church, is Chriſt Jeſus, given of the Father.

[7] Going about to condemn many vices, he beginneth with a true commendation of their virtues, leſt he might ſeem after to deſcend to chiding, being moved with malice or envy: yet ſo, that he referreth all to God, as the author of them, and that in Chriſt, that the Corinthians might be more aſhamed to prophane and abuſe the holy gifts of God.

[8] He toucheth that by name which they moſt abuſed.

[d] Seeing, that whilſt we live here, we know but in part, and propheſy in part, this word (All) muſt be reſtrained to the preſent ſtate of the faithful: but by (Speech) he meaneth not a vain kind of babbling, but the gift of holy eloquence, which the Corinthians abuſed.

[9] He ſheweth that the true uſe of theſe gifts conſiſteth herein, that the mighty power of Chriſt might thereby be ſet forth in them, that hereafter it might evidently appear how wickedly they abuſed them to glory and ambition.

[e] By thoſe excellent gifts of the Holy Ghoſt.

[10] He ſaith by the way, that there is no cauſe why they ſhould pleaſe themſelves ſo much in thoſe gifts which they had received, ſeeing that thoſe were nothing in compariſon of them which are to be looked for.

[11] He teſtifieth that he hopeth well of them hereafter, that they may more patiently abide his reprehenſion afterward. And yet together therewithal ſheweth that as well the beginning as the accompliſhing of our ſalvation, is only the work of God.

[g] He calleth them blameleſs, not whom man never found fault with, but with whom no man can juſtly find fault, that is to ſay, them which are in Chriſt Jeſus, in whom there is no condemnation. See Luke 1. 6.

[h] True and conſtant, who doth not only call us, but giveth us the gift of perſeverance alſo.

[12] Having made an end of the preface, he cometh to the matter itſelf, beginning with a moſt grave obteſtation, as though they ſhould hear Chriſt himſelf ſpeaking, and not Paul.

[13] The firſt part of this epiſtle, wherein his purpoſe is to call back the Corinthians to brotherly concord, and to take away all occaſion of diſcord. So then this firſt part concerneth the taking away of ſchiſms. Now a ſchiſm is, when men, which otherwiſe agree and conſent together in doctrine, do yet ſeparate themſelves one from another.

[i] Knit together, as a body that conſiſteth of all his parts fitly knit together.

[14] He beginneth his reprehenſion and chiding by taking away of an objection: for that he underſtood by good witneſſes, that there were many factions among them. And therewithal he openeth the cauſe of diſſenſions, becauſe that ſome did hang on one doctor, ſome on another, and ſome were ſo addicted to themſelves, that they neglected all doctors and teachers, calling themſelves the diſciples of Chriſt only, ſhutting forth their teachers.

[k] The matter I would ſay to you, is this.

[15] The firſt reaſon why ſchiſms ought to be eſchewed: becauſe Chriſt ſeemeth by that means, to be divided and torn in pieces, who cannot be the head of two divers and diſagreeing bodies, being himſelf one.

[16] Another reaſon: becauſe they cannot without great injury to God, ſo hang of men as of Chriſt: which thing no doubt they do, which allow whatſoever ſome man ſpeaketh, even for his perſon's ſake: as theſe men allowed one ſelf-ſame goſpel being uttered of one man, and did loath it being uttered of another man. So that theſe factions were called by the names of their teachers. Now Paul ſetteth down his own name, not only to grieve no man, but alſo to ſhew that he pleadeth not his own cauſe.

A. D. 59.

fied for you? either were ye [17] baptized into the name of Paul?

14 [18] I thank God, that I baptized none of you, but * Criſpus and Gaius, *Acts 18. 8.

15 Leſt any ſhould ſay, that I had baptized into mine own name.

16 I baptized alſo the houſhold of Stephanas: furthermore know I not, whether I baptized any other.

17 [19] For Chriſt ſent me not to baptize, but to preach the goſpel, [20] not with * [l] wiſdom of words, leſt the [21] croſs of Chriſt ſhould be made of none effect. * Ch. 2. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 16.

18 For that [m] preaching of the croſs is to them that periſh, fooliſhneſs: but unto us, which are ſaved, it is the * [n] power of God. *Rom. 1. 16.

*Iſa. 29. 14. 19 [22] For it written, * I will deſtroy the wiſdom of the wiſe, and will caſt away the underſtanding of the prudent.

20 Where is the wiſe? where is the [o] ſcribe? where is the [p] diſputer of this world? hath not God made the wiſdom of this world fooliſhneſs?

A. D. 59.

21 [23] For ſeeing the [q] world by wiſdom knew not God in the [r] wiſdom of God, [24] it pleaſed God by the [s] fooliſhneſs of preaching to ſave them that believe.

22 * [25] Seeing alſo that the Jews require a ſign, and the Grecians ſeek after wiſdom. * Matt. 12. 38.

23 But we preach Chriſt crucified: unto the Jews, even a ſtumbling-block, and unto the Grecians, fooliſhneſs:

24 But unto them which are called, both of the Jews and Grecians, we preach Chriſt, the power of God, and the wiſdom of God.

25 For the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer than men, and the weakneſs of God is ſtronger than men.

26 [26] For, brethren, you ſee your [t] calling, how that not many wiſe men [u] after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called.

[17] The third reaſon taken of the form and end of baptiſm, wherein we make a promiſe to Chriſt, calling alſo on the name of the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt. Therefore although a man do not fall from the doctrine of Chriſt, yet if he hang upon ſome certain teachers, and deſpiſe others, he forſaketh Chriſt: for if he hold Chriſt his only Maſter, he would hear him, teaching by whomſoever.

[18] He proteſteth that he ſpeaketh ſo much the more boldly of theſe things, becauſe that through God's providence, he is void of all ſuſpicion of challenging diſciples unto himſelf, and taking them from others. Whereby we may underſtand, that not the ſcholars only, but the teachers alſo are here reprehended, which gather themſelves flocks apart.

[19] The taking away of an objection: that he gave not himſelf to baptize any amongſt them: not for the contempt of baptiſm, but becauſe he was chiefly occupied in delivering the doctrine, and committed them that received his doctrine to others to be baptized, whereof he had ſtore. And ſo he declared ſufficiently how far he was from all ambition: whereas on the other ſide, they whom he reprehendeth, as though they gathered diſciples unto themſelves and not unto Chriſt, bragged moſt ambitiouſly of numbers, which they had baptized.

[20] Now he turneth himſelf to the doctors themſelves, which pleaſed themſelves in brave and ambitious eloquence, to the end that they might draw more diſciples after them. He confeſſeth plainly that he was unlike unto them, oppoſing gravely, as it became an apoſtle, his example againſt their perverſe judgments: ſo that this is another place of this epiſtle, touching the obſerving of a godly ſimplicity both in words and ſentences, in teaching of the goſpel.

[l] With eloquence, which Paul caſteth off from him, not only as not neceſſary, but alſo as flat contrary to the office of his apoſtleſhip: and yet had Paul his kind of eloquence, but it was heavenly; not of man, and void of painted words.

[21] The reaſon why he uſeth not the pomp of words and painted ſpeech: becauſe it was God's will to bring the world to his obedience by that way, whereby the moſt ideots amongſt men might underſtand that this work was done of God himſelf, without the art of man. Therefore as ſalvation is ſet forth unto us in the goſpel by the croſs of Chriſt, than which nothing is more contemptible, and more far from life; ſo God would have the manner of the preaching of the croſs moſt different from thoſe means which men do uſe to draw and entice others, either to hear or believe: therefore it pleaſed him by a certain kind of moſt wiſe folly, to triumph over the moſt fooliſh wiſdom of the world, as he had ſaid before by Iſaiah, that he would. And hereby we may gather, that both theſe doctors which were puffed up with ambitious eloquence, and alſo their hearers, ſtrayed far away from the end and mark of their vocation.

[m] The preaching of Chriſt crucified, or the kind of ſpeech which we uſe.

[n] It is that wherein he declareth his marvellous power in ſaving his elect, which would not ſo evidently appear, if it hanged upon any help of man, for ſo man might attribute that to himſelf, which is proper only to the croſs of Chriſt.

[22] The apoſtle proveth, this ought not only not to ſeem ſtrange, ſeeing that it was foretold ſo long before, but declareth further, that God is wont to puniſh the pride of the world in ſuch ſort, which ſo pleaſeth itſelf in its own wiſdom ; and therefore that that is vain, yea a thing of nothing, and ſuch as God rejecteth as unprofitable, which they ſo carefully laboured for, and made ſo great account of.

[o] Where art thou, O thou learned fellow, and thou that ſpendeſt thy days in turning thy books?

[p] Thou that ſpendeſt all thy time in ſeeking out the ſecret things of this world, and in expounding all hard queſtions: and thus triumpheth he againſt all the men of this world, for there was not one of them that could ſo much as dream upon this ſecret and hidden myſtery.

[23] He ſheweth that the pride of men was worthily puniſhed of God, becauſe they would not behold God, as meet was they ſhould, in the moſt clear glaſs of the wiſdom of the world, which is the workmanſhip of the world.

[q] By the world, he meaneth all men which are not born anew, but remain as they were, when they were firſt born.

[r] In the workmanſhip of this world, which hath the marvellous wiſdom of God engraved in it, ſo that every man may behold it.

[24] The goodneſs of God is wonderful, for while he goeth about to puniſh the pride of this world, he is very provident and careful for the ſalvation of it, and teacheth men to become fools, that they may be wiſe to God.

[s] So he calleth the preaching of the goſpel, as the enemies ſuppoſed it: but in the mean ſeaſon he taunteth them very ſharply, who had rather charge God with folly, than acknowledge their own, and crave pardon for it.

[25] A declaration of that which he ſaid ; that the preaching of the goſpel, is fooliſh. It is fooliſh, ſaith he, to them whom God hath not endued with new light, that is to ſay, to all men being conſidered in themſelves: for the Jews require miracles, and the Grecians arguments, which they may comprehend by their wit and wiſdom: and therefore they do not only not believe the goſpel, but alſo they mock at it. Nortwithſtanding in this fooliſh preaching, there is the great virtue and wiſdom of God, but ſuch as thoſe only which are called do perceive: God ſhewing moſt plainly, that even then when madmen think him moſt fooliſh, he is far wiſer than they are: and that he ſurmounteth all their might and power, when he uſeth moſt vile and abject things, as it hath appeared in the fruit of the preaching of the goſpel.

[26] A confirmation taken of thoſe things which came to paſs at Corinth, where the church eſpecially conſiſted of the baſeſt and common people, inſomuch that the philoſophers of Greece were driven to ſhame when they ſaw that they could do nothing with their wiſdom and eloquence, in compariſon of the apoſtles, whom notwithſtanding they called ideots and unlearned. And herewithal doth he beat down their pride: for God did not prefer them before thoſe noble and wiſe men becauſe they ſhould be proud, but that they might be conſtrained, even whether they would or not, to rejoice in the Lord, by whoſe mercy, although they were the moſt abject of all, they obtained in Chriſt, both this wiſdom, and all things neceſſary to ſalvation.

[t] What way the Lord hath taken in calling you.

[u] After that kind of wiſdom which men make account of, as though there were none elſe: who becauſe they are carnal, know not ſpiritual wiſdom.

A. D. 59.

27 But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe, and God hath choſen the weak things of the world to confound the mighty things:

28 And vile things of the world, and things which are deſpiſed, hath God choſen, and things which [x] are not, to bring to [y] nought things that are,

29 That no [z] fleſh ſhould rejoice in his preſence.

6 [4] And we ſpeak wiſdom among them that are [e] perfect: not the wiſdom of this world, neither of the [f] princes of this world, which come to nought.

7 [5] But we ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a [g] myſtery, even the hid wiſdom, [6] which God had determined before the world, unto our glory.

8 [7] Which none of the princes of this world have known: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the [h] Lord of glory.

11 [10] For what man knoweth the things of a man, ſave the [l] ſpirit of a man, which is in him? even ſo the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received not the [m] ſpirit of

[x] Which in man's judgment are almoſt nothing.

[y] To ſhew that they are vain and unprofitable, and nothing worth. See Rom. 3. 31.

[z] Fleſh is oft, as we ſee, taken for the whole man: and he uſeth this word, Fleſh, very fitly, to ſet the weak and miſerable condition of man, and the majeſty of God, one againſt the other.

[a] Whom he caſt down before, now he lifteth up, yea, higher than all men: yet ſo, that he ſheweth them, that all their worthineſs is without themſelves, that is, ſtandeth in Chriſt, and that of God.

[27] He teacheth that eſpecially and above all things the goſpel ought not to be contemned, ſeeing it containeth the chiefeſt things that are to be deſired, to wit, true wiſdom, the true way to obtain righteouſneſs, the true way to live honeſtly and godly, the true deliverance from all miſeries and calamities.

[b] Let him yield all to God, and give him thanks: and ſo by this place is man's free will beaten down, which the Papiſts ſo dream of.

[1] He returneth to the ſeventeenth verſe of the former chapter, that is to ſay, to his own example: confeſſing that he uſed not among them either excellency of words or enticing ſpeech of man's wiſdom, but with great ſimplicity of ſpeech both knew and preached Jeſus Chriſt crucified, humble and abject as touching the fleſh.

[b] I purpoſed not to profeſs any knowledge but the knowledge of Chriſt and him crucified.

[c] He ſetteth weakneſs againſt excellency of words, and therefore joineth with it fear and trembling, which are companions of true modeſty, not ſuch fear and trembling as terrify the conſcience, but ſuch as are contrary to vanity and pride.

[2] He turneth that now to the commendation of his miniſtry, which he had granted to his adverſaries: for his virtue and power, which they knew well enough, was ſo much the more excellent, becauſe it had no worldly help joined with it.

[d] By plain evidence he meaneth ſuch a proof, as is made by certain and neceſſary reaſons.

[3] And he telleth the Corinthians that he did it for their great profit, becauſe they might thereby know manifeſtly that the goſpel was from heaven. Therefore he privily rebuketh them, becauſe that in ſeeking vain oſtentation, they willingly deprived themſelves of the greateſt help of their faith.

[4] Another argument taken of the nature of the thing, that is, of the goſpel, which is true wiſdom, but known to them only which are deſirous of perfection: and is unſavoury to them which otherwiſe excel in the world, but yet vainly and frailly.

[e] Thoſe are called perfect here, not which had gotten perfection already, but ſuch as tend to it, as Phil. 3. 15. ſo that perfect is ſet againſt weak.

[f] They that are wiſer, richer, or mightier than other men are.

[5] He ſheweth the cauſe why this wiſdom cannot be perceived of thoſe excellent worldly wits, to wit, becauſe indeed it is ſo deep, that they cannot attain unto it.

[g] Which men could not ſo much as dream of.

[6] He taketh away an objection: If it be ſo hard, when, and how is it known? God, ſaith he, determined with himſelf from the beginning, that which his purpoſe was to bring forth at this time out of his ſecrets, for the ſalvation of men.

[7] He taketh away another objection: why then, how cometh it to paſs, that this wiſdom was ſo rejected of men of higheſt authority, that they crucified Chriſt himſelf? Paul anſwereth: becauſe they knew not Chriſt ſuch as he was.

[h] That mighty God, full of true majeſty and glory: Now this place hath in it a moſt evident proof of the divinity of Chriſt, and of his joining of the two natures in one, which hath this in it, that that which is proper to the manhood alone, is vouched of the Godhead joined with the manhood: which kind of ſpeech is called of the old fathers, A making common of things belonging to ſome one, with others to whom they do not belong.

[8] Another objection. But how could it be that thoſe witty men could not perceive this wiſdom? Paul anſwereth: Becauſe we preach thoſe things which paſs all men's underſtanding.

[i] Man cannot ſo much as think on them, much leſs conceive of them with his ſenſes.

[9] A queſtion. If it ſurmount the capacity of men, how can it be underſtood of any man, or how can you declare and preach it? by a peculiar lightening by God's Spirit, wherewith whoſoever is inſpired, he can enter even into the very ſecrets of God.

[k] There is nothing ſo ſecret and hidden in God, but the Spirit of God pierceth into it.

[10] He ſetteth that forth by a ſimilitude, which he ſpake of the inſpiration of the Spirit. As the force of man's wit ſearcheth out things pertaining to man, ſo doth our mind by that power of the Holy Ghoſt underſtand heavenly things.

[l] The mind of man which is endued with the ableneſs to underſtand and judge.

[m] The Spirit which we have received, doth not teach us things of this world, but lifteth us up to God; and this place teacheth us againſt the Papiſts, what faith is, from whence it cometh, and what force it is of.

A. D. 59.

the world, but the Spirit which is of God, [11] that we might [n] know the things that are given to us of God:

AND [1] I could not ſpeak unto you, brethren, as unto ſpiritual men, but as unto [a] carnal, even as unto babes in Chriſt.

A. D. 59.

2 I gave you milk to drink, and not [b] meat: for ye were not yet [c] able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and ſtrife, and diviſions, are ye not carnal, and walk as [d] men?

4 For when one ſaith, I am Paul's, and another, I am Apollos, are ye not carnal?

5 [2] Who is Paul then? and who is Apollos? but the miniſters by whom ye believed, and as the Lord gave to every man?

6 [3] I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increaſe.

7 So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that giveth the increaſe.

[11] That which he ſpake generally he reſtraineth now to thoſe things which God hath opened unto us of our ſalvation in Chriſt: leſt that any man ſhould ſeparate the Spirit from the preaching of the word and Chriſt: or ſhould think that thoſe fantaſtical men are governed by the Spirit of God, which wandering beſides the word, thruſt upon us their vain imaginations for the ſecrets of God.

[n] This word (know) is taken here in his proper ſenſe, for true knowledge, which the Spirit of God worketh in us.

[12] Now he returneth to his purpoſe, and concludeth the argument which he began ver. 6. and it is thus: The words muſt be applied to the matter, and the matter muſt be ſet forth with words which are meet and convenient for it. Now this wiſdom is ſpiritual and not of man, and therefore it muſt be delivered by a ſpiritual kind of teaching, and not by enticing words of man's eloquence, that the ſimple, and yet wonderful majeſty of the Holy Ghoſt may therein appear.

[o] Applying the words unto the matter, to wit, that as we teach ſpiritual things, ſo muſt our kind of teaching be ſpiritual.

[13] Again he preventeth an offence or ſtumbling-block: How cometh it to paſs, that ſo few allow theſe things? This is not to be marvelled at, ſaith the apoſtle, ſeeing that men in their natural powers (as they term them) are not endued with that faculty whereby ſpiritual things are diſcerned (which faculty cometh another way) and therefore they account ſpiritual wiſdom as folly: and it is as if he ſhould ſay, It is no marvel that blind men cannot judge of colours, ſeeing that they lack the ſight of their eyes, and therefore light is to them as darkneſs.

[p] The man that hath no further light of underſtanding, than that which he brought with him, even from his mother's womb, as Jude defineth it, Jude 19.

[q] By the virtue of the Holy Ghoſt.

[14] He amplifieth the matters by contraries.

[r] Underſtandeth and diſcerneth.

[15] The wiſdom of the fleſh, ſaith Paul, determineth nothing certainly, no not in its own affairs, much leſs can it diſcern ſtrange, that is, ſpiritual things. But the Spirit of God, wherewith ſpiritual men are endued, can be deceived by no means, and therefore be reproved of no man.

[s] Of no man: for when the prophets are judged of the prophets, it is the Spirit that judgeth, and not the man.

[16] A reaſon of the former ſaying: for he is called ſpiritual, which hath learned that by the virtue of the Spirit, which Chriſt hath taught us. Now if that which we have learned of that maſter could be reproved of any man, he muſt needs be wiſer than God: whereupon it followeth, that they are not only fooliſh, but alſo wicked, which think that they can deviſe ſomething that is either more perfect, or that they can teach the wiſdom of God a better way than they knew or taught, which undoubtedly were endued with God's Spirit.

[u] We are endued with the Spirit of Chriſt, who openeth unto us thoſe ſecrets, which by all other means are unſearchable, and alſo all truth whatſoever.

[1] Having declared the worthineſs of heavenly wiſdom, and of the goſpel, and having generally condemned the blindneſs of man's mind, now at length he applieth it particularly to the Corinthians, calling them carnal, that is, ſuch in whom as yet the fleſh prevaileth againſt the Spirit. And he bringeth a double teſtimony of it: firſt, that he had proved them to be ſuch, inſomuch that he dealt with them no otherwiſe than with ignorant men, and ſuch as are almoſt babes in the doctrine of godlineſs; and ſecondly, becauſe they ſhewed indeed by theſe diſſentions, which ſprang up by reaſon of the ignorance of the virtue of the Spirit, and heavenly wiſdom, that they had profited very little or nothing.

[a] He calleth them carnal, which are as yet ignorant, and therefore to expreſs it the better, he termeth them babes.

[b] Subſtantial meat, or ſtrong meat.

[c] To be fed by me with ſubſtantial meat: therefore as the Corinthians grew up in age, ſo the apoſtle nouriſhed them by teaching, firſt with milk, then with ſtrong meat, which difference was only but in the manner of teaching.

[d] By the ſquare and compaſs of man's wit and judgment.

[2] After that he hath ſufficiently reprehended ambitious teachers and their fooliſh eſteemers, now he ſheweth how the true miniſters are to be eſteemed, that we attribute not unto them more or leſs than we ought to do. Therefore he teacheth us, that they are they by whom we are brought to faith and ſalvation, but yet as the miniſters of God, and ſuch as do nothing of themſelves, but God ſo working by them as it pleaſeth him to furniſh them with his gifts. Therefore we have not to mark or conſider what miniſter it is that ſpeaketh, but what is ſpoken: and we muſt depend only upon him which ſpeaketh by his ſervants.

[3] He beautifieth the former ſentence with two ſimilitudes: firſt comparing the company of the faithful to a field which God maketh fruitful, when it is ſowed and watered through the labour of his ſervants: next, by comparing it to an houſe, which indeed the Lord buildeth, but by the hands of his workmen, ſome of whom he uſeth in laying the foundation, others in building of it up. Now, both theſe ſimilitudes tend to this purpoſe, to ſhew that all things are wholly accompliſhed by God's only authority and might, ſo that we muſt only have an eye to him. Moreover, although that God uſeth ſome in the better part of the work, we muſt not therefore contemn others in reſpect of them, and much leſs may we divide or ſet them apart, (as theſe factious men did) ſeeing that all of them labour in God's buſineſs, and in ſuch ſort, that they ſerve to finiſh one ſelf-ſame work, although by a diverſe manner of working, inſomuch that they need one another's help.

[e] Serving under him: Now they which ſerve under another, do nothing of their own ſtrength, but as it is given them by grace, which grace maketh them fit to that ſervice. Look chap. 15. 10. and 2 Cor. 3. 6. and all the increaſe that cometh by their labour, doth ſo proceed from God, that no part of the praiſe of it may be given to the under ſervant.

A. D. 59. 10 According to the grace of God given to me, as a ſkilful maſter-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon: [4] but let every man take heed how he buildeth upon it.

11 [5] For other foundation can no man lay, than that which is laid, which is Jeſus Chriſt.

12 [6] And if any man build on this foundation, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, timber, hay, or ſtubble,

13 [7] Every man's work ſhall be made manifeſt: for the day ſhall declare it, becauſe it ſhall be revealed by the fire: and the fire ſhall try every man's work of what ſort it is.

14 If any man's work, that he hath built upon, abide, he ſhall receive wages.

15 If any man's work burn, he ſhall loſe, but [8] he ſhall be ſaved himſelf: nevertheleſs yet as it were by the fire.

* Ch. 6. 19. 2 Cor. 6. 16. 16 * [9] Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If any man [f] deſtroy the temple of God, him ſhall God deſtroy: for the temple of God is holy, which ye are.

18 [10] Let no man deceive himſelf: If any man amongſt you ſeem to be wiſe in this world, let him be a fool, that he may be wiſe.

19 For the wiſdom of this world is fooliſhneſs with God: for it is written, * He [g] catcheth the wiſe in their own craftineſs. A. D. 59. * Job. 5. 13.

20 * And again, The Lord knoweth that the thoughts of the wiſe be vain. * Pſ. 44. 11.

21 [11] Therefore let no man [h] rejoice in men: for all things are [i] yours.

22 Whether it be Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the [12] world, or life, or death, whether they be things preſent, or things to come, even all are yours.

23 And ye Chriſt's, and Chriſt God's.

CHAP. IV.

1 Bringing in the definition of a true apoſtle, 7 he ſheweth that humility ought rather to be an honour than a ſhame unto him. 9 He bringeth in a proof, whereby it may evidently appear, 10 that he neither had care of glory, 11 nor of his belly. 17 He commendeth Timothy.

LET [1] a [a] man ſo think of us, as of the miniſters of Chriſt, and diſpoſers of the ſecrets of God.

2 [2] And as for the reſt, it is required of the diſpoſers, that every man be found faithful.

3 [3] As touching me, I paſs very little to be judged

[4] Now he ſpeaketh to the teachers themſelves, which ſucceeded him in the church of Corinth, and in their perſon to all that were after, or ſhall be paſtors of congregations, ſeeing that they ſucceed into the labour of the apoſtles, which were planters and chief builders. Therefore he warneth them firſt, that they perſuade not themſelves that they may build after their own fancy, that is, that they may propound and ſet forth any thing in the church, either in matter or in kind of teaching, different from the apoſtles which were the chief builders.

[5] Moreover, he ſheweth what this foundation is, to wit, Chriſt Jeſus, from whence they may not turn away one jot in the building up of this building.

[6] Thirdly, he ſheweth, that they muſt take heed that the upper part of the building be anſwerable to the foundation, that is, that admonitions, exhortations, and whatſoever pertaineth to the edifying of the flock, be anſwerable to the doctrine of Chriſt, as well in matter as in form: which doctrine is compared to gold, ſilver, and precious ſtones: of which matter, Iſaiah alſo, and John in the Revelations, build the heavenly city. And to theſe are oppoſite, wood, hay, ſtubble, that is to ſay, curious and vain queſtions or decrees: and beſides, to be ſhort, all that kind of teaching which ſerveth to oſtentation. For falſe doctrines, whereof he ſpeaketh not here, are not ſaid properly to be built upon this foundation, unleſs peradventure in ſhew only.

[7] He teſtifieth, as indeed the truth is, that all are not good builders, no not ſome of them which ſtand upon this one and only foundation: but howſoever this work of evil builders, ſaith he, ſtand for a ſeaſon, yet ſhall it not always deceive, becauſe that the light of the truth appearing at length as day, ſhall diſſolve this darkneſs, and ſhew what it is. And as that ſtuff is tried by the fire, whether it be good or not, ſo will God in his time, by the touch of his Spirit and word, try all buildings, and ſo ſhall it come to paſs, that ſuch as be found pure and ſound, ſhall ſtill continue ſo, to the praiſe of the workman: but they that are otherwiſe, ſhall be conſumed and vaniſh away, and ſo ſhall the workman be fruſtrate of the hope of his labour, which pleaſed himſelf in a thing of nought.

[8] He taketh not away hope of ſalvation from the unſkilful and fooliſh builders, which hold faſt the foundation, of which ſort were thoſe rhetoricians, rather than paſtors, of Corinth: but he addeth an exception, that they muſt notwithſtanding ſuffer this trial of their work, and alſo abide the loſs of their vain labours.

[9] Continuing ſtill in the metaphor of a building, he teacheth us that this ambition is not only vain, but alſo ſacrilegious: for he ſaith that the church is, as it were, the temple of God, which God hath, as it were, conſecrated unto himſelf by his Spirit. Then turning himſelf to theſe ambitious men, he ſheweth that they profane the temple of God, becauſe thoſe vain arts wherein they pleaſe themſelves ſo much, are as he teacheth, ſo many pollution, of the holy doctrine of God, and the purity of the church. Which wickedneſs ſhall not be ſuffered unpuniſhed.

[f] Defileth it and maketh it unclean, being holy: and ſurely they do defile it, by Paul's judgment, which by fleſhly eloquence defile the purity of the goſpel.

[10] He concludeth by the contrary, that they profeſs pure wiſdom in the church of God, which refuſe and caſt away all thoſe vanities of men: and if they be mocked of the world, it is ſufficient for them that they be wiſe according to the wiſdom of God, and as he will have them to be wiſe.

[g] Be they never ſo crafty, yet the Lord will take them when he ſhall diſcover their treachery.

[11] He returneth to the propoſition of the ſecond verſe, firſt warning the hearers, that henceforward they eſteem not as lords, thoſe whom God hath appointed to be miniſters, and not lords of their ſalvation: which thing they do, that depend upon men, and not upon God that ſpeaketh by them.

[i] Helps appointed for your benefit.

[12] He paſſeth from the perſons to the things themſelves, that his arguments be more forcible: yea, he aſcendeth from Chriſt to the Father, to ſhew that we reſt ourſelves no not in Chriſt himſelf, in that that he is man, but becauſe he carrieth us up even to the Father, as Chriſt witneſſeth of himſelf every where, that he was ſent of his Father, that by this band we may be all knit with God himſelf.

[1] He concludeth the duty of the hearers towards their miniſters: that they eſteem them not as lords: and yet notwithſtanding, that they give ear unto them, as to them that are ſent from Chriſt; ſent, I ſay, to this end and purpoſe, that they may receive as it were at their hands, the treaſure of ſalvation which is drawn out of the ſecrets of God.

[2] Laſt of all, he warneth the miniſters, that they alſo behave themſelves not as lords, but as faithful ſervants, becauſe they muſt render an account of their ſtewardſhip unto God.

[3] Becauſe in reprehending others, he ſet himſelf for an example, he uſeth a pre-occupation or preventing of an objection, and uſing the gravity of an apoſtle, he ſheweth that he careth not for the contrary judgments that they have of him, in that they eſteemed him as a vile perſon, becauſe he did not ſet forth himſelf as they did. And he bringeth good reaſons why he was nothing moved with the judgments which they had of him.

A. D. 59.

judged of you, [4] or of man's [b] judgment: no, [5] I judge not mine own ſelf.

4 For I know nothing by myſelf, yet am I not thereby juſtified: but he that judgeth me, is the [c] Lord.

*Matt. 7. 1.

5 [6] Therefore * judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will lighten things that are hid in darkneſs, and make the counſels of the hearts manifeſt: and then ſhall every man have [d] praiſe of God.

6 [7] Now theſe things, brethren, I have figuratively applied unto mine own ſelf, and Apollos, for your ſakes, that ye might learn [e] by us, that no man preſume above that which is written, that one ſwell not againſt another for any man's cauſe.

7 [8] For who ſeparateth thee? and what haſt thou, that thou haſt not received? if thou haſt received it, why rejoiceſt thou, as though [f] thou hadſt not received it?

8 [9] Now ye are full: now ye are made rich: ye reign as kings without us: and would to God ye did reign, that we alſo might reign with you.

9 For I think that God hath ſet forth us the laſt apoſtles, as men appointed to death: for we are made a [g] gazing-ſtock unto the world, and to the angels, and to men.

10 We are fools for Chriſt's ſake, and ye are wiſe in Chriſt: we are weak, and ye are ſtrong: ye are honourable, and we are deſpiſed.

11 Unto this hour we both hunger and thirſt, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place,

*Acts 20. 34. 1 Theſſ. 2. 9. 2 Theſſ. 3. 8.

12 * And labour, working with our own hands: we are reviled, and yet we bleſs: we are perſecuted, and ſuffer it:

*Matt. 5. 44. Luke 23. 34. Acts 7. 60.

13 * We are evil ſpoken of, and we pray: we are made as the [h] filth of the world, the offſcouring of all things unto this time.

14 [10] I write not theſe things to ſhame you, but as my beloved children I admoniſh you.

A. D. 59.

15 For though ye have ten thouſand inſtructors in Chriſt, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Chriſt Jeſus I have begotten you through the goſpel.

16 Wherefore, I pray you, be ye followers of me.

17 For this cauſe have I ſent unto you Timotheus, which is my beloved ſon, and faithful in the Lord, which ſhall put you in remembrance of my [i] ways in Chriſt, as I teach every where in every church.

18 [11] Some are puffed up, as though I would not come unto you.

19 But I will come to you ſhortly, * if the Lord will, and will know, not the [k] words of them which are puffed up, but the power.

* Acts 19. 21. James 4. 15.

20 For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power.

21 [12] What will ye? ſhall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the [l] ſpirit of meekneſs?

CHAP. V.

1 That they have winked at him who committed inceſt with his mother-in-law, 2, 6 he ſheweth, ſhould cauſe them rather to be aſhamed, than to rejoice. 10 Such kind of wickedneſs is to be puniſhed with excommunication, 12 leſt others be infected with it.

IT is [1] heard certainly that there is fornication among you: and ſuch fornication as is not once named among the Gentiles, that one ſhould have his father's wife.

2 [2] And ye are puffed up, and have not rather ſorrowed, that he which hath done this deed, might be put from among you.

3 [3] For I verily as abſent in body, but preſent in [a] ſpirit, have determined already as though I were

---

[4] Firſt, becauſe that that which men judge in theſe caſes of their own brains, is no more to be accounted of, than when the unlearned do judge of wiſdom.

[b] Word for word, Day, after the manner of the ſpeech of the Cilicians.

[5] Secondly, ſaith he, how can ye judge how much or how little I am to be accounted of, ſeeing that I myſelf, which know myſelf better than you do, and which dare profeſs that I have walked in my vocation with a good conſcience, dare not yet notwithſtanding challenge any thing to myſelf: for I know that I am not unblameable, all this notwithſtanding: much leſs therefore ſhould I pleaſe myſelf as you do.

[c] I commit myſelf to the Lord's judgments.

[6] A third reaſon proceeding of a concluſion, as it were, out of the former reaſons. It is God's office to eſteem every man according to his value, becauſe he knoweth the ſecrets of the heart, which men, for the moſt part, are ignorant of. Therefore this judgment pertaineth not to you.

[d] One could not be praiſed above the reſt, but the other ſhould be blamed: and he mentioneth praiſe rather than diſpraiſe, for that the beginning of this ſore was this, that they gave more to ſome men than meet was.

[7] Having rejected their judgment, he ſetteth forth himſelf again as a ſingular example of modeſty, as one which concealing in this epiſtle thoſe factious teachers names, doubted not to put down his own name and Apollos's in their place, and took upon him as it were their ſhame: ſo far was he from preferring himſelf to any.

[e] By our example, which choſe rather to take other mens faults upon us, than to carp any by name.

[8] He ſheweth a good means to bridle pride: firſt, if thou conſider how rightly thou exempteſt thyſelf out of the number of others, ſeeing thou art a man thyſelf: again, if thou conſider that although thou have ſomething more than other men have, yet thou haſt it not but by God's bountifulneſs. And what wiſe man is he that will brag of another's goodneſs, and that againſt God?

[f] There is nothing then in us of nature, that is worthy of commendation: but all that we have we have, it of grace, which the Pelagians and half Pelagians will not confeſs.

[9] He deſcendeth to a moſt grave mock, to cauſe thoſe ambitious men to bluſh, even againſt their wills.

[g] He that will take a right view how like Paul and the pope are, who lyingly boaſteth that he is his ſucceſſor, let him compare the delicates of the popiſh court, with St. Paul's ſtate, as we ſee it here.

[h] Such as by ſweeping is gathered together.

[10] Moderating the ſharpneſs of his mock, he putteth them in mind to remember of whom they were begotten in Chriſt, and that they ſhould not doubt to follow him for an example, although he ſeem vile, according to the outward ſhew in reſpect of others, yet mighty by the efficacy of God's Spirit, as they had trial thereof in themſelves.

[i] What way and rule I follow every where in teaching the churches.

[11] Laſt of all he deſcendeth alſo to apoſtolic threatenings, but yet chiding them as a father, leſt by their diſorder he be conſtrained to come to puniſh ſome amongſt them.

[k] By words, he meaneth their painted and coloured kind of eloquence, againſt which he ſetteth the virtue of the Spirit.

[12] A paſſing over to another part of this epiſtle, wherein he reprehendeth moſt ſharply a very heinous offence, ſhewing the uſe of eccleſiaſtical correction.

[1] They are greatly to be reprehended which by ſuffering of wickedneſs, ſet forth the church of God to be mocked and ſcorned of infidels.

[2] There are none more proud than they that leaſt know themſelves.

[3] Excommunication ought not to be committed to one man's power, but muſt be done by the authority of the whole congregation, after that the matter is diligently examined.

[a] In mind, thought and will.

I were preſent, that he that hath thus done this thing,

4 When ye are gathered together, and my Spirit, in the [b] name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ſuch one, I ſay, [4] by the power of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

5 [5] Be [c] delivered unto Satan, for the [6] deſtruction of the fleſh, that the ſpirit may be ſaved in the day of the Lord Jeſus.

6 [7] Your rejoicing [d] is not good: know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 [8] Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new [e] lump, as ye are unleavened: for Chriſt our [f] paſſover is ſacrificed for us.

8 Therefore let us keep the [g] feaſt, not with old leaven, neither in the leaven of maliciouſneſs and wickedneſs: but with the unleavened bread of ſincerity and truth

9 [9] I wrote unto you in an epiſtle, that ye ſhould not company together with fornicators.

10 And not [h] altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or with extortioners, or with idolaters: for then ye muſt go out of the world.

11 But now I have written unto you, that ye company not together: if any that is called a brother, be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with ſuch one eat not.

12 [10] For what have I to do, to judge them alſo which are without? do ye not judge them which are within?

13 But God judgeth them that are without. Put away therefore from among yourſelves that wicked man.

CHAP. VI.

1 He envieth againſt their contentions in law matters, 6 wherewith they vexed one another under judges that were infidels, to the reproach of the goſpel: 9 and then ſharply threateneth fornicators.

DARE [1] [a] any of you, having buſineſs againſt another, be judged [b] under the unjuſt, [2] and not under the ſaints?

2 [3] Do ye not know, that the ſaints ſhall judge the world? If the world then ſhall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the ſmalleſt matters?

3 Know ye not that we ſhall judge the angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 [4] If then ye have [c] judgment of things pertaining to this life, ſet up them which are [d] leaſt eſteemed in the church.

5 [5] I ſpeak it to your ſhame. Is it ſo that there is not a wiſe man among you? no not one, that can judge between his brethren?

6 But a brother goeth to law with a brother, and that under the infidels.

[b] Calling upon Chriſt's name.

[4] There is no doubt but that judgment is ratified in heaven, wherein Chriſt himſelf ſitteth as judge.

[5] The excommunicated is delivered to the power of Satan, in that, that he is caſt out of the houſe of God.

[c] What it is to be delivered to Satan, the Lord himſelf declareth, when he ſaith, Let him be unto thee as an Heathen and Publican, Matt. 18. 17. that is to ſay, to be diſfranchiſed and put out of the right and liberty of the city of Chriſt, which is the church, without which Satan is lord and maſter.

[6] The end of excommunication is, not to caſt away the excommunicate, that he ſhould utterly periſh, but that he may be ſaved, to wit, that by this means his fleſh may be tamed, that he may learn to live to the Spirit.

[7] Another end of excommunication is, that other be not infected, and therefore it muſt of neceſſity be retained in the church, that the one be not infected by the other.

[d] Is naught, and not grounded upon good reaſon, as though you were excellent, and yet there is ſuch wickedneſs found amongſt you.

[8] By alluding to the ceremony of the paſſover, he exhorteth them to caſt out that unclean perſon from among them. In times paſt, ſaith he, it was not lawful for them which did celebrate the paſſover to eat leavened bread insomuch that he was holden as unclean, and unworthy to eat the paſſover, whoſoever had but taſted of leaven. Now all our whole life muſt be as it were the feaſt of unleavened bread, wherein all they that are partakers of that immaculate Lamb which is ſlain, muſt caſt out both of themſelves, and alſo out of their houſes and congregation, all impurity.

[e] By lump, he meaneth the whole body of the church, every member whereof muſt be unleavened bread, that is, be renewed in Spirit, by plucking away the old corruption.

[f] The Lamb of our paſſover.

[g] Let us lead our whole life, as it were, a continual feaſt, honeſtly, and uprightly.

[9] Now he ſpeaketh more generally: and that which he ſpake before of the inceſtuous perſon, he ſheweth that it pertaineth to others, which are known to be wicked, and ſuch as through their naughty life are a ſlander to the church, which ought alſo by lawful order to be caſt out of the community of the church. And making mention of eating of meat, either he meaneth thoſe feaſts of love whereat the ſupper of the Lord was received, or elſe their common uſage and manner of life: which is rightly to be taken, leſt any man ſhould think that either matrimony were broken by excommunication, or ſuch duties hindered and cut off thereby, as we owe one to another: children to their parents, ſubjects to their rulers, ſervants to their maſters, and neighbour to neighbour, to win one another unto God.

[h] If you ſhould utterly abſtain from ſuch mens company, you ſhould go out of the world: therefore I ſpeak of them which are in the very boſom of the church, which muſt be called home by diſcipline, and out of them which are without, with whom you muſt labour, by all means poſſible, to bring them to Chriſt.

[10] Such as are falſe brethren ought to be caſt out of the congregation; as for them which are without, they muſt be left to the judgment of God.

[1] The third queſtion is of civil judgments. Whether it be lawful for one faithful to draw another before the judgment-ſeat of an infidel? He anſwereth, that it is not lawful, for offence ſake, for it is not evil of itſelf.

[a] As if he ſaid, Are you become ſo impudent, that you are not aſhamed to make the goſpel a laughing-ſtock to profane men?

[2] He addeth, that he doth not forbid that one neighbour may go to law with another, if need ſo require, but yet under holy judges.

[3] He gathereth by a compariſon that the faithful cannot ſeek to infidels to be judged, without great injury done to the ſaints, ſeeing that God himſelf will make the ſaints judges of the world, and of the devils, with his Son Chriſt: much more ought they to judge theſe light and ſmall cauſes which may be by equity and good conſcience determined.

[4] The concluſion, wherein he preſcribeth a remedy for this miſchief: to wit, if they end their private affairs between themſelves by choſen arbiters out of the church: for which matter and purpoſe, the leaſt of you, ſaith he, is ſufficient. Therefore he condemneth not judgment-ſeats, but ſheweth what is expedient for the circumſtance of the time, and that without any diminiſhing of the right of the magiſtrate: for he ſpeaketh not of judgments which are practiſed betwixt the faithful and the infidels, neither of public judgments, but of controverſies which may be ended by private arbiters.

[c] Courts and places of judgments.

[d] Even the moſt abject among you.

[5] He applieth the general propoſition to a particular, always calling them back to this, to take away from them that falſe opinion of their own excellency, from whence all theſe miſchiefs ſprang.

[6] Now he goeth further alſo; and although by granting them private arbiters, out of the congregation of the faithful, he do not ſimply condemn, but rather eſtabliſh private judgments, ſo that they be exerciſed without offence, yet he ſheweth that if they were ſuch as they ought to be, and as it were to be wiſhed, they ſhould not need to uſe that remedy neither.

[7] This pertaineth chiefly to the other part of the reprehenſion, to wit, that they went to law even under infidels, whereas they ſhould have rather ſuffered any loſs, than to have given that offence. But yet this is generally true, that we ought rather to depart from our right, than try the uttermoſt of the law haſtily, and upon an affection to revenge an injury. But yet the Corinthians cared for neither, and therefore he ſaith, that they muſt repent, unleſs they will be ſhut out from the inheritance of God.

[8] Now he prepareth himſelf to paſs over to the fourth treatiſe of this epiſtle, which concerneth matters indifferent, debating this matter firſt, how men may well uſe women or not: which queſtion hath three branches, fornication, matrimony, and a ſingle life. As for fornication, he utterly condemneth it. And marriage he commandeth to ſome, as a good and neceſſary remedy for them; to others he leaveth it free. And other ſome he diſſuadeth from it, not as unlawful, but as diſcommodious, and that not without exception. As for the ſingleneſs of life (under which alſo I comprehend virginity) he enjoineth it to no man: yet he perſuadeth men unto it, but not for itſelf, but for another reſpect, neither all men, nor without exception. And being about to ſpeak againſt fornication, he beginneth with a general reprehenſion of thoſe vices, wherewith that rich and riotous city moſt abounded: warning and teaching them earneſtly, that repentance is inſeparably joined with forgiveneſs of ſins, and ſanctification with juſtification.

[f] In Jeſus.

[9] Secondly, he ſheweth that the Corinthians do ſimply offend in matters indifferent: Firſt, becauſe they abuſed them: next, becauſe they uſed indifferent things, without any diſcretion, ſeeing the uſe of them ought to be brought to the rule of charity: and that he doth not uſe them aright, which immoderately abuſeth them, and ſo becometh a ſlave unto them.

[g] Whatſoever: but this general word muſt be reſtrained to things that are indifferent.

[h] He is in ſubjection to things that are indifferent, whatſoever he be that thinketh he may not be without them: which is a flattering kind of ſlavery under a colour of liberty, which ſeizeth upon ſuch men.

[10] Secondarily, becauſe they counted many things for indifferent, which were of themſelves unlawful, as fornication, which they numbered amongſt mere natural and lawful deſires, as well as meat and drink. Therefore the apoſtle ſheweth, that they are utterly unlike: for meats, ſaith he, were made for the neceſſary uſe of man's life, which is not perpetual: For both meats, and all this manner of nouriſhing, are quickly aboliſhed. But we muſt not ſo think of the uncleanneſs of fornication, for which the body is not made, but on the contrary ſide is ordained to pureneſs, as appeareth by this, that it is conſecrated to Chriſt, even as Chriſt alſo is given us of his Father, to quicken our bodies with that virtue, wherewith he alſo roſe again.

[12] A proof of the ſame argument. A harlot and Chriſt are clean contrary; ſo are the fleſh and the Spirit. Therefore he that is one with an harlot (which is done by carnal copulation of their bodies) cannot be one with Chriſt, which unity is pure and ſpiritual.

[i] Moſes doth not ſpeak theſe words of fornication, but of marriage: but ſeeing that fornication is the corrupting of marriage, and both of them is a carnal and fleſhly copulation, we cannot ſay that the apoſtle abuſeth his teſtimony. Again, Moſes hath not this word (two) but it is very well expreſſed both here and in Matt. 19. 5. becauſe he ſpeaketh only but of man and wife: whereupon the opinion of them that vouch it to be lawful to have many wives, is beaten down: for he that companieth with many, is ſundered as it were into many parts.

[13] Another argument why fornication is to be eſchewed, becauſe it defileth the body with a peculiar kind of filthineſs.

[14] The third argument. Becauſe a fornicator is ſacrilegious, for that our bodies are conſecrate to God.

[15] The fourth argument. Becauſe we are not our own men, to give ourſelves to any other, much leſs to Satan and the fleſh, ſeeing that God himſelf hath bought us, and that with a great price, to the end that both in body and ſoul we ſhould ſerve to his glory.

[1] He teacheth concerning marriage, that although a ſingle life hath his commodities, which he will declare afterwards, yet that marriage is neceſſary for avoiding of fornication: but ſo that neither one man may have many wives, nor any wife many huſbands.

[a] Touching thoſe matters whereof you wrote unto me.

[b] Commodious, and (as we ſay) expedient. For marriage bringeth many griefs with it, and that by reaſon of the corruption of our firſt eſtate.

A. D. 59. man have his wife, and let every woman have her own huſband.

*1Pet.3.7. 3 * [2] Let the huſband give unto the wife [c] due benevolence, and likewiſe alſo the wife unto the huſband.

4 [3] The wife hath not the power of her own body, but the huſband: and likewiſe alſo the huſband hath not the power of his own body, but the wife,

5 Defraud not one another, [4] except it be with conſent for a time, that ye may [d] give yourſelves to faſting and prayer, and again come together, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 [5] But I ſpeak this by permiſſion, not by commandment.

7 For I [e] would that all men were even as I myſelf am: but every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.

8 [6] Therefore I ſay unto the [f] unmarried, and unto the widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I do.

9 But if they cannot abſtain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to [g] burn.

*Matt.5.32. and 19.9. Mark 10.11, 12. Luke 16.18. 10 * [7] And unto the married I command, not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her huſband.

11 But and if ſhe depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled unto her huſband, and let not the huſband put away his wife.

12 [8] But to the remnant I ſpeak, and not the Lord, If any brother have a wife, that believeth not, if ſhe be content to dwell with him, let him not forſake her.

13 And the woman which hath an huſband that believeth not, if he be content to dwell with her, let her not forſake him, A. D. 59.

14 [9] For the unbelieving huſband is [h] ſanctified to the [i] wife, and the unbelieving wife is ſanctified to the [k] huſband, elſe were your children unclean: but now are they [l] holy.

15 [10] But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart: a brother or a ſiſter is not in ſubjection in [m] ſuch things: [11] but God hath called us in peace.

16 For what knoweſt thou, O wife, whether thou ſhalt ſave thine huſband? Or what knoweſt thou, O man, whether thou ſhalt ſave thy wife?

17 [12] But as God hath diſtributed to every man, as the Lord hath [n] called every one, ſo let him walk: and ſo ordain I in all churches.

18 [13] Is any man called being circumciſed? let him not [o] gather his uncircumciſion: is any called uncircumciſed? let him not be circumciſed.

19 Circumciſion is nothing, and uncircumciſion is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God.

20 * Let every man abide in the ſame vocation wherein he was called. *1Tim.6.1.

21 Art thou called being a ſervant? [p] care not for it: but yet if thou mayeſt be free, uſe it rather.

22 For he that is called in the [q] Lord, being a ſervant, is the Lord's free man: likewiſe alſo he that is called being free, is Chriſt's ſervant.

[2] Secondly, he ſheweth that the parties married muſt with ſingular affection, entirely love one the other.

[c] This word (due) containeth all kind of benevolence, though he ſpeak more of one ſort than of the other, in that that followeth.

[3] Thirdly, he warneth them, that they are each in other's power, as touching the body, ſo that they may not defraud one another.

[4] He addeth an exception, unleſs the one abſtain from the other by mutual conſent, that they may the better give themſelves to prayer, wherein notwithſtanding, he warneth them to conſider what is expedient, leſt by this long breaking off, as it were from marriage, they be ſtirred up to incontinency.

[5] Fifthly, he teacheth that marriage is not ſimply neceſſary for all men, but for them which have not the gift of continency, and this gift is by a peculiar grace of God.

[e] I wiſh.

[6] Sixthly, he giveth the ſelf-ſame admonition touching the ſecond marriage, to wit, that a ſingle life is to be allowed but for ſuch as have the gift of continency; otherwiſe they ought to marry again, that their conſcience may be at peace.

[f] This whole place is flat againſt them which condemn ſecond marriages.

[g] So to burn with luſt, that either the will yieldeth to the temptation, or elſe we cannot call upon God with a quiet conſcience.

[7] Seventhly, he forbiddeth contentions, and publiſhing of divorces, (for he ſpeaketh not here of the fault of whoredom, which was then death even by the law of the Romans alſo) whereby he affirmeth that the band of marriage is not diſſolved, and that from Chriſt's mouth.

[8] Eighthly, he affirmeth that thoſe marriages which are already contracted between a faithful, and an unfaithful, or infidel, are firm: ſo that the faithful may not forſake the unfaithful.

[9] He anſwereth an objection: but the faithful is defiled by the ſociety of the unfaithful. The apoſtle denieth that, and proveth, that the faithful man with good conſcience may uſe the veſſel of his unfaithful wife, by this, that their children which are born of them, are accounted holy (that is, contained within the promiſe) for it is ſaid to all the faithful, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed.

[h] The godlineſs of the wife is of more force, to cauſe their coupling together to be accounted holy, than the infidelity of the huſband is, to prophane the marriage.

[i] The infidel is not ſanctified or made holy in his own perſon, but in reſpect of his wife he is ſanctified to her.

[k] To the faithful huſband.

[l] This place deſtroyeth the opinion of them, that would not have children to be baptized, and their opinion alſo, that make baptiſm the very cauſe of ſalvation. For the children of the faithful are holy, by virtue of the covenant, even before baptiſm, and baptiſm is added as the ſeal of that holineſs.

[10] He anſwereth to a queſtion: What if the unfaithful forſake the faithful? then is the faithful free, ſaith he, becauſe he is forſaken of the unfaithful.

[m] When any ſuch thing falleth out.

[11] Leſt any man upon pretence of this liberty ſhould give an occaſion to the unfaithful to depart, he giveth to underſtand, that marriage contracted with an infidel, ought peaceably to be kept, that if it be poſſible, the infidel may be won to the faith.

[12] Taking occaſion by that which he ſaid of the bondage and liberty of matrimony, he digreſſeth to a general doctrine concerning the outward ſtate and condition of man's life, as circumciſion and uncircumciſion, ſervitude and liberty: warning every man to generally live with a contented mind in the Lord, what ſtate or condition ſoever he be in, becauſe that thoſe outward things, as to be circumciſed or uncircumciſed, to be bond or free, are not of the ſubſtance (as they term it) of the kingdom of heaven.

[13] Notwithſtanding he giveth us to underſtand, that in theſe examples all are not of like ſort: becauſe that circumciſion not ſimply of itſelf is to be deſired, but ſuch as are bound may deſire to be free. Therefore herein only they are equal, that the kingdom of God conſiſteth not in them; and therefore theſe are no hinderances to obey God.

[o] He is ſaid to gather his uncircumciſion, who by the help of a chirurgion, recovereth an upper ſkin: which is done by drawing the ſkin with an inſtrument, to make it to cover the nut. Celſus in his 7th book and 25 chap.

[p] As though this calling were too unworthy a calling for Chriſt.

[q] He that is in ſtate of a ſervant, and is called to be a Chriſtian.

A. D. 59.

* Ch. 6. 20. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

23 * [14] Ye are bought with a price: be not the ſervants of men.

24 [15] Brethren, let every man, wherein he was called, therein abide with [r] God.

25 [16] Now concerning virgins, I have no commandment of the Lord: but I give mine [s] advice as [t] one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful.

26 I ſuppoſe then [u] this to be good for the [x] preſent neceſſity: I mean that it is good for a man ſo to be.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? ſeek not to be looſed: art thou looſed from a wife? ſeek not a wife.

28 But if thou takeſt a wife, thou ſinneſt not: and if a virgin marry, ſhe ſinneth not: nevertheleſs, ſuch ſhall have trouble in the [y] fleſh: but I [z] ſpare you.

29 And this I ſay, brethren, becauſe the time is [a] ſhort, hereafter, that both they which have wives, be as though they had none:

30 And they that [b] weep, as though they wept not: and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not: and they that buy, as though they poſſeſſed not:

31 And they that uſe this [c] world, as though they uſed it not: for the [d] faſhion of this world goeth away.

32 And I would have you without care. The unmarried careth for the things of the Lord, how he may pleaſe the Lord:

33 But he that is married, [e] careth for the things of the world, how he may pleaſe his wife.

34 There is difference alſo between a virgin and a wife: the unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhe may be holy, both in body, and in [f] ſpirit: but ſhe that is married, careth for the things of the world, how ſhe may pleaſe her huſband.

A. D. 59.

35 And this I ſpeak for your own [g] commodity, not to tangle you in a ſnare, but that ye follow that which is honeſt, and that ye may cleave faſt unto the Lord without ſeparation.

36 [17] But if any man think that it is uncomely for his virgin, if ſhe paſs the flower of her age, and need ſo require, let him do what he will, he [h] ſinneth not: let them be married.

37 Nevertheleſs, he that ſtandeth firm in his [i] heart, that he hath no [k] need, but hath power over his own will, and hath ſo decreed in his heart, that he will keep his virgin, he doeth well.

38 So then he that giveth her to marriage, doeth well: but he that giveth her not to marriage, doeth [l] better.

39 [18] The wife is bound by the [m] law, as long as her huſband * liveth: but if her huſband be dead, ſhe is at liberty to marry with whom ſhe will, only in the [n] Lord. * Rom. 7. 1.

40 But ſhe is more bleſſed, if ſhe ſo abide, in my judgment: * and I think that I have alſo the Spirit of God. * 1 Theſſ. 4. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

1 From this place unto the end of the tenth chapter, he willeth them not to be at the Gentiles prophane banquets. 10 He reſtraineth the abuſe of chriſtian liberty, 11 and ſheweth that knowledge muſt be tempered with charity.

AND [1] as touching things ſacrificed unto idols: we know that we [a] all have knowledge:

[14] He ſheweth the reaſon of the unlikeneſs, becauſe that he that deſireth to be circumciſed, maketh himſelf ſubject to man's tradition, and not to God. And this may be much more underſtood of ſuperſtitions, which ſome do fooliſhly account for things indifferent.

[15] A repetition of the general doctrine.

[r] So purely and from the heart, that your doings may be approved before God.

[16] He enjoineth virginity to no man, yet he perſuadeth and praiſeth it for another reſpect, to wit, both for the neceſſity of the preſent time, becauſe the faithful could ſcarce abide in any place, and uſe the commodities of this preſent life, and therefore ſuch as were not troubled with families, might be the readier, and alſo for the cares of this life, which marriage draweth with it of neceſſity, ſo that they cannot but have their minds diſtracted: and this hath place in women eſpecially.

[s] The circumſtances conſidered, this I counſel you.

[t] It is I that ſpeak this which I am minded to ſpeak: and the truth is, I am a man, but yet worthy credit, for I have obtained of the Lord to be ſuch an one.

[u] To remain a virgin.

[x] For the neceſſity which the ſaints are daily ſubject unto, who are continually toſſed up and down, ſo that their eſtate may ſeem moſt unfit for marriage, were it not that the weakneſs of the fleſh inforced them to it.

[y] By the (Fleſh) he underſtandeth what things ſoever belong to this preſent life, for marriage bringeth with it many diſcommodities: ſo that he bendeth more to a ſole life, not becauſe it is a ſervice more agreeable to God than marriage is, but for thoſe diſcommodities, which (if it were poſſible) he would wiſh all men to be void of, that they might give themſelves to God only.

[z] I would your weakneſs were provided for.

[a] For we are now in the latter end of the world.

[b] By weeping, the Hebrews underſtand all adverſity; and by joy, all proſperity.

[c] Thoſe things which God giveth us here.

[d] The guiſe, and ſhape, and faſhion: whereby he ſheweth us, that there is nothing in this world that continueth.

[e] They that are married, have their wits drawn hither and thither, and therefore if any man have the gift of continency, it is more commodious for him to live alone: but they that are married may care for the things of the Lord alſo, Clem. Strom. 3.

[f] Mind.

[g] He meaneth that he will enforce no man, either to marry or not to marry, but to ſhew them barely what kind of life is moſt commodious.

[17] Now he turneth himſelf to the parents, in whoſe power and authority their children are, warning them, that according to the former doctrine, they conſider what is meet and convenient for their children, that they neither deprive them of the neceſſary remedy againſt incontinency, nor conſtrain them to marriage, whereas neither their will doth lead them, nor any neceſſity urgeth them. And again he praiſeth virginity, but of itſelf, and not in all.

[h] He doth well: for ſo he expoundeth it, ver. 38.

[i] Reſolveth with himſelf.

[k] That the weakneſs of his daughter inforceth him not, or any other matter, but that he may ſafely keep her a virgin ſtill.

[l] Provideth more commodiouſly for his children, and that not ſimply, but by reaſon of ſuch conditions as are beforementioned.

[18] That which he ſpake of a widower, he ſpeaketh now of a widow, to wit, that ſhe may marry again, ſo that ſhe do it in the fear of God: and yet he diſſembleth not, but ſaith, that if ſhe remain ſtill a widow, ſhe ſhall be void of many cares.

[m] By the law of marriage.

[n] Religiouſly, and in the fear of God.

[1] He entereth to intreat of another kind of things indifferent, to wit, of things offered to idols, or the uſe of fleſh ſo offered and ſacrificed. And firſt of all he removeth all thoſe things which the Corinthians pretended in uſing things offered to idols without any reſpect. Firſt of all, they affirmed, that this difference of meats was for the unſkilful men, but as for them they knew well enough the benefit of Chriſt, which cauſeth all theſe things to be clean to them that are clean. Be it ſo, ſaith Paul: be it that we are all ſufficiently inſtructed in the knowledge of Chriſt; I ſay, notwithſtanding that, we muſt not ſimply reſt in this knowledge. The reaſon is, that unleſs our knowledge be tempered with charity, it doth not only not avail, but alſo doth much hurt, becauſe it is the miſtreſs of pride: nay, it doth not ſo much as deſerve the name of godly knowledge, if it be ſeparate from the love of God, and therefore from the love of our neighbour.

[a] This general word is to be abridged, as appeareth, ver. 7. for there is a kind of taunt in it, as we may perceive by the next verſe.

A. D. 59.

ledge: knowledge [b] puffeth up, but love [c] edifieth.

2 Now if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the ſame is known of him.

4 [2] Concerning therefore the eating of things ſacrificed unto [d] idols, we know that an idol is [e] nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.

5 For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven, or in earth (as there be many gods, and many lords)

6 Yet unto us there is but one God, which is that Father, [f] of whom are all things, and we [g] in him: and * [h] one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, [i] by whom are all things, and we by him.

* John 13. 13. Ch. 12. 3.

7 [3] But every man hath not that knowledge: for [4] many having [k] conſcience of the idol, until this hour, eat as a thing ſacrificed unto the idol, and ſo their conſcience, being weak, is defiled.

8 [5] But meat maketh us not acceptable to God: for neither if we eat, we have the more: neither if we eat not, have we the leſs.

9 But take heed, leſt by any means this power of yours be an occaſion of falling, to them that are weak.

10 [6] For if any man ſee thee which haſt knowledge, ſit at meat in the idol's temple, ſhall not the conſcience of him which is weak, be boldened to eat thoſe things which are ſacrificed to idols?

A. D. 59.

11 [7] And through thy knowledge ſhall the * weak brother periſh, for whom Chriſt died.

* Rom. 14. 15.

12 [8] Now when ye ſin ſo againſt the brethren, and wound their weak conſcience, ye ſin againſt Chriſt.

13 * [9] Wherefore if meat offend my brother, I will eat no fleſh while the world ſtandeth, that I may not offend my brother.

* Rom. 14. 21.

CHAP. IX.

1 He declareth, that from the liberty which the Lord gave him, 15 he willingly abſtained, 18, 22 leſt in things indifferent he ſhould offend any. 24 He ſheweth that our life is like unto a race.

AM [1] I not an apoſtle? Am I not free? [2] Have I not ſeen Jeſus Chriſt our Lord? Are ye not [a] my work in the Lord?

2 If I be not an apoſtle unto other, yet doubtleſs I am unto you: for ye are the [b] ſeal of mine apoſtleſhip in the Lord.

3 [3] My defence to them that [c] examine me, is this,

---

[b] Miniſtereth occaſion of vanity and pride: becauſe it is void of charity.

[c] Inſtructeth our neighbour.

[2] The application of that anſwer to things offered to idols: I grant, ſaith he, that an idol is indeed a vain imagination, and that there is but one God and Lord, and therefore that meat cannot be made either holy or profane by the idol: but it followeth not therefore that a man may without reſpect uſe thoſe meats as any other.

[d] This Word (Idol) in this place is taken for an image which is made to repreſent ſome godhead, that worſhip might be given unto it: whereupon came the word (Idolatry) that is to ſay, Image ſervice.

[e] It is a vain dream.

[f] When the Father is diſtinguiſhed from the Son, he is named the beginning of all things.

[g] We have our being in him.

[h] But as the Father is called Lord, ſo is the Son, God: therefore this word (One) doth not reſpect the perſons, but the nature.

[i] This word (By) doth not ſignify the inſtrumental cauſe, but the efficient: for the Father and the Son work together, which is not ſo to be taken, that we make two cauſes, ſeeing they have both but one nature, though they be diſtinct perſons.

[3] The reaſon why that followeth not is this: becauſe there are many men which do not know that which you know. Now the judgment of outward things depends not only upon your conſcience, but upon the conſcience of them that behold you, and thererore your actions muſt be applied not only to your knowledge, but alſo to the ignorance of your brethren.

[4] An applying of the reaſon: there are many which cannot eat of things offered to idols, but with a wavering conſcience, becauſe they think them to be unclean: therefore if by thy example they enterpriſe to do that which inwardly they think diſpleaſeth God, their conſcience is defiled with their eating, and thou haſt been the occaſion of this miſchief.

[k] By conſcience of the idol, he meaneth the ſecret judgment that they had within themſelves, whereby they thought all things unclean that were offered to idols, and therefore they could not uſe them with good conſcience. For this force hath conſcience, that if it be good, it maketh things indifferent good; and if it be evil, it maketh them evil.

[5] A preventing of an objection: Why then, ſhall we therefore be deprived of our liberty? Nay, ſaith the apoſtle, you ſhall loſe no part of chriſtianity although you abſtain for your brethren's ſake; as alſo if ye receive the meat it maketh you no whit the more holy: for our commendation before God conſiſteth not in meats: but to uſe our liberty with offence of our brethren, is an abuſe of liberty, the true uſe thereof is clean contrary, to wit, ſo to uſe it, as in uſing of it we have conſideration of our weak brethren.

[6] Another plain explication of the ſame reaſon, propounding the example of the ſitting down at the table in the idol's temple, which thing the Corinthians did evil account of among things indifferent, becauſe it is ſimply forbidden for the circumſtance of the place, although offence do ceaſe, as it ſhall be declared in his place.

[7] An amplification of the argument taken both of compariſon and contraries: Thou wretched man, ſaith he, pleaſing thyſelf with thy knowledge, which indeed is none, (for if thou hadſt true knowledge, thou wouldſt not ſit down to meat in an idol's temple) wilt thou deſtroy thy brother, hardening his weak conſcience by thine example to do evil, for whoſe ſalvation Chriſt himſelf hath died?

[8] Another amplification: Such offending of our weak brethren, redoundeth unto Chriſt, and therefore let not theſe men think that they have to do only with their brethren.

[9] The concluſion, which Paul conceiveth in his own perſon, that he might not ſeem to exact that of others, which he will not be firſt ſubject to himſelf: I had rather, (ſaith he) abſtain for ever from all kind of fleſh, than give occaſion of ſin to any of my brethren, much leſs would I refuſe in any certain place or time for my brother's ſake not to eat fleſh offered to idols.

[1] Before he proceedeth any further in his propoſed matter of things offered to idols, he would ſhew the cauſe of all this miſchief, and alſo take it away: to wit, that the Corinthians thought themſelves not bound to depart from a jot of their liberty for any man's pleaſure. Therefore he propoundeth himſelf for an example, and that in a matter moſt neceſſary. And yet he ſpeaketh ſeverally of both, but firſt of his own perſon. If (ſaith he) you alledge for yourſelves, that you are free, and therefore will uſe your liberty, am not I alſo free, ſeeing I am an apoſtle?

[2] He proveth his apoſtleſhip by the effects, in that he was appointed of Chriſt himſelf, and the authority of his function was ſufficiently confirmed to him amongſt them by their converſion. And all theſe things he ſetteth before their eyes, to make them aſhamed, for that they would not, in the leaſtwiſe that might be, debaſe themſelves for the weak's ſake, whereas the apoſtle himſelf did all that he could to win them to God, when they were utterly reprobate and without God.

[a] By the Lord.

[b] As a ſeal, whereby it appeareth ſufficiently that God is the author of mine apoſtleſhip.

[3] He addeth this by the way, as if he would ſay, So far it is off, that you may doubt of my apoſtleſhip, that I uſe to refute them which call it into controverſy, by oppoſing thoſe things which the Lord hath done by me amongſt you.

[c] Which, like judges, examine me and my doings.

A. D. 59.

4 [4] Have we not power to [d] eat and to drink?

5 Or have we not power to lead about a wife being a [e] ſiſter, as well as the reſt of the apoſtles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power [f] not to work?

7 [5] Who [g] goeth a warfare at any time at his own coſt? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 [6] Say I theſe things [h] according to man? ſaith not the law the ſame alſo?

*Deut. 25. 4. 1 Tim. 5. 18.

9 For it is written in the law of Moſes, * Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn: doth God take care for [i] oxen?

10 Either ſaith he it not altogether for our ſakes? For our ſakes no doubt it is written, that he which eareth, ſhould ear in hope: and that he that threſheth in hope, ſhould be partaker of his hope.

* Rom. 15. 27.

11 * [7] If we have ſown unto you ſpiritual things, is it a great thing if we reap your carnal things?

12 [8] If others with you be partakers of this [k] power, are not we rather? nevertheleſs we have not uſed this power: but ſuffer all things, that we ſhould not hinder the goſpel of Chriſt.

*Deut. 18. 1.

13 [9] Do ye not know that they which miniſter about the * holy things, eat of the [l] things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar, are [m] partakers with the altar?

14 So alſo hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the goſpel, ſhould live [n] of the goſpel.

15 But I have uſed none of theſe things: [10] neither wrote I theſe things, that it ſhould be ſo done unto me: for it were better for me to die, than that any man ſhould make my rejoicing vain.

A. D. 59.

16 For though I preach the goſpel, I have nothing to rejoice of: for neceſſity is laid upon me, and woe is unto me, if I preach not the goſpel.

17 For if I do it willingly, I have a reward: but if I do it againſt my will, notwithſtanding the diſpenſation is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? verily that when I preach the goſpel, I make the goſpel of Chriſt [o] free, that I abuſe not my authority in the goſpel.

19 For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myſelf ſervant unto all men, that I might win the more.

*Acts 16. 3. Gal. 2. 3.

20 * And unto the Jews, I become as a Jew, that I may win the Jews: to them that are under the [p] law, as though I were under the law, that I may win them that are under the law:

21 To them that are without law, as though I were without law (when I am not without law as pertaining to God, but am in the law through Chriſt), that I may win them that are without law:

22 To the weak I become as weak, that I may win the weak: I am made all things to [q] all men, that I might by all means ſave ſome.

23 And this I do for the goſpel's ſake, that I might be partaker thereof with [r] you.

24 [11] Know ye not, that they which run in a race, run all, yet one receiveth the prize? ſo run that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that proveth maſteries, [s] abſtaineth from all things: and they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we for an incorruptible.

26 I there-

---

[4] Now touching the matter itſelf, he ſaith, Seeing that I am free, and truly an apoſtle, why may not I (I ſay not, eat of all things offered to idols, but) be maintained by my labours, yea, and keep my wife alſo, as the reſidue of the apoſtles lawfully do, as by name, John and James, the Lord's couſins, and Peter himſelf?

[d] Upon the expence of the church.

[f] Not live by the works of our hands.

[5] That he may not ſeem to burden the apoſtles, he ſheweth that it is juſt that they do, by an argument of compariſon, ſeing that ſoldiers live by their wages, and huſbandmen by the fruits of their labours, and ſhepherds by that that cometh of their flocks.

[g] Uſeth to go a warfare.

[6] Secondly, he bringeth forth the authority of God's inſtitution by an argument of compariſon.

[h] Have I no better ground than the common cuſtom of men?

[i] Was it God's proper drift to provide for oxen, when he made this law? for otherwiſe there is not the ſmalleſt thing in the world, but God hath a care of it.

[7] An aſſumption of the arguments with an amplification, for neither in ſo doing do we require a reward meet for our deſerts.

[8] Another argument of great force: others are nouriſhed amongſt you, therefore it was lawful for me, yea, rather for me than any other: and yet I refuſed it, and had rather ſtill ſuffer any diſcommodity, than the goſpel of Chriſt ſhould be hindered.

[k] The word ſignifieth, a right and intereſt, whereby he giveth us to underſtand that the miniſters of the word muſt of right and duty be found of the church.

[9] Laſt of all, he bringeth forth the expreſs law concerning the nouriſhing of the Levites: which privilege notwithſtanding he will not uſe.

[l] This is ſpoken by the figure Metonymia, for, of thoſe things that are offered in the temple.

[m] Are partakers with the altar, in dividing the ſacrifice.

[n] Becauſe they preach the goſpel. It followeth by this place, that Paul gat no living, neither would have any other man get, by any commodities of maſſes, or any other ſuch ſuperſtitious trumperies.

[10] He taketh away occaſion of ſuſpicion by the way, that it might not be thought that he wrote this as though he challenged his wages that was not paid him. Nay, ſaith he, I had rather die than not to continue in this purpoſe to preach the goſpel freely. For I am bound to preach the goſpel, ſeeing that the Lord hath enjoined me this office: but unleſs I do it willingly, and for the love of God, nothing is to be allowed that I do. If I had rather that the goſpel ſhould be evil ſpoken of, than that I ſhould not require my wages, then would it appear that I took theſe pains not ſo much for the goſpel's ſake, as for my gains and advantages. But I ſay this were not to uſe, but abuſe my right and liberty: Therefore not only in this thing, but alſo in all other (as much as I could) I am made all things to all men, that I might win them to Chriſt, and might together with them be won to Chriſt.

[p] The word (Law) in this place, muſt be reſtrained to the ceremonial law.

[q] In matters that are indifferent, which may be done or not done with a good conſcience: as if he ſaid, I changed myſelf into all faſhions, that by all means I might ſave ſome.

[r] That both I and they to whom I preach the goſpel, may receive fruit by the goſpel.

[11] He bringeth in another cauſe of this miſchief, to wit, that they were given to gluttony, for there were ſolemn banquets of ſacrifices, and the riot of the prieſts was always too much celebrated and kept. Therefore it was hard for them which were accuſtomed to riotouſneſs, eſpecially when they pretended the liberty of the goſpel, to be reſtrained from theſe banquets: but contrariwiſe the apoſtle calleth them by a pleaſant ſimilitude, and alſo by his own example, to ſobriety and mortification of the fleſh, ſhewing that they cannot be fit to run or wreſtle (as then the games of Iſthmies were) which pamper up their bodies: and therefore affirming that they can have no reward, unleſs they take another courſe and trade of life.

[s] Uſeth a moſt exquiſite diet.

A. D. 59. 26 I therefore ſo run, not as uncertainly: ſo fight I, not as one that beateth the air.

27 But I beat down my [t] body, and bring it into ſubjection, leſt by any means after that I have preached to other, I myſelf ſhould be [u] reproved.

CHAP. X.

1 If God ſpared not the Jews, neither will he ſpare thoſe who are of like condition, 3, 4 touching the outward ſigns of his grace. 14 That it is abſurd, that ſuch ſhould be partakers of the table of the devils, who are partakers of the Lord's ſupper. 24 To have conſideration of our neighbour in things indifferent.

MOREOVER, [1] brethren, I would not that ye ſhould be ignorant, that all our [a] fathers were under * that cloud, and all paſſed through that * ſea: * Exod. 13. 21. Num. 9. 18. * Exod. 14. 22.

2 [2] And were all [b] baptized unto [c] Moſes, in that cloud, and in that ſea.

3 * And did all eat the [d] ſame ſpiritual [e] meat: * Exod. 16. 15.

4 * And did all drink the ſame ſpiritual drink (for they drank of the ſpiritual rock that [f] followed them: and the rock was [g] Chriſt) * Exod. 17. 6. Num. 20. 10. and 21. 16.

5 But with many of them God was not pleaſed: for they were * overthrown in the wilderneſs. * Num. 26. 56.

6 [3] Now theſe things are our [h] enſamples, to the intent that we ſhould not luſt after evil things, * as they alſo luſted. * Num. 11. 4 and 26. 64. Pſalm 106. 14.

7 Neither be ye idolaters, as were ſome of them: as it is written, * The people ſat down to eat and drink, and roſe up to play. * Exod. 32. 6.

8 Neither let us commit fornication, as ſome of them committed fornication, and fell in one * day three and twenty thouſand. * Num. 25. 9.

9 Neither let us tempt [i] Chriſt, as ſome of them alſo tempted him, and * were deſtroyed of ſerpents. * Num. 21. 6. Pſ. 106. 14.

10 Neither murmur ye, [as ſome of them * alſo murmured, and were deſtroyed of the deſtroyer. * Num. 14. 37. Judg. 8. 24.

11 Now all theſe things came unto them for enſamples, and were written to admoniſh us, upon whom the [k] ends of the world are come.

12 [4] Wherefore let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you, but ſuch as appertaineth to [l] man: and God is faithful, which will not ſuffer you to be tempted above that you be able, but will even [m] give the iſſue with the temptation, that ye may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my beloved, flee from idolatry.

15 [5] I ſpeak as unto them which have underſtanding: judge ye what I ſay.

16 The cup of [n] bleſſing which we bleſs, is it not the [o] communion of the blood of Chriſt? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Chriſt?

17 For we that are many, are one bread and one body, becauſe we are all partakers of one bread.

18 Behold Iſrael, which is after the [p] fleſh: are not they which eat of the ſacrifices, [q] partakers of the altar? 19 What

[t] The old man, which ſtriveth againſt the Spirit.

[u] This word (Reproved) it not ſet contrary to the word (Elect) but as contrary to the word (Approved) when we ſee one by experience not to be ſuch an one as he ought to be.

[1] He ſetteth out that which he ſaid, laying before them an example of the horrible judgment of God againſt them which had in effect the ſelf-ſame pledges of the ſame adoption and ſalvation that we have: and yet notwithſtanding when they gave themſelves to idols feaſts, periſhed in the wilderneſs, being horribly and manifoldly puniſhed. Now, moreover and beſides, that theſe things are fitly ſpoken againſt them which frequented idols feaſts, the ſame alſo ſeem to be alledged to this end and purpoſe, becauſe many men are thus minded, that thoſe things are not of ſuch great weight that God will be angry with them if they uſe them, ſo that they frequent Chriſtian aſſemblies and be baptized, and receive the communion, and confeſs Chriſt.

[a] Paul ſpeaketh this in reſpect of the covenant, and not in reſpect of the perſons, ſaving in general.

[2] In effect, the ſacraments of the old fathers were all one with ours, for they reſpected Chriſt only, who offered himſelf unto them in divers ſhadows.

[b] All of them were baptized with the outward ſign, but not in deed, wherewith God cannot be charged, but they themſelves.

[c] Moſes being their guide.

[d] The ſame that we do.

[e] Manna, which was a ſpiritual meat to the believers, which in faith lay hold upon Chriſt, who is the true meat.

[f] Of the river and running rock, which followed the people.

[g] Did ſacramentally ſignify Chriſt, ſo that together with the ſign there was the thing ſignified, and the truth itſelf: for God doth not offer a bare ſign, but the thing ſignified by the ſign, together with it, which is to be received by faith.

[3] An amplifying of the example againſt them which are carried away with their luſts beyond the bounds which God hath meaſured out. For this is the beginning of all evil, as of idolatry (which hath gluttony a companion unto it) fornication, rebelling againſt Chriſt, murmuring, and ſuch like, which God puniſhed moſt ſharply in that old people, to the end that we which ſucceed them, and have a more full declaration of the will of God, might by that means take better heed.

[h] Some read figure: which ſignified our ſacraments, for circumciſion was to the Jews a ſeal of righteouſneſs, and to us a lively pattern of baptiſm, and ſo in the other ſacraments.

[i] To tempt Chriſt, is to provoke him to a combat, as it were, which thoſe men do, who abuſe the knowledge that he hath given them, and make it to ſerve for a cloak for their luſts and wickedneſs.

[k] This our age is called the end, for it is the ſhutting up of all ages.

[4] In concluſion, he deſcendeth to the Corinthians themſelves, warning them that they pleaſe not themſelves, but rather that they prevent the ſubtilties of Satan. Yet he uſeth an inſinuation, and comforteth them, that he may not ſeem to make them altogether like to thoſe wicked idolaters and contemners of Chriſt, which periſhed in the wilderneſs.

[m] He that would have you tempted for your profit's ſake, will give you an iſſue to eſcape out of the temptation.

[5] Now returning to thoſe idols feaſts, that he may not ſeem to dally at all, firſt he promiſeth that he will uſe no other reaſons than ſuch as they knew very well themſelves. And he uſeth an induction borrowed from the agreement that is in the things themſelves. The holy banquets of the Chriſtians are pledges, firſt of all, of the community that they have with Chriſt, and next, one with another. The Iſraelites alſo do ratify in their ſacrifices, their mutual conjunction in one ſelf-ſame religion: therefore ſo do the idolaters alſo join themſelves with their idols, or devils rather, (for idols are nothing) in thoſe ſolemn banquets, whereupon it followeth, that that table is a table of devils, and therefore you muſt eſchew it: For you cannot be partakers of the Lord and of idols together, much leſs may ſuch banquets be accounted for things indifferent. Will ye then ſtrive with God? and if ye do, think you that you ſhall get the upper hand?

[n] Of thankſgiving: whereupon that holy banquet was called Euchariſt, that is, a thankſgiving.

[o] A moſt effectual pledge and note of our knitting together with Chriſt, and ingrafting to him.

[p] That is, as yet obſerve their ceremonies.

[q] Are conſenting and guilty both of that worſhip and ſacrifice.

A. D. 59.

19 What ſay I then? that the idol is any thing? or that that which is ſacrificed to idols, is any thing?

20 Nay, but that theſe things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to devils, and not unto God: and I would not that ye ſhould have [r] fellowſhip with the devils.

21 Ye cannot drink of the cup of the Lord, and the [s] cup of the devils. Ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of the devils.

22 Do we provoke the Lord to anger? are we ſtronger than he?

* Ch. 6. 12. 23 * [6] [t] All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.

24 Let no man ſeek his own, but every man another's wealth.

25 [7] Whatſoever is ſold in the [u] ſhambles, eat ye, and aſk no queſtion for conſcience ſake.

* Pſ. 24. 1. 26 * For the earth is the Lord's, and [x] all that therein is.

27 For if any of them which believe not, call you to a feaſt, and if ye will go, whatſoever is ſet before you, eat, aſking no queſtion for conſcience ſake.

28 But if any man ſay unto you, This is ſacrificed unto idols, eat it not, becauſe of him that ſhewed it, and for the conſcience (for the earth is the Lord's, and [x] all that therein is.)

29 And the conſcience, I ſay, not thine, but of that other: [8] for why ſhould my liberty be condemned of another man's conſcience?

30 For if I through God's [y] benefit be partaker, why am I evil ſpoken of, for that wherefore I give thanks?

* Col. 3. 17. 31 * [9] Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, whatſoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

32 Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Grecians, nor to the church of God:

A. D. 59.

33 Even as I pleaſe all men in all things, not ſeeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they might be ſaved.

CHAP XI.

1 He blameth the Corinthians, for that in their holy aſſemblies, 4 men do pray having their heads covered, 6 and women bare-headed: and becauſe their meeting tended to evil, 21 who mingled prophane banquets with the holy Supper of the Lord, 23 which he requireth to be celebrated according to Chriſt's inſtitution.

BE * ye followers of me, even as I am of Chriſt. * 2 Theſſ. 3. 9.

2 [1] Now, brethren, I commend you, that ye remember all my things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you.

3 [2] But I will that ye know, that Chriſt is the * head of every man: and the man is the woman's head: and God is [a] Chriſt's head. * Eph. 5. 23.

4 [3] Every [b] man praying or propheſying having any thing on his head, diſhonoureth his head.

5 [4] But every woman that prayeth or propheſieth bare-headed, diſhonoureth her head, [5] for it is even one very thing as though ſhe were ſhaven.

6 Therefore if the woman be not covered, let her alſo be ſhorn: and if it be ſhame for a woman to be ſhorn or ſhaven, let her be covered.

7 [6] For a man ought not to cover his head: foraſmuch as he is the * image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man. * Gen. 1. 26. and 5. 1. and 9. 6. Col. 3. 10.

8 [7] For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.

9 For

[r] Have any thing to do with the devils, or enter into that ſociety which is begun in the devil's name.

[s] The heathen and profane people were wont to ſhut up and make an end of their feaſts which they kept to the honour of their gods, in offering meat-offerings and drink-offerings to them, with banquets and feaſtings.

[6] Coming to another kind of things offered to idols, he repeateth that general rule, that in the uſe of things indifferent, we ought to have conſideration not of ourſelves only, but of our neighbours, and therefore there are many things which of themſelves are lawful, which may be evil done of us, becauſe of offence to our neighbour.

[7] An applying of the rule to the preſent matter: Whatſoever is ſold in the ſhambles, you may indifferently buy it, as it were at the Lord's hand, and eat it either at home with the faithful, or being called home to the unfaithful, to wit, in a private banquet: but yet with this exception, unleſs any man be preſent which is weak, whoſe conſcience may be offended by ſetting meats offered to idols before them: for then you ought to have conſideration of their weakneſs.

[u] The fleſh that was ſacrificed, was uſed to be ſold in the ſhambles, and the price returned to the prieſts.

[x] All thoſe things whereof is full.

[8] A reaſon: For we muſt take heed that our liberty be not evil ſpoken of, and that the benefit of God which we ought to uſe with thankſgiving be not changed into impiety, and that through our fault, if we chuſe rather to offend the conſcience of the weak, than to yield a little of our liberty in a matter of no importance, and ſo give occaſion to the weak to judge in ſuch ſort of us, and of Chriſtian liberty. And the apoſtle taketh theſe things upon his own perſon, that the Corinthians may have ſo much the leſs occaſion to oppoſe any thing againſt him.

[y] If I may, through God's benefit, eat this meat or that meat, why ſhould I through my fault cauſe that benefit of God to turn to my blame?

[9] The concluſion: We muſt order our lives in ſuch ſort, that we ſeek not ourſelves, but God's glory, and ſo the ſalvation of as many as we may: wherein the apoſtle ſticketh not to propound himſelf to the Corinthians (even his own flock) as an example, but ſo that he calleth them back to Chriſt, unto whom he himſelf hath regard.

[1] The fifth treatiſe of this epiſtle concerning the right ordering of public aſſemblies, containing three points, to wit, of the comely apparel of men and women, of the order of the Lord's Supper, and of the right uſe of ſpiritual gifts. But going about to reprehend certain things, he beginneth notwithſtanding with a general praiſe of them, calling thoſe particular laws of comelineſs and honeſty, which belong to to eccleſiaſtical policy, traditions: which afterward, they called Canons.

[2] He ſetteth down God in Chriſt our Mediator, for the end and mark not only of the doctrine, but alſo of eccleſiaſtical comelineſs. Then applying it to the queſtion propoſed, touching the comely apparel both of men and women in public aſſemblies, he declareth that the woman is one degree beneath the man by the ordinance of God; and that the man is ſo ſubject to Chriſt, that the glory of God ought to appear in him for the pre-eminence of the ſex.

[3] Hereof he gathereth, that if men do either pray or preach in public aſſemblies, having their heads covered (which was then a ſign of ſubjection) they did, as it were, ſpoil themſelves of their dignity againſt God's ordinance.

[b] It appeareth, that this was a politic law, ſerving only for the circumſtances of the time that Paul lived in, by this reaſon, becauſe in theſe our days for a man to ſpeak bare-headed in an aſſembly, is a ſign of ſubjection.

[4] And in like ſort he concludeth, that women which ſhew themſelves in public and eccleſiaſtical aſſemblies without the ſign and token of their ſubjection, that is to ſay, uncovered, ſhame themſelves.

[5] The firſt argument taken from the common ſenſe of man, for ſo much as nature teacheth women, that it is diſhoneſt for them to come abroad bare-headed, ſeeing that ſhe hath given them thick and long hair, which they do ſo diligently trim and deck, that they can in no wiſe abide to have it ſhaven.

[6] The taking away of an objection: Have not men alſo hair given them? I grant it, ſaith the apoſtle, but there is another matter in it: for man was made to this end and purpoſe, that the glory of God ſhould appear in his rule and authority: but the woman was made, that by profeſſion of her obedience, ſhe might more honour her huſband.

[7] He proveth the inequality of the woman, by that, that the man is the matter whereof woman was firſt made.

A. D. 59. 9 * [8] For the man was not created for the woman's ſake, but the woman for the man's ſake. *Gen. 2. 22.

10 [9] Therefore ought the woman to have [c] power on her head, becauſe of the [10] angels.

11 [11] Neverthelеſs, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man [d] in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, ſo is the man alſo by the woman: but all things are of God.

13 [12] Judge in yourſelves, Is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not nature itſelf teach you, that if a man hath long hair, it is a ſhame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a praiſe unto her: for her hair is given her for a [e] covering.

16 [13] But if any man luſt to be contentious, we have no ſuch cuſtom, neither the churches of God.

17 ¶ [14] Now in this that I declare, I praiſe you not, that ye come together, not with profit, but with hurt.

18 [15] For firſt of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there are diſſenſions among you: and I believe it to be true in ſome part.

19 [16] For there muſt be hereſies even among you, that they which are [f] approved among you might be known.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, this is [g] not to eat the Lord's ſupper.

21 For every man when they ſhould eat, taketh his own ſupper [h] afore: and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

22 [17] Have ye not houſes to eat and to drink in? deſpiſe ye the church of God, and ſhame them that have not? what ſhall I ſay to you? ſhall I praiſe you in this? I praiſe you not. A. D. 59.

23 [18] For I have received of the Lord, that which I alſo have delivered unto you, to wit, That the Lord Jeſus, in the night when he was betrayed, took bread:

24 * And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat: This is my body, which is [i] broken for you: this do ye in remembrance of me. * Matt. 26. 16. Mark 14. 22. Luke 22. 19.

25 After the ſame manner alſo he took the cup, when he had ſupped, ſaying, This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood: this do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye ſhall eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye ſhew the Lord's death till he come.

27 [19] Wherefore, whoſoever ſhall eat this bread, and drink the cup of the Lord [k] unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 * [20] Let [l] every man therefore examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of this bread, and drink of this cup. * 2 Cor. 13. 5.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own damnation, becauſe he [m] diſcerneth not the Lord's body.

30 [21] For this cauſe many are weak and ſick among you, and many ſleep.

31 For if we would [n] judge ourſelves, we ſhould not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, we are chaſtened of the Lord, becauſe we ſhould not be condemned with the world.

33 [22] Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

[8] Secondly, by that, that the woman was made for man, and not the man for the woman's ſake.

[9] The concluſion: women muſt be covered, to ſhew by this external ſign, their ſubjection.

[c] A covering, which is a token of ſubjection.

[10] What this meaneth, I do not yet underſtand.

[11] A digreſſion which the apoſtle uſeth, leſt that which he ſpake of the ſuperiority of men, and lower degree of women, in conſideration of the policy of the church, ſhould be ſo taken as though there were no meaſure of this inequality. Therefore he teacheth that men have in ſuch ſort the pre-eminence, that God made them not alone, but women alſo: and woman was ſo made of man, that men alſo are born by the means of women, and this ought to put them in mind to obſerve the degree of every ſex in ſuch ſort, that mutual conjunction may be cheriſhed.

[d] By the Lord.

[12] He urgeth the argument taken from the common ſenſe of nature.

[e] To be a covering for her, and ſuch a covering as ſhould procure another.

[13] Againſt ſuch as are ſtubbornly contentious, we have to oppoſe this, that the churches of God are not contentious.

[14] He paſſeth now to the next treatiſe, concerning the right adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper. And the apoſtle uſeth this ſharper preface, that the Corinthians might underſtand, that whereas they obſerved generally the apoſtles commandments, yet they foully neglected them in a matter of greateſt importance.

[15] To celebrate the Lord's Supper aright, it is requiſite that there be not only conſent of doctrine, but alſo of affections, that it be not prophaned.

[16] Although that ſchiſms and hereſies proceed from the devil, and are evil, yet they come not by chance, nor without cauſe, and they turn to the profit of the elect.

[f] Whom experience hath taught to be of ſound religion and godlineſs.

[g] This is an uſual kind of ſpeech whereby the apoſtle denieth that flatly, which many did not well.

[h] Eateth his meat, and tarrieth not till others come.

[17] The apoſtle thinketh it good to take away the love of feaſts, for their abuſe, although they had been a long time, and with commendation uſed in churches, and were appointed and inſtituted by the apoſtles.

[18] We muſt take a true form of keeping the Lord's Supper, out of the inſtitution of it, the parts whereof are theſe, touching the paſtors, to ſhew forth the Lord's death by preaching his word: to bleſs the bread and the wine by calling upon the name of God, and together with prayers to declare the inſtitution thereof: and finally, to deliver the bread broken to be eaten, and the cup received to be drunken with thankſgiving. And touching the flock, that every man examine himſelf, that is to ſay, to prove both his knowledge, and alſo faith, and repentance: to ſhew forth the Lord's death, that is, in true faith to yield unto his word and inſtitution: and laſt of all, to take the bread at the miniſter's hand, and to eat it and to drink the wine, and give God thanks: this was Paul's and the apoſtles manner of miniſtering.

[i] This word (Broken) noteth out unto us Chriſt's manner of death, for although his legs were not broken, as the thieves legs were, yet was his body very ſore tormented, and torn, and bruiſed.

[19] Whoſoever contemn the holy ſacraments, that is, uſe them not aright, are guilty not of the bread and wine, but of the thing itſelf, that is, of Chriſt, and ſhall be grievouſly puniſhed for it.

[k] Otherwiſe than meet is ſuch myſteries ſhould be handled.

[20] The examination of a man's ſelf, is of neceſſity required in the ſupper, and therefore they ought not to be admitted unto it, which cannot examine themſelves; as children, furious and mad men, alſo ſuch as either have no knowledge of Chriſt, or not ſufficient, although they profeſs Chriſtian religion and other ſuch like.

[l] This place beateth down the faith of credit, or unwrapped faith, which the papiſts maintain.

[m] He is ſaid to diſcern the Lord's body, that hath conſideration of the worthineſs of it, and therefore cometh to eat of this meat with great reverence.

[21] The prophaning of the body and blood of the Lord in his myſteries, is ſharply puniſhed of him, and therefore ſuch a miſchief ought diligently to be prevented by judging and correcting of a man's ſelf.

[n] Try and examine ourſelves, by faith and repentance, ſeparating ourſelves from the wicked.

[22] The ſupper of the Lord is a common action of the whole church, and therefore there is no place for private ſuppers.

A. D. 59.

34 [23] And if any man be hungry, let him eat at home, that ye come not together unto condemnation. [24] Other things will I ſet in order when I come.

CHAP. XII.

1 To draw away the Corinthians from contention and pride, he ſheweth that ſpiritual gifts are therefore diverſely beſtowed, 7 that the ſame being jointly to each other employed, 12 we may grow up together into one body of Chriſt, in ſuch equal proportion and meaſure, 20 as the members of man's body do.

NOW [1] concerning ſpiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you [a] ignorant.

2 [2] Ye know that ye were [b] Gentiles, and were carried away unto the dumb idols, as ye were led.

3 [3] Wherefore, I declare unto you, that no man * ſpeaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jeſus * [c] execrable: alſo no man can ſay that Jeſus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt.

* Mark 9. 39
* John 13. 13.
Ch. 8. 6.
Phil. 2. 11.

4 [4] Now there are diverſities of gifts, but the [d] ſame Spirit.

5 And there are diverſities of adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord.

6 And there are diverſities of [e] operations, but God is the ſame, which worketh all in all.

7 But the manifeſtation of the Spirit is [f] given to every man, to [g] profit withal.

8 [5] For to one is given by the Spirit the word of [h] wiſdom: and to another, the word of knowledge, by the ſame Spirit:

9 And to another is given faith, by the ſame Spirit: and to another, the gifts of healing, by the ſame Spirit:

10 And to another, the [i] operations of great works: and to another, [k] prophecy: and to another, the [l] diſcerning of ſpirits: and to another, diverſities of tongues: and to another, the interpretation of tongues.

11 * And all theſe things work one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit, diſtributing to every man ſeverally [6] as he will.

* Rom. 12. 3.
Eph. 4. 7.

12 [7] For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of the body which is one, though they be many, yet are but one body: [8] even ſo is [m] Chriſt.

13 For by one Spirit are we all baptized into [n] one body, whether we be Jews or Grecians, whether we be bond or free, and have been all made to [o] drink into one Spirit.

14 [9] For the body alſo is not one member, but many.

15 [10] If the foot would ſay, Becauſe I am not the hand, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear would ſay, Becauſe I am not the eye, I am not of the body, is it therefore not of the body?

[23] The ſupper of the Lord was inſtituted not to feed the belly, but to feed the ſoul with the communion of Chriſt, and therefore it ought to be ſeparated from common banquets.

[24] Such things as pertain to order, as place, time, form of prayers, and other ſuch like, the apoſtle took order for in congregations, according to the conſideration of times, places and perſons.

[1] Now he entereth into the third part of this treatiſe, touching the right uſe of ſpiritual gifts, wherein he giveth the Corinthians plainly to underſtand that they abuſed them: for they that excelled, bragged ambitiouſly of them, and ſo robbed God of the praiſe of his gifts: and having no conſideration of their brethren, abuſed them to a vain oſtentation, and ſo robbed the church of the uſe of thoſe gifts. On the other ſide, the inferior ſort envied the better, and went about to make a departure, ſo that all that body was as it were ſcattered and rent in pieces. So then going about to remedy theſe abuſes, willeth them firſt to conſider diligently, that they have not theſe gifts of themſelves, but from the free grace and liberality of God, to whoſe glory they ought to beſtow them all.

[a] Ignorant to what purpoſe theſe gifts are given you.

[2] He reproveth the ſame, by comparing their former ſtate with that wherein they were at this time indued with thoſe excellent gifts.

[b] As touching God's ſervice and the covenant, mere ſtrangers.

[3] The concluſion: Know you therefore that you cannot ſo much as move your lips to honour Chriſt withal, but by the grace of the Holy Ghoſt.

[c] Doth curſe him, or by any means whatſoever diminiſh his glory.

[4] In the ſecond place, he layeth another foundation, to wit, that theſe gifts are diverſe as the functions alſo are diverſe, and their offices diverſe, but that one ſelf-ſame Spirit, Lord and God, is the giver of all theſe gifts, and that to one end, to wit, for the profit of all.

[d] The Spirit is plainly diſtinguiſhed from the gifts.

[e] So Paul calleth that inward force which cometh from the Holy Ghoſt, and maketh men fit to wonderful things.

[f] The Holy Ghoſt openeth and ſheweth himſelf freely in giving of theſe gifts.

[g] To the uſe and benefit of the church.

[5] He declareth this manifold diverſity, and reckoneth up the chiefeſt gifts, beating that into their heads, which he ſaid before, to wit, that all theſe things proceeded from one ſelf-ſame Spirit.

[h] Wiſdom is a moſt excellent gift, very requiſite, not only for them which teach, but alſo for them that exhort and comfort, which thing is proper to the paſtor's office: as the word of knowledge agreeth to the doctor's.

[i] By operation he meaneth thoſe great workings of God's mighty power, which paſs and excel amongſt his miracles, as the delivery of his people Iſrael by the hand of Moſes: that which he did by Elias againſt the prieſts of Baal, in ſending down fire from heaven to conſume his ſacrifice: and that which he did by Peter, in the matter of Ananias and Sapphira.

[k] Foretelling of things to come.

[l] Whereby falſe prophets are known from true, wherein Peter paſſed Philip in diſcovering Simon Magus, Acts 8. 20.

[6] He addeth moreover ſomething elſe, to wit, that although that theſe gifts are unequal, yet they are moſt wiſely divided, becauſe the will of the Spirit of God is the rule of this diſtribution.

[7] He ſetteth forth his former ſaying by a ſimilitude taken from the body: This, ſaith he, is, manifeſtly ſeen in the body, whoſe members are divers, but yet ſo knit together, that they make but one body.

[8] The applying of the ſimilitude. So muſt we alſo think, ſaith he, of the myſtical body of Chriſt: for all we that believe, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, are by one ſelf-ſame baptiſm, joined together with our head, that by that means there may be framed one body, compact of many members: and we have drunk one ſelf-ſame Spirit, that is to ſay, a ſpiritual feeling, perception, and motion common to us all out of one cup.

[m] Chriſt joined together with his church.

[n] To become one body with Chriſt.

[o] By one quickening drink of the Lord's blood, we are made partakers of his only Spirit.

[9] He amplifieth that which followed of the ſimilitude, as if he ſhould ſay, The unity of the body is not only not let by this diverſity of members, but alſo it could not be a body, if it did not conſiſt of many, and thoſe diverſe members.

[10] Now he buildeth his doctrine upon the foundations which he hath laid: and firſt of all he continueth in his purpoſed ſimilitude, and afterward he goeth to the matter barely and ſimply. And firſt of all, he ſpeaketh unto them which would have ſeparated themſelves from thoſe whom they envied, becauſe they had not ſuch excellent gifts as they: now this is, ſaith he, as if the foot ſhould ſay, it were not of the body, becauſe it is not the hand: or the ear, becauſe it is not the eye. Therefore all parts ought rather to defend the unity of the body, being coupled together to ſerve one another.

[11] Again ſpeaking to them, he ſheweth them, that if that ſhould come to paſs which they deſire, to wit, that all ſhould be equal one to another, there would follow a deſtruction of the whole body, yea and of themſelves: for it were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the ſmelling?

18 But now hath God diſpoſed the members every one of them in the body at his own pleaſure.

19 For if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are there many members, yet but one body.

21 [12] And the eye cannot ſay unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor the head again to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Yea, much rather thoſe members of the body, which ſeem to be [p] more feeble, are neceſſary.

23 And upon thoſe members of the body, which we think moſt unhoneſt, put we more [q] honeſty on: and our uncomely parts have more comelineſs on.

24 For our comely parts need it not: but God hath tempered the body together, and hath given the more honour to that part which lacked,

25 Leſt there ſhould be any diviſion in the body: but that the members ſhould have the ſame [r] care one for another.

26 [13] Therefore if one member ſuffer, all ſuffer with it: if one member be had in honour, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now ye are the body of Chriſt, and members for your [s] part.

*Eph.4.11. 28 * And God hath ordained ſome in the church: as firſt apoſtles, ſecondly prophets, thirdly teachers, then them that do miracles: after that, the gifts of healing, [t] helpers, [u] governors, diverſity of tongues.

29 Are all apoſtles? are all prophets? are all teachers?

30 Are all doers of miracles? have all the gifts of healing? do all ſpeak with tongues? do all interpret?

31 [14] But deſire you the beſt gifts, and I will yet ſhew you a more excellent way.

A. D. 59.

CHAP. XIII.

1 He ſheweth that there are no gifts ſo excellent, which in God's ſight are not corrupt, if charity be away: 4 and therefore he digreſſeth unto the commendation of it.

THOUGH [1] I ſpeak with the tongues of men and [a] angels, and have not love, I am as ſounding braſs, or a [b] tinkling cymbal.

2 And though I had the gift of prophecy, and knew all ſecrets, and all knowledge, yea, if I had all [c] faith, ſo that I could remove * mountains, and had not love, I were nothing. * Matt. 17. 20.

3 And though I feed the poor with all my goods, and though I give my body that I be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing.

4 [2] Love [d] ſuffereth long: it is bountiful: love envieth not: love doth not boaſt itſelf: it is not puffed up:

5 It doeth [e] no uncomely thing: it ſeeketh not her own things: it is not provoked to anger: it thinketh not evil:

6 It rejoiceth not in iniquity, but [f] rejoiceth in the truth:

7 It ſuffereth all things: it believeth all things: it hopeth all things: it endureth all things.

8 [3] Love doth never fall away, though that prophecyings be aboliſhed, or the tongues ceaſe, or [g] knowledge vaniſh away.

9 [4] For we know in [h] part, and we propheſy in part.

could not be a body, unleſs it were made of many members knit together, and diverſe one from the other. And that no man might find fault with this diviſion as unequal, he addeth, that God himſelf hath coupled all theſe together. Therefore all muſt remain coupled together, that the body may remain in ſafety.

[12] Now on the other ſide, he ſpeaketh unto them which were indued with more excellent gifts, willing them not to deſpiſe the inferiors as unprofitable, and as though they ſerved to no uſe: for God, ſaith he, hath in ſuch ſort tempered this inequality, that the more excellent and beautiful members can in no wiſe lack the more abject, and ſuch as we are aſhamed of, and that they ſhould have more care to ſee unto them and to cover them: that by this means the neceſſity which is on both parts, might keep the whole body in peace and concord: that although if each part be conſidered apart, they are of divers degrees and conditions, yet becauſe they are joined together, they have a community both in commodities and diſcommodities.

[q] We more carefully cover them.

[r] Should beſtow their operation and offices to the profit and preſervation of the whole body.

[13] Now he applieth this ſame doctrine to the Corinthians, without any allegory, warning them, that ſeeing there are diverſe functions and diverſe gifts, it is their duty not to offend one againſt another, either by envy or ambition, but rather that they being joined together in love and charity one with another, every one of them beſtow to the profit of all, that which he hath received, according as his miniſtry doth require.

[s] For all churches, whereſoever they are diſperſed through the whole world, are diverſe members of one body.

[t] The office of deacons.

[u] He ſetteth forth the order of elders, which were the maintainers of the church's diſcipline.

[14] He teacheth them that are ambitious and envious, a certain holy ambition and envy, to wit, if they give themſelves to the beſt gifts, and ſuch as are moſt profitable to the church, and ſo if they contend to excel one another in love, which far paſſeth all other gifts.

[1] He reaſoneth firſt of charity, the excellence whereof he firſt ſheweth by this, that without it, all other gifts are as nothing before God: which thing he proveth partly by an induction, and partly alſo by an argument taken of the end, wherefore thoſe gifts are given. For to what purpoſe are thoſe gifts but to God's glory, and the profit of the church, as is before proved? ſo that thoſe gifts without charity, have no right uſe.

[a] A very earneſt kind of amplifying a matter, as if he ſaid, If there were any tongues of angels, and I had them, and did not uſe them to the benefit of my neighbour, it were nothing elſe but a vain and prattling kind of babbling.

[b] That giveth a rude and no certain ſound.

[c] By faith, he meaneth the gift of doing miracles, and not that faith which juſtifieth, which cannot be void of charity, as the other may.

[2] He deſcribeth the force and nature of charity, partly by a compariſon of contraries, and partly by the effects of itſelf: whereby the Corinthians may underſtand, both how profitable it is in the church, and how neceſſary: and alſo how far they are from it, and therefore how vainly and without cauſe they are proud.

[f] Rejoiceth at righteouſneſs in the righteous. For the Hebrews mean by truth, righteouſneſs.

[3] Again he commendeth the excellency of charity in that, that it ſhall never be aboliſhed in the ſaints; whereas the other gifts, which are neceſſary for the building up of the church, ſo long as we live here, ſhall have no place in the world to come.

[g] The way to get knowledge by propheſying.

[4] The reaſon: becauſe we are now in that ſtate that we have need to learn daily, and therefore we have need of thoſe helps, to wit, of the gift of tongues, and knowledge, and alſo of them that teach them: But to what purpoſe ſerve they then, when we have obtained and gotten the full knowledge of God which ſerveth now but for them which are imperfect, and go by degrees to perfection?

[h] We learn imperfectly.

A. D. 59.

10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be aboliſhed.

11 [5] When I was a child, I ſpake as a child, I underſtood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childiſh things.

12 [6] For [i] now we ſee through a glaſs darkly: but then ſhall we ſee face to face. Now I know in part: but then ſhall I know even as I am known.

13 [7] And now abideth faith, hope, and love, even theſe three: but the chiefeſt of theſe is love.

CHAP. XIV.

1 He commendeth the gift of prophecying: 7 and by a ſimilitude taken of the muſical inſtruments, 12 he teacheth the true uſe of interpreting the ſcriptures: 17 He taketh away the abuſe: 34 and forbiddeth women to ſpeak in the congregation.

FOLLOW [1] after love, and covet ſpiritual gifts, and rather that ye may [a] propheſy.

2 [2] For he that ſpeaketh a ſtrange [b] tongue, ſpeaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man heareth him: howbeit in the [c] Spirit he ſpeaketh ſecret things.

3 But he that propheſieth, ſpeaketh unto men to [d] edifying, and to exhortation, and to comfort.

4 He that ſpeaketh ſtrange language, edifieth himſelf: but he that propheſieth, edifieth the [e] church.

5 I would that ye all ſpake ſtrange languages, but rather that ye propheſied: for greater is he that propheſieth, than he that ſpeaketh divers tongues, except he expound it, that the church may receive edification.

A. D. 59.

6 And now, brethren, if I come unto you, ſpeaking divers tongues, what ſhall I profit you, except I ſpeak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophecying, or by doctrine?

7 [3] Moreover things without life which give a ſound, whether it be a pipe or an harp, except they make a diſtinction in the ſounds, how ſhall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 And alſo if the trumpet give an uncertain ſound, who ſhall prepare himſelf to battle?

9 So likewiſe you, by the tongue, except ye utter words that have [f] ſignification, how ſhall it be underſtood what is ſpoken? for ye ſhall ſpeak in the air.

10 [4] There are ſo many kinds of voices (as it cometh to paſs) in the world, and none of them is dumb.

11 Except I know then the power of the voice, I ſhall be unto him that ſpeaketh a barbarian, and he that [g] ſpeaketh, ſhall be a barbarian unto me.

12 [5] Even ſo, foraſmuch as ye covet ſpiritual gifts, ſeek that ye may excel unto the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore, let him that ſpeaketh a ſtrange tongue, [h] pray that he may interpret.

14 [6] For [i] if I pray in a ſtrange tongue, my ſpirit

[5] He ſetteth forth that, that he ſaid, by an excellent ſimilitude, comparing this life to our infancy or childhood, wherein we ſtagger and ſtammer rather than ſpeak, and think and underſtand childiſh things, and therefore have need of ſuch things as may form and frame our tongue and mind: but when we become men, to what purpoſe ſhould we deſire that ſtammering, thoſe childiſh toys, and ſuch like things, whereby our childhood is framed by little and little?

[6] The applying of the ſimilitude of our childhood to this preſent life, wherein we darkly behold heavenly things, according to the ſmall meaſure of light which is given us, through the underſtanding of tongues, and hearing the teachers and miniſters of the church: of our man's age and ſtrength, to that heavenly and eternal life, wherein when we behold God himſelf preſent, and are lightened with his full and perfect light, to what purpoſe would we deſire the voice of man, and thoſe worldly things which are moſt imperfect? But yet then, ſhall all the ſaints be knit both with God, and between themſelves, with moſt fervent love, and therefore charity ſhall not be aboliſhed but perfected, although it ſhall not be ſhewed forth, and entertained by ſuch manner of duties as peculiarly and only belong to the infirmity of this life.

[7] The concluſion: as if the apoſtle ſhould ſay, Such therefore ſhall be our condition then: but now we have three things, and they remain ſure if we be Chriſt's, as without which, true religion cannot conſiſt, to wit, faith, hope, and charity. And among theſe, charity is the chiefeſt, becauſe it ceaſeth not in the life to come as the reſt do, but is perfected and accompliſhed. Foreſeeing that faith and hope tend to things which are promiſed and are to come, when we have preſently gotten them, to what purpoſe ſhould we have faith and hope? but yet there at length ſhall we truly and perfectly love both God and one another.

[1] He inferreth now of that he ſpake before: therefore ſeeing charity is the chiefeſt of all, before all things ſet it before you as chief and principal: and ſo eſteem thoſe things as moſt excellent, which profit the greater part of men: (as prophecy, that is to ſay, the gift of teaching and applying the doctrine: which was contemned in reſpect of other gifts, although it be the chiefeſt and moſt neceſſary for the church) and not thoſe which for a ſhew ſeem to be marvellous, as the gifts of tongues, when a man was ſuddenly indued with the knowledge of many tongues, which made men greatly amazed, and yet of itſelf was not greatly to any uſe, unleſs there were an interpreter.

[2] He reprehendeth their perverſe judgment touching the gift of tongues. For why was it given? to wit, to the intent that the myſteries of God might be the better known to a greater ſort. Thereby it is evident that prophecy, whereunto the gift of tongues ought to ſerve, is better than this: and therefore the Corinthians did judge amiſs, in that they made more account of the gift of tongues than of propheſying: becauſe forſooth the gift of tongues was a thing more to be bragged of. And hereupon followed another abuſe of the gift of tongues, in that the Corinthians uſed tongues in the congregation without an interpreter. Which thing altho' it might be done to ſome profit of him that ſpake them, yet he corrupted the right uſe of that gift, becauſe there came thereby no profit to the hearers: and common aſſemblies were inſtituted and appointed not for any private man's commodity, but for the profit of the whole company.

[b] A ſtrange language which no man can underſtand without an interpreter.

[c] By that inſpiration which he hath received of the Spirit, which notwithſtanding he abuſeth, when he ſpeaketh myſteries which none of the company can underſtand.

[d] Which may further men in the ſtudy of godlineſs.

[e] The company.

[3] He ſetteth forth that which he ſaid by a ſimilitude, which he borroweth and taketh from inſtruments of muſic, which although they ſpeak not perfectly, yet they are diſtinguiſhed by their ſounds, that they may be the better uſed.

[f] That do fitly utter the matter itſelf.

[4] He proveth that interpretation is neceſſarily to be joined with the gift of tongues, by the manifold variety of languages, inſomuch that if one ſpake to another without an interpreter, it is as if he ſpake not.

[g] As the papiſts in all their ſermons, and they that ambitiouſly pour out ſome Hebrew or Greek words in the pulpit before the unlearned people, thereby to get them a name of vain learning.

[5] The concluſion: if they will excel in thoſe ſpiritual gifts, as it is meet, they muſt ſeek the profit of the church, and therefore they muſt not uſe the gift of tongues, unleſs there be an interpreter to expound the ſtrange and unknown tongue, whether it be himſelf that ſpeaketh, or another interpreter.

[h] Pray for the gift of interpretation.

[6] A reaſon: becauſe it is not ſufficient for us to ſpeak ſo in the congregation, that we ourſelves do worſhip God in ſpirit, that is, according to the gift which we have received; but we muſt alſo be underſtood of the company, leſt that be unprofitable to other, which we have ſpoken.

[i] If I pray, when the church is aſſembled together, in a ſtrange tongue.

[k] ſpirit prayeth: but mine underſtanding is [l] without fruit.

15 What is it then? I will pray with the ſpirit, but I will pray with the [m] underſtanding alſo: I will ſing with the ſpirit, but I will ſing with the underſtanding alſo.

16 [7] Elſe, when thou bleſſeſt with the [n] ſpirit, how ſhall he that [o] occupieth the room of the unlearned, ſay [p] Amen at thy giving of thanks, ſeeing he knoweth not what thou ſayeſt?

17 For thou verily giveſt thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 [8] I thank my God, I ſpeak languages more than ye all.

19 Yet had I rather in the church to ſpeak [q] five words with mine underſtanding, that I might alſo inſtruct others, than ten thouſand words in a ſtrange tongue.

* Matt. 18. 3.

20 [9] Brethren, be not * children in underſtanding, but as concerning maliciouſneſs be children: but in underſtanding be of a ripe age.

* Iſ. 28. 11.

21 In the [r] law it is written, * By men of other tongues, and by other languages will I ſpeak unto this people: yet ſo ſhall they not hear me, ſaith the Lord.

22 [10] Wherefore ſtrange tongues are for a ſign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but propheſying ſerveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.

23 [11] If therefore, when the whole church is come together in one, and all ſpeak ſtrange tongues, there come in they that are [s] unlearned, or they which believe not, will they not ſay, that ye are out of your wits?

24 But if all propheſy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is rebuked of all men, and is judged of all:

25 And ſo are the ſecrets of his heart made manifeſt, and ſo he will fall down on his face and worſhip God, and ſay plainly that God is in you indeed.

26 [12] What is to be done then, brethren? when ye come together, according as every one of you hath a pſalm, or hath doctrine, or hath a tongue, or hath revelation, or hath interpretation, let all things be done unto edifying.

27 [13] If any man ſpeak a ſtrange tongue, let it be by two, or at the moſt by three, and that by courſe, and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep ſilence in the church, which ſpeaketh languages, and let him ſpeak to himſelf, and to God.

29 [14] Let the prophets ſpeak, two or three, and let the other judge.

30 And if any thing be revealed to another that ſitteth by, let the firſt hold his peace.

31 For ye may all propheſy one by one, that all may learn, and all may have comfort.

32 And the [t] ſpirits of the prophets are ſubject to the prophets.

33 For God is not the author of confuſion, but of peace, as we ſee in all the churches of the ſaints.

* 1 Tim. 2. 12.

* Gen. 3. 16.

34 [15] * Let your women keep ſilence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to ſpeak: but they ought to be ſubject, as alſo * the law ſaith.

35 And if they will learn any thing, let them aſk their huſbands at home: for it is a ſhame for a woman to ſpeak in the church.

36 [16] Came the word of God out from you? either came it unto you only?

37 If any man think himſelf to be a prophet, or, [u] ſpiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you, are the commandments of the Lord.

38 [17] And if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 [18] Wherefore, brethren, covet to propheſy, and forbid not to ſpeak languages.

40 Let all things be done honeſtly, and by order.

---

[k] The gift and inſpiration which the Spirit giveth me, doth his part, but only to myſelf.

[l] No fruit cometh to the church by my prayers.

[m] So that I may be underſtood of others, and may inſtruct others.

[7] Another reaſon: ſeeing that the whole congregation muſt agree to him that ſpeaketh, and alſo witneſs this agreement, how ſhall they give their aſſent or agreement which know not what is ſpoken?

[n] Only, without all conſideration of the hearers.

[o] He that ſitteth as a private man.

[p] So then one uttered the prayers, and all the company anſwered, Amen.

[8] He propoundeth himſelf for an example, both that they may be aſhamed of their fooliſh ambition, and alſo that he may eſchew all ſuſpicion of envy.

[q] A very few words.

[9] Now he reproveth them freely for their childiſh folly, which ſee not how this gift of tongues, which was given to the profit of the church, is turned by their ambition into an inſtrument of curſing, ſeeing that the ſame alſo is contained among the puniſhments wherewith God puniſhed the ſtubbornneſs of his people, that he diſperſed them amongſt ſtrangers whoſe language they underſtood not.

[r] By the law he underſtandeth all the whole ſcripture.

[10] The concluſion: therefore the gift of tongues ſerveth to puniſh the unfaithful and unbelievers, unleſs it be referred to prophecy (that is to ſay, to the interpretation of ſcripture) and that, that which is ſpoken be by that means underſtood of the hearers.

[11] Another argument: the gift of tongues without prophecy is not only unprofitable to the faithful, but alſo doth much hurt: as well to them as to the unfaithful, which ſhould be won in the public aſſemblies. For by this means it cometh to paſs, that the faithful ſeem to others to be mad, much leſs can the unfaithful be inſtructed thereby.

[s] Look Acts 4. 13.

[12] The concluſion. The edifying of the congregation is a rule and ſquare of the right uſe of all ſpiritual gifts.

[13] The manner how to uſe the gift of tongues. It may be lawful for one or two, or at the moſt for three, to uſe the gift of tongues, one after another, in an aſſembly, ſo that there be ſome to expound the ſame: but if there be none to expound, let him that hath that gift ſpeak to himſelf alone.

[14] The manner of propheſying: let two or three propound, and let the other judge of that that is propounded, whether it be agreeable to the word of God or no: if in this examination the Lord give any man aught to ſpeak, let them give him leave to ſpeak. Let every man be admitted to propheſy, ſeverally, and in his order, ſo far forth as it is requiſite for the edifying of the church: let them be content to be ſubject each to other's judgment.

[t] The doctrine which the prophets bring, which are inſpired with God's Spirit.

[15] Women are commanded to be ſilent in public aſſemblies, and they are commanded to aſk of their huſbands at home.

[16] A general concluſion of the treatiſe of the right uſe of ſpiritual gifts in aſſemblies: with a ſharp reprehenſion, leſt the Corinthians might alone ſeem to themſelves to be wiſe.

[u] Skilful in knowing and judging ſpiritual things.

[17] The church ought not to care for ſuch as be ſtubbornly ignorant, and will not abide to be taught, but to go forward, notwithſtanding, in thoſe things which are right.

[18] Prophecy ought ſimply to be retained and kept in congregations: the gift of tongues is not to be forbidden, but all things muſt be done orderly.

10 * But by the grace of God, I am that I am: and his grace which is in me, was not in vain: but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which is with me.

A. D. 59. * Eph. 3. 7.

11 Wherefore, whether it were I, or they, ſo we preach, and ſo have ye believed.

12 ¶ [3] Now if it be preached, that Chriſt is riſen from the dead, how ſay ſome among you, that there is no reſurrection of the dead?

13 [4] For if there be no reſurrection of the dead, then is Chriſt not riſen:

14 [5] And if Chriſt be not riſen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is alſo vain:

15 And we are found alſo falſe witneſſes of God: for we have teſtified of God, that he hath raiſed up Chriſt: whom he hath not raiſed up, if ſo be the dead be not raiſed.

16 [6] For if the dead be not raiſed, then is Chriſt not raiſed.

17 And if Chriſt be not raiſed, your faith is vain: [7] ye are [e] yet in your ſins.

18 [8] And ſo they which are aſleep in Chriſt, are periſhed.

19 [9] If in this life only we have hope in Chriſt, we are of all men the moſt miſerable.

20 [10] But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, [11] and was made the * [f] firſt fruits of them that ſlept.

* Col. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 5.

21 [12] For ſince by man came death, by man came alſo the reſurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be [g] made alive.

23 [13] But every man in his * own order: the firſt fruits is Chriſt: afterward, they that are of Chriſt, at his coming ſhall riſe again.

* 1 Theſſ. 4. 13.

24 [14] Then ſhall be the [h] end, when he hath deli-

---

[1] The ſixth treatiſe of this epiſtle, concerning the reſurrection: and he uſeth a tranſition, or paſſing over from one matter to another, ſhewing firſt, that he bringeth no new thing, to the end that the Corinthians might underſtand that they had begun to ſwerve from the right courſe: and next, that he goeth not about to intreat of a trifling matter, but of another chief point of the goſpel, which if it be taken away, their faith muſt needs come to nought. And ſo at the length he beginneth this treatiſe at Chriſt's reſurrection, which is the ground and foundation of ours, and confirmeth it, firſt, by the teſtimony of the ſcriptures, and by the witneſs of the apoſtles, and of more than five hundred brethren, and laſt of all by his own.

[a] In the profeſſion whereof you continue yet.

[b] Which is very abſurd, and cannot be but that they that believe muſt reap the fruit of faith.

[c] Of thoſe twelve picked and choſen apoſtles, which were commonly called twelve, though Judas was put out of the number.

[d] Not at ſeveral times, but together and at one inſtant.

[2] He maintaineth by the way, the authority of his apoſtleſhip, which was requiſite to be in good credit among the Corinthians, that this epiſtle might be of force and weight amongſt them. In the mean ſeaſon he compareth himſelf in ſuch ſort after a certain divine art, with certain others, that he maketh himſelf inferior to them all.

[3] The firſt argument, to prove that there is a reſurrection from the dead: Chriſt is riſen again, therefore the dead ſhall riſe again.

[4] The ſecond, by an abſurdity: if there be no reſurrection of the dead, then is not Chriſt riſen again.

[5] The proof of that abſurdity, by other abſurdities: if Chriſt be not riſen again, the preaching of the goſpel is in vain, and the credit that you gave unto it, is vain, and we are lyars.

[6] He repeateth the ſame argument taken out of an abſurdity, purpoſing to ſhew how faith is in vain, if the reſurrection of Chriſt be taken away.

[7] Firſt, ſeeing death is the puniſhment of ſin, in vain ſhould we believe that our ſins were forgiven us, if they remain: but they do remain, if Chriſt roſe not from death.

[e] They are yet in their ſins, which are not ſanctified, nor have obtained remiſſion of their ſins.

[8] Secondly, unleſs that this be certain that Chriſt roſe again, all they which died in Chriſt are periſhed. So then what profit cometh of faith?

[9] The third argument, which is alſo taken from an abſurdity: for unleſs there be another life, wherein ſuch as truſt and believe in Chriſt ſhall be bleſſed, they were the moſt miſerable of all creatures, becauſe in this life they are the moſt miſerable.

[10] A concluſion of the former argument: therefore Chriſt is riſen again.

[11] He putteth the laſt concluſion for the firſt propoſition of the argument that followeth. Chriſt is riſen again: therefore ſhall we, the faithful (for of them he ſpeaketh), riſe again. Then followeth the firſt reaſon of this conſequence: for Chriſt is ſet forth unto us to be conſidered of, not as a private man apart and by himſelf, but as the firſt fruits: and he taketh that which was known to all men, to wit, that the whole heap is ſanctified in the firſt-fruits.

[f] He alludeth to the firſt-fruits of corn, the offering whereof ſanctified the reſt of the fruits.

[12] Another confirmation of the ſame conſequence: for Chriſt is to be conſidered as oppoſite to Adam, that as from one man, Adam, ſin came over all, ſo from one man, Chriſt, life cometh unto all: that is to ſay, that all the faithful, as they die, becauſe by nature they were born of Adam, ſo becauſe in Chriſt they are made the children of God by grace, they are quickened and reſtored to life by him.

[13] He doeth two things together: for he ſheweth that the reſurrection is in ſuch ſort common to Chriſt with all his members, that notwithſtanding he far paſſeth them, both in time (for he was the firſt that roſe again from the dead) and alſo in honour, becauſe that from him and in him is all our life and glory. Then by this occaſion he paſſeth to the next argument.

[14] The fourth argument, wherewith alſo he confirmeth the other, hath a moſt ſure ground, to wit, becauſe that God muſt reign. And this is the manner of his reign, that the Father will be ſhewed to be King of his Son, who was made man, to whom all things are made ſubject (the promiſes only excepted) to the end that the Father may afterward triumph in his Son the Conqueror. And he maketh two parts of this reign and dominion of the Son: wherein the Father's glory conſiſteth, to wit, the overcoming of his enemies (whereof ſome muſt be deprived of all power, as Satan and all the wicked, be they never ſo proud and mighty, and others muſt be utterly aboliſhed, as death) and a plain and full delivery of the godly from all enemies, that by this means delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father, when he hath put down [i] all rule, and all authority and power.

25 For he muſt reign till he hath put all enemies [k] under his feet.

26 The [l] laſt enemy that ſhall be deſtroyed, is death,

27 * For he hath put down all things under his feet. (And when he ſaith that all things are ſubdued to him, it is manifeſt that he is excepted, which did put down all things under him.)

* Pſ. 8. 6. Heb. 2. 8.

28 And when all things ſhall be ſubdued unto him, [m] then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that did ſubdue all things under him, that [n] God may be all in all.

29 [15] Elſe what ſhall they do which are baptized [o] for dead? if the dead riſe not at all, why are they then baptized for dead?

30 [16] Why are we alſo in jeopardy every hour?

31 By our [p] rejoicing which I have in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, I die daily.

32 [17] If I have fought with beaſts at Epheſus [q] after the manner of men, what advantageth it me, if the dead be not raiſed up? * [18] let us [r] eat and drink: for to-morrow we ſhall die.

* Iſa. 22. 13.

33 [19] Be not deceived: evil ſpeakings corrupt good manners.

34 Awake to live righteouſly, and ſin not: for ſome have not the knowledge of God, I ſpeak this to your ſhame.

A. D. 59.

35 [20] But ſome man will ſay, How are the dead raiſed up? and with what body come they forth?

36 [21] O fool, that which thou ſoweſt, is not quickened, except it die.

37 And that which thou ſoweſt, thou ſoweſt not that body that ſhall be, but bare corn as it falleth, of wheat, or of ſome other.

38 [22] But God giveth it a body at his pleaſure, even to every ſeed his own body.

39 All fleſh is not the ſame fleſh: but there is one fleſh of men, and another fleſh of beaſts, and another of fiſhes, and another of birds.

40 There are alſo heavenly bodies, and earthly bodies: but the glory of the heavenly is one, and the glory of the earthly is another.

41 There is another glory of the ſun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the ſtars: for one ſtar differeth from another ſtar in glory.

42 [23] So alſo is the reſurrection of the dead. The body is [s] ſown in corruption, and is raiſed in incorruption.

43 It is ſown in [t] diſhonour, and is raiſed in glory: it is ſown in weakneſs, and is raiſed in [u] power.

44 [24] It is ſown a natural body, and is raiſed a ſpiri-means God may fully ſet forth in the body of the church cleaving faſt to their head Chriſt, his kingdom and glory, as a King in his ſubjects. Moreover he putteth the firſt degree of this kingdom in the reſurrection of his Son, who is the Head: and the perfection, in the full conjunction of the members with the head, which ſhall be in the latter day. Now all theſe tend to this purpoſe, to ſhew that unleſs the dead do riſe again, neither the Father can be King above all, neither Chriſt be the Lord of all: for neither ſhould the power of Satan and death be overcome, nor the glory of God be full in his Son, nor his Son's in his members.

[i] All his enemies, which ſhall be ſpoiled of all the power they have. Pſalm 110. 1. Acts 2. 34. Heb. 1. 13. and 10. 13.

[k] Chriſt is conſidered here as he appeared in the form of a ſervant, in which reſpect he ruleth the church as head, and that becauſe this power was given him of his Father.

[l] The ſhutting up of the argument, which is taken from the whole to the part: for if all his enemies ſhall be put under his feet, then muſt it needs be that death alſo ſhall be ſubdued under him.

[m] Not becauſe the Son was not ſubject to his Father before, but becauſe his body, that is to ſay, the church which is here in diſtreſs, and not yet wholly partaker of his glory, is not yet fully perfect, and alſo becauſe the bodies of the ſaints which be in the graves, ſhall not be glorified until the reſurrection: but Chriſt as he is God, hath us ſubject to him as his Father hath, but as he is Prieſt, he is ſubject to his Father together with us. Auguſt. book 1. chap. 8. of the Trinity.

[n] By this high kind of ſpeech, is ſet forth an incomprehenſible glory which floweth from God, and ſhall fill all of us, as we are joined together with our head, but yet ſo, that our head ſhall always reſerve his pre-eminence.

[15] The fifth argument is taken of the end of baptiſm, to wit, becauſe that they which are baptized, are baptized for dead: that is to ſay, that they may have a remedy againſt death, becauſe that baptiſm is a token of regeneration.

[o] They that are baptized to this end and purpoſe, that death may be put out in them, or to riſe again from the dead, whereof baptiſm is a ſeal.

[16] The ſixth argument: unleſs there be a reſurrection of the dead, why ſhould the apoſtles ſo daily caſt themſelves into danger of ſo many deaths?

[p] As though he ſaid, I die daily, as all the miſeries I ſuffer can well witneſs, which I may truly boaſt of that I have ſuffered amongſt you.

[17] The taking away of an objection: but thou Paul didſt ambitiouſly, as commonly men are wont to do, when thou didſt fight with beaſts at Epheſus. That is very like, ſaith Paul: for what could that advantage me, were it not for the glory of eternal life which I hope for?

[q] Not upon any godly motion, nor caſting mine eyes upon God, but carried away with vain glory, or a certain headineſs.

[18] The ſeventh argument, which dependeth upon the laſt: If there be no reſurrection of the dead, why do we give ourſelves to any thing elſe, ſave to eating and drinking?

[r] Theſe are ſpeeches that epicures uſe.

[19] The concluſion with a ſharp exhortation, that they take heed of the naughty company of certain, from whence he ſheweth that this miſchief ſprang: warning them to be wiſe with ſobriety unto righteouſneſs.

[20] Now that he hath proved the reſurrection, he diſcovereth their doltiſhneſs, in that they ſcoffingly demanded how it could be that the dead could riſe again; and if they did riſe again, they aſked mockingly, what manner of bodies they ſhould have? Therefore he ſendeth theſe fellows, which ſeemed to themſelves to be marvellous wiſe and witty, to be inſtructed of poor rude huſbandmen.

[21] Thou mighteſt have learned either of theſe, ſaith Paul, by daily experience: for ſeeds are ſown, and rot, and yet notwithſtanding ſo far it is off that they periſh, that contrariwiſe they grow up far more beautiful: and whereas they are ſown naked and dry, they ſpring up green from death by the virtue of God: and doth it ſeem incredible to thee that our bodies ſhould riſe from corruption, and that indued with a far more excellent quality?

[22] We ſee a diverſity both in one and the ſelf-ſame thing which hath now one form and then another, and yet keepeth its own kind: as it is evident in a grain which is ſown, bare, but ſpringeth up far after another ſort: and alſo in diverſe kinds of one ſelf-ſame ſort, as amongſt beaſts: and alſo among things of diverſe ſorts, as the heavenly bodies and the earthly bodies: which alſo differ very much one from another. Therefore there is no cauſe why we ſhould reject either the reſurrection of the bodies, or the changing of them into a better ſtate, as a thing impoſſible or ſtrange.

[23] He maketh three manner of qualities of the bodies being raiſed: Incorruption, to wit, becauſe they ſhall be ſound, and altogether of a nature that cannot be corrupt: Glory, becauſe they ſhall be adorned with beauty and honour: Power, becauſe they ſhall continue everlaſting, without meat, drink, and all other helps, without which this frail life cannot keep itſelf from corruption.

[s] Is buried, and man is hid as the ſeed in the ground.

[t] Void of honour, void of glory and beauty.

[u] Freed from the former weakneſs, whereas it is ſubject to ſuch alteration and change, that it cannot maintain itſelf without meat and drink, and ſuch other like helps.

[24] He ſheweth perfectly in one word this change of the quality of the body by the reſurrection, when he ſaith, a ſpiritual body: [25] there is a natural body, and there is a ſpiritual body.

* Gen. 2. 7.

45 As it is alſo written, The [x] firſt man * Adam was made a living ſoul: and the laſt Adam was made a [y] quickening ſpirit.

46 [26] Howbeit that was not firſt which is ſpiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is ſpiritual.

47 The firſt man is of the earth, [z] earthly: the ſecond man is the Lord from [a] heaven.

48 [27] As is the earthly, ſuch are they that are earthly: and as is the heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the [b] image of the earthly, ſo ſhall we bear the image of the heavenly.

50 [28] This I ſay, brethren, that [c] fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 [29] Behold, I ſhew you a [d] ſecret thing, We ſhall not all ſleep, but we ſhall all be changed,

* Matt. 24. 31. 1 Theſſ. 4. 16.

52 In [e] a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the laſt * trumpet: for the trumpet ſhall blow, and the dead ſhall be raiſed up incorruptible, and we ſhall be changed.

53 For this corruptible muſt put on incorruption, and this mortal muſt put on immortality.

* Hoſ. 13. 14. Heb. 2. 14.

54 So when this corruptible hath put on incorruption, and this mortal hath put on immortality, then ſhall be brought to paſs the ſaying that is written, * Death is ſwallowed up into victory.

55 O death, where is thy ſting? O grave, where is thy victory?

56 The ſting of death is ſin: and the ſtrength of ſin is the law.

* 1 John 5. 5.

57 * But thanks be unto God, which hath given us victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

58 [30] Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, abundant always in the work of the Lord, foraſmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the [f] Lord.

CHAP. XVI.

A. D. 59.

1 He exhorteth them to help the poor brethren of Jeruſalem: 10 Then he commendeth Timothy, 13 and ſo, with a friendly exhortation, 19 and commendations, endeth the epiſtle.

Concerning [1] the gathering for the ſaints, as I have ordained in the churches of Galatia, ſo do ye alſo.

2 Every [a] firſt day of the week, let every one of you put aſide by himſelf, and lay up as God hath [b] proſpered him, that then there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And when I am come, whomſoever ye ſhall allow by [c] letters, them will I ſend to bring your liberality unto Jeruſalem.

4 [2] And if it be meet that I go alſo, they ſhall go with me.

5 Now I will come unto you, after I have gone through Macedonia (for I will paſs through Macedonia.)

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, or winter with you, that ye may bring me on my way whitherſoever I go.

7 For I will not ſee you now in my paſſage, but I truſt to abide a while with you, if the Lord permit.

8 And I will tarry at Epheſus until Pentecoſt.

9 For a great door and [d] effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adverſaries.

10 ¶ Now if Timotheus come, ſee that he be [e] without fear with you: for he worketh the work of the Lord, even as I do.

11 Let no man therefore deſpiſe him: but convey him forth [f] in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.

12 As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly deſired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his mind was not at all to come at this that of a natural body, it ſhall become a ſpiritual body: which two qualities being clean different the one from the other, he ſtraightway expoundeth, and ſetteth forth diligently.

[25] That is called a natural body which is quickened and maintained by a living ſoul only, ſuch as Adam was, of whom all we are born naturally: and that is ſaid to be a ſpiritual, which together with the ſoul is quickened with a far more excellent virtue, to wit, with the Spirit of God, which deſcendeth from Chriſt the ſecond Adam unto us.

[x] Adam is called the firſt man: becauſe he is the root, as it were, from whence we ſpring, and Chriſt is the latter man: becauſe he is the beginning of them that are ſpiritual, and in him we are all comprehended.

[y] Chriſt is called a Spirit, by reaſon of that moſt excellent nature, that is to ſay, God who dwelleth in him bodily, as Adam is called a living ſoul, by reaſon of the ſoul which is the beſt part in him.

[26] Secondly, he willeth the order of this double ſtate or quality to be obſerved, that the natural was firſt, Adam being created of the clay of the earth: and the ſpiritual followed and came upon it, to wit, when as the Lord being ſent from heaven, endued our fleſh, which was prepared and made fit for him, with the fulneſs of the Godhead.

[z] Wallowing in dirt, and wholly given to an earthly nature.

[a] The Lord is ſaid to come down from heaven by that kind of ſpeech, whereby that which is proper to one is vouched of another.

[27] He applieth both the earthly naturalneſs of Adam (if I may ſo ſay) to our bodies, ſo long as they are naturally converſant upon earth, to wit, in this life and in the grave: and alſo the ſpirituality of Chriſt to the ſame our bodies, after they are riſen again: and he ſaith that that goeth before, and this ſhall follow.

[b] Not a vain and falſe image, but ſuch an one as had the truth with it indeed.

[28] The concluſion: We cannot be partakers of the glory of God, unleſs we put off all that groſs and filthy nature of our bodies, ſubject to corruption, that the ſame body may be adorned with incorruptible glory.

[c] Fleſh and blood are taken here for a living body, which cannot attain to incorruption, unleſs it put off corruption.

[29] He goeth further, declaring that it ſhall come to paſs, that they which ſhall be found alive in the latter day, ſhall not deſcend into that corruption of the grave, but ſhall be renewed with a ſudden change, which change is very requiſite: and that the certain enjoying of the benefit and victory of Chriſt, is deferred unto that latter time.

[d] A thing that hath been hid, and never known hitherto, and therefore worthy that you give good ear unto it.

[e] He ſheweth us that the time ſhall be very ſhort.

[30] An exhortation taken of the profit that enſueth, that ſeeing they underſtand that the glory of the other life is laid up for faithful workmen, they continue and ſtand faſt in the truth of the doctrine of the reſurrection of the dead.

[f] Through the Lord's help and goodneſs working in us.

[1] Collections in old time were made by the apoſtles appointment the firſt day of the week, on which day the manner was then to aſſemble themſelves.

[a] Which in times paſt was called Sunday, but now is called the Lord's day.

[b] That every man beſtow according to the ability that God hath bleſſed him with.

[c] Which you ſhall give them to carry.

[2] The reſidue of the epiſtle is ſpent in writing of familiar matters, yet ſo that all things be referred to his purpoſed mark, that is to ſay, to the glory of God, and the edifying of the Corinthians.

[d] Very fit and convenient to do great things by.

[e] Without any juſt occaſion of fear.

[f] Safe and ſound, and that with all kind of courteſy.

this time: howbeit, he will come when he ſhall have convenient time.

13 ¶ Watch ye: ſtand faſt in the faith: quit you like men, and be ſtrong.

14 Let all your things be done in love.

15 Now, brethren, I beſeech you (ye know the houſe of [g] Stephanas, that it is the firſt fruits of Achaia, and that they have [h] given themſelves to miniſter unto the ſaints)

16 That ye be [i] obedient even unto ſuch, and to all that help with us and labour.

17 I am glad of the coming of Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, for they have ſupplied the want of you.

18 For they have comforted my [k] ſpirit and yours: [l] acknowledge therefore ſuch men.

23 The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you.

24 My love be with you all in Chriſt Jeſus. Amen.

[g] Stephanas is the name of a man, and not of a woman.

[h] Given themſelves wholly to the miniſtry.

[i] That you honour and reverence them, be obedient to them, and be content to be ruled by them, as meet is you ſhould, ſeeing they have beſtowed themſelves and their goods to help you withal.

[k] Mine heart.

[l] Take them for ſuch men as they are indeed.

[m] By theſe words, is betokened the ſevereſt kind of curſe and excommunication that was amongſt the Jews, and the words are as much to ſay, As our Lord cometh: So that his meaning may be this, Let him be accurſed even to the coming of the Lord, that is to ſay, to his death's day, even for ever.

The Second Epiſtle of the Apoſtle PAUL to the CORINTHIANS.

A. D. 60.

CHAP. I.

1 He beginneth with the praiſe of affliction, 8 declaring what he hath ſuffered in Aſia, 10 and how happily God aſſiſted him. 17 He ſaith it was not upon any lightneſs that he came not according to his promiſe.

PAUL [1] an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the will of God, and our brother Timotheus, to the church of God which is at Corinth, with all the ſaints which are in all Achaia:

2 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

* Eph. 1. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 3.

3 * [2] [a] Bleſſed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of [b] mercies, and the God of all comfort,

4 Which comforteth us in all our tribulation, [3] that we may be able to comfort them which are in any affliction, by the comfort wherewith we ourſelves are comforted of God.

5 For as the [c] ſufferings of Chriſt abound in us, ſo our conſolation aboundeth through Chriſt.

6 [4] And whether we be afflicted, it is for your conſolation and ſalvation, which is [d] wrought in the enduring of the ſame ſufferings which we alſo ſuffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your conſolation and ſalvation.

7 And our hope is ſtedfaſt concerning you, in as much as we know, that as ye are partakers of the ſufferings, ſo ſhall ye be alſo of the conſolation.

8 [5] For brethren, we would not have you ignorant of our affliction, which came unto us in Aſia, how we were preſſed out of meaſure paſſing ſtrength, ſo that we altogether [e] doubted even of life.

9 Yea, we received the ſentence of death in [f] ourſelves, becauſe we ſhould not truſt in ourſelves, but in God which raiſed the dead.

[1] See the declaration of ſuch ſalutation in the former epiſtles.

[2] He beginneth after this manner with thankſgiving, which notwithſtanding (otherwiſe than he was wont) he applieth to himſelf: beginning his epiſtle with the ſetting forth of the dignity of his apoſtleſhip, conſtrained (as it ſhould ſeem) by their importunity which took an occaſion to deſpiſe him, by reaſon of his miſeries. But he anſwereth, that he is not ſo afflicted, but that his comforts do exceed his afflictions, ſhewing the ground of them, even the mercy of God the Father in Jeſus Chriſt.

[a] To him be praiſe and glory given.

[b] Moſt merciful.

[3] The Lord doth comfort us to this end and purpoſe, that we may ſo much the more ſurely comfort others.

[c] The miſeries which we ſuffer for Chriſt, or which Chriſt ſuffereth in us.

[4] He denieth that either his afflictions, wherewith he was often afflicted, or the conſolations which he received of God, may juſtly be deſpiſed, ſeeing that the Corinthians both ought and might take great occaſion to be confirmed by either of them.

[d] Although ſalvation be given us freely, yet becauſe there is a way appointed us whereby we muſt come to it, which is, the race of an innocent and upright life, which we muſt run, therefore we are ſaid to work out our ſalvation, Phil. 2. 12. And becauſe it is God only that of his free good will worketh all things in us, therefore is he ſaid to work the ſalvation in us by theſe ſelf-ſame things by which we muſt paſs to everlaſting life, after that we have once overcome all incumbrances.

[5] He witneſſeth that he is not only not aſhamed of his afflictions, but that he deſireth alſo to have all men know the greatneſs of them, aud alſo his delivery from them, although it be not yet perfect.

[e] I knew not at all what to do, neither did I ſee by man's help which way to ſave myſelf.

[f] I was reſolved within myſelf to die.

A. D. 60.

10 Who delivered us from ſo [g] great a death, and doth deliver us: in whom we truſt, that yet hereafter he will deliver us.

* Rom. 15. 30.

11 * [6] So that ye labour together in prayer for us, [7] that for the gift beſtowed upon us for many, thanks may be given by many perſons for us.

12 [8] For our rejoicing is this, the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicity and godly [h] pureneſs, and not in fleſhly wiſdom, but by the [i] grace of God, we have had our converſation in the world, and moſt of all to you-wards.

13 For we write [k] none other things unto you, than that ye read, or elſe that ye acknowledge, and I truſt ye ſhall acknowledge unto the [l] end.

14 Even as ye have acknowledged us partly, that we are your [m] rejoicing, even as ye are ours, in the [n] day of our Lord Jeſus.

15 And in this confidence was I minded firſt to come unto you, that ye might have had a [o] double grace:

16 And to paſs by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and to be led forth toward Judea of you.

17 [9] When I therefore was thus minded, did I uſe lightneſs? or mind I thoſe things which I mind, according to the [p] fleſh, that with me ſhould be [q] Yea, yea, and Nay, nay?

18 [10] Yea, God is [r] faithful, that our word toward you was not Yea, and Nay.

19 [11] For the Son of God, Jeſus Chriſt, who was preached among you by us, that is, by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, [s] was not Yea, and Nay: but in [t] him it was Yea.

20 [12] For all the promiſes of God in him are Yea, and are in [u] him Amen, unto the glory of God through [x] us.

21 [13] And it is God which ſtabliſheth us with you in Chriſt, and hath anointed us.

A. D. 60.

22 Who hath alſo ſealed us, and hath given the [y] earneſt of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 [14] Now, I call God for a record unto my [z] ſoul, that to ſpare you, I came not as yet unto Corinth.

24 [15] Not that we have dominion over your faith, but we are helpers of your [a] joy: for by faith ye ſtand.

CHAP. II.

1 He excuſeth his not coming unto them, 2 and privily reprehendeth them. 4 He ſheweth that ſuch is his affection towards them, 5 that he never rejoiceth but when they are merry. 6 Perceiving the adulterer (whom he commanded to be delivered up to Satan) to repent, he requeſteth that they forgive him. 13 He mentioneth his going into Macedonia.

BUT I determined thus in myſelf, that I would not come again to you in [b] heavineſs.

2 For if I make you ſorry, who is he then that ſhould make me glad, but the ſame which is made ſorry by me?

3 And I wrote the ſame thing unto you, leſt when I came, I ſhould take heavineſs of them, of whom I ought to rejoice: this [c] confidence have I in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all:

4 For in great affliction, and anguiſh of heart, I wrote unto you with many tears: not that ye ſhould be made ſorry, but that ye might perceive the love which I have, eſpecially unto you.

5 [d] And if any hath cauſed ſorrow, the ſame hath

---

[g] From theſe great dangers.

[6] That he may not ſeem to boaſt himſelf, he attributeth all to God, and therewith alſo confeſſeth that he attributeth much to the prayers of the faithful.

[7] The end of the afflictions of the ſaints, is the glory of God, and therefore they ought to be precious unto us.

[8] Secondly, he putteth away another ſlander, to wit, that he was a light man, and ſuch a one as was not likely to be credited, ſeeing that he promiſed to come unto them, and came not. And firſt he ſpeaketh of the ſimplicity of his mind, and ſincerity, which they knew both by his voice when he was preſent, and they ought to acknowledge it alſo in his letters, being abſent: and moreover he proteſteth that he will never be otherwiſe.

[h] With clearneſs, and holy and true plainneſs of mind, as God himſelf can witneſs.

[i] Truſting to that very wiſdom which God of his free goodneſs hath given me from heaven.

[k] He ſaith he writeth barely and ſimply: for he that writeth in coloured ſort, is rightly ſaid to write otherwiſe than we read: and this he ſaith the Corinthians ſhall truly know and like of very well.

[m] Paul's rejoicing in the Lord was, that he had won the Corinthians: and they themſelves rejoiced that ſuch an apoſtle was their inſtructor, and taught them ſo purely and ſincerely.

[n] When he ſhall ſit as judge.

[o] Another benefit.

[9] He putteth away their ſlander and falſe report by denying it, and firſt of all, in that that divers went about to perſuade the Corinthians, that in preaching of the goſpel, Paul agreed not to himſelf: for this was the matter and the caſe.

[p] As men do which will raſhly promiſe any thing, and change their purpoſe at every turning of an hand.

[q] That I ſhould ſay and unſay a thing?

[10] He calleth God to witneſs and for judge, of his conſtancy in preaching and teaching one ſelf-ſame goſpel.

[r] True, and of whoſe faithful witneſs it were horrible wickedneſs to doubt.

[11] He joineth alſo with himſelf, his fellows as witneſſes, with whom he fully conſented in teaching one ſelf-ſame thing, to wit, one ſelf-ſame Chriſt.

[s] Was not diverſe and wavering.

[t] That is, in God.

[12] Laſt of all, he declareth the ſum of his doctrine, to wit, that all the promiſes of ſalvation are ſure and ratified in Chriſt.

[u] Chriſt is ſet forth to exhibit and fulfil them alſo moſt aſſuredly, and without all doubt.

[x] Through our miniſtry.

[13] He attributeth the praiſe of this conſtancy, only to the grace of God, through the Holy Ghoſt, and therewithal concludeth, that they cannot doubt of his faith and his fellows, without doing injury to the Spirit of God, ſeeing that they themſelves do know all this to be true.

[14] Now coming to the matter, he ſweareth that he did not only not lightly alter his purpoſe of coming to them, but rather that he came not unto them for this cauſe, that he might not be conſtrained to deal more ſharply with them being preſent, than he would.

[z] Againſt myſelf, and to the danger of mine own life.

[15] He removeth all ſuſpicion of arrogancy, declaring that he ſpeaketh not as a lord unto them, but as a ſervant, appointed of God to comfort them.

[a] He ſetteth the joy and peace of conſcience, which God is author of, againſt tyrannous fear, and therewithal ſheweth the end of the goſpel.

[b] Cauſing grief amongſt you, which he ſhould have done, if he had come to them before they had repented them.

[c] For I truſted that you would take that out of the way forthwith which you knew I was diſcontented with, conſidering how you are perſuaded that my joy is your joy.

[d] He paſſeth to another part of this epiſtle: which notwithſtanding is put amongſt the firſt, whereunto he returneth afterward: and he handleth the releaſing and unlooſing of the inceſtuous perſon, becauſe he ſeemed to have given ſufficient teſtimony of his repentance: ſhewing the true uſe of excommunication, to wit, that it proceed not of hatred, but of love, and ſo end, leſt if we keep no meaſure, we ſerve Satan the devil.

A. D. 60. hath not made [c] me ſorry, but [d] partly (leſt I ſhould more [e] charge him) you all.

6 It is ſufficient unto the ſame man, that he was rebuked of many.

7 So that now contrariwiſe ye ought rather to [f] forgive him, and comfort him, leſt the ſame ſhould be ſwallowed up with overmuch heavineſs.

8 Wherefore, I pray you, that you would [g] confirm your love towards him.

9 For this cauſe alſo did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye would be obedient in all things.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive alſo: for verily if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your ſakes forgave I it in the [h] ſight of Chriſt,

11 Leſt Satan ſhould circumvent us: for we are not ignorant of his [i] enterpriſes.

12 ¶ [2] Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Chriſt's goſpel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord,

13 I had no reſt in my ſpirit, becauſe I found not Titus my brother, but took my leave of them, and went away into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always maketh us to triumph in Chriſt, and maketh manifeſt the [k] ſavour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 [3] For we are unto God the ſweet ſavour of Chriſt, in them that are ſaved, and in them which periſh.

16 To the one we are the ſavour of death, unto death, and to the other the ſavour of life, unto life: [4] and who is ſufficient for theſe things?

* Ch. 4. 2. 17 * For we are not as many, which make [l] merchandize of the word of God: but as of ſincerity, but as of God in the ſight of God ſpeak we in Chriſt.

CHAP. III.

A. D. 60.

1 He deſireth no other commendation, 3 than their continuing in the faith. 6 He is a miniſter, not of the letter, but of the Spirit. 8 He ſheweth the difference of the law, and the goſpel. 13 That the brightneſs of the law doth rather dim the ſight than lighten it: 18 but the goſpel doth make manifeſt God's countenance unto us.

DO we begin to praiſe ourſelves again? or need we, as ſome other, epiſtles of recommendations unto you, or letters of recommendations from you?

2 Ye are our epiſtle, written in our hearts, which is underſtood and read of all men:

3 In that ye are [a] manifeſt, to be the epiſtle of Chriſt, [b] miniſtered by us, and written, not with ink, but with the Spirit of the [c] living God: [1] not in tables of ſtone, but in fleſhly tables of the heart.

4 And ſuch [d] truſt have we through Chriſt to God:

5 Not that we are ſufficient of ourſelves, to think any thing as of ourſelves: but our [e] ſufficiency is of God,

6 [2] Who alſo hath made us able miniſters of the New Teſtament, not of the [f] letter, but of the Spirit: for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.

7 If then the miniſtration of death, written with letters [g] and ingraven in ſtones, was [h] glorious, ſo that the children of Iſrael could not behold the face of Moſes, for the glory of his countenance (which glory is done away)

8 How ſhall not the [i] miniſtration of the Spirit be more glorious?

9 For if the miniſtry of condemnation was glorious, much more doth the miniſtration of [k] righteouſneſs exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was glorified, was not

---

[c] As if he ſaid, All that ſorrow is ſo clean wiped away, as though he had never felt it.

[d] As for me (ſaith Paul) I have no more to do with him.

[e] Leſt I ſhould overcharge him, who is burdened enough of himſelf, which I would be glad were taken from him.

[f] That whereas before you puniſhed him ſharply, you would now forgive him.

[g] That at my intreaty, you would declare by the conſent of the whole church, that you take him again for a brother.

[h] Truly, and from the heart.

[i] Of his miſchievous counſels and deviliſh will.

[2] He returneth to the confirmation of his apoſtleſhip, and bringeth forth the teſtimonies, both of his labour, and alſo of God's bleſſing.

[k] He alludeth to the anointing of the prieſts, and the incenſe of the ſacrifices.

[3] He denieth that aught ſhould be taken away from the dignity of his apoſtleſhip, becauſe they ſaw evidently that it was not received with like ſucceſs in every place, nay rather very many rejected and deteſted him, ſeeing that he preached Chriſt not only as a Saviour of them that believe, but alſo as a judge of them that contemn him.

[4] Again he putteth away all ſuſpicion of arrogancy, attributing all things that he did to the virtue of God, whom he ſerveth ſincerely, and without all diſhoneſt affection: whereof he maketh them witneſſes, even to the 6th verſe of the next chapter.

[l] We do not handle it craftily and covetouſly, or leſs ſincerely than we ought: and he uſeth a metaphor which is taken from huckſters, which uſe to play the falſe harlots with whatſoever cometh into their hands.

[a] The apoſtle frameth his ſpeech wiſely, that by little and little, he may come from the commendation of the perſon, to the matter itſelf.

[b] Which I took pains to write as it were.

[c] By the way, he ſetteth the virtue of God againſt the ink wherewith epiſtles are commonly written, to ſhew that it was wrought by God.

[1] He alludeth by the way to the compariſon of the outward miniſtry of the prieſthood of Levi, with the miniſtry of the goſpel, and the apoſtolical miniſtry, which he handleth afterward more fully.

[d] This boldneſs we ſhew, and thus glorioully may we boaſt of the worthineſs and fruit of our miniſtry.

[e] In that we are fit and meet to make other men partakers of ſo great a grace.

[2] He amplifieth his miniſtry and his fellows: that is to ſay, the miniſtry of the goſpel, comparing it with the miniſtry of the law, which he conſidereth in the perſon of Moſes, by whom the law was given: againſt whom he ſetteth Chriſt the author of the goſpel. Now this compariſon is taken from the very ſubſtance of the miniſtry. The law is as it were a writing of itſelf dead, and without efficacy; but the goſpel, or new covenant, is as it were the very virtue of God itſelf in renewing, juſtifying, and ſaving of men. The law propoundeth death, accuſing all men of unrighteouſneſs: the goſpel offereth and giveth righteouſneſs and life. The governance of the law ſerved for a time to the promiſe: the goſpel remaineth to the end of the world. Therefore what is the glory of that in compariſon of the majeſty of this?

[f] Not of the law, but of the goſpel.

[g] Imprinted and ingraven: ſo that by this place we may plainly perceive, that the apoſtle ſpeaketh not of the ceremonies of the law, but even of the ten commandments.

[h] This word, Glory, betokeneth a brightneſs, and a majeſty which was bodily in Moſes, but ſpiritually in Chriſt.

[i] Whereby God offereth, yea, and giveth the Spirit, not as a dead thing, but a quickening ſpirit, working life.

[k] To wit, of Chriſt, which being imputed to us as our own, we are not only not condemned, but alſo we are crowned as righteous.

A. D. 60.

not glorified in this point, that is, as touching the exceeding glory.

11 For if that which ſhould be [l] aboliſhed, was glorious, much more ſhall that which remaineth, be glorious:

12 [3] Seeing then that we have ſuch truſt, we uſe great boldneſs of ſpeech.

* Exod. 34. 34.

13 * [4] And we are not as Moſes, which put a vail upon his face, that the children of Iſrael ſhould not look unto the [m] end of that which ſhould be aboliſhed.

14 Therefore their minds are hardened: for until this day remaineth the ſame covering untaken away in the reading of the Old Teſtament, which vail in Chriſt is put away.

15 But even unto this day, when Moſes is read, the vail is laid over their hearts.

16 Nevertheleſs, when their heart ſhall be turned to the Lord, the vail ſhall be taken away.

* John 4. 14.

17 Now the [n] Lord is the * Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 [5] But we all behold as in a mirror the glory of the Lord with open face, and are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAP. IV.

1 He ſheweth that he hath ſo laboured in preaching the goſpel, 4 that ſuch are even blinded of Satan, who do not perceive the brightneſs thereof. 7 That the ſame is carried in earthen veſſels, 10 who are ſubject to many miſeries: 16 and therefore he exhorteth them by his own example to be courageous, 17 and contemn this preſent life.

A. D. 60.

THerefore, [1] ſeeing that we have this miniſtry, as we have received mercy, we [a] faint not:

2 But have caſt from us the [b] cloaks of ſhame, and walk not in craftineſs, neither handle we the word of God [c] deceitfully: but in declaration of the truth we approve ourſelves to every man's conſcience in the ſight of God.

3 [2] If our goſpel be then hid, it is hid to them that are loſt:

4 In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds, that is, of the infidels, that the [d] light of the glorious goſpel of Chriſt, which is the [e] image of God, ſhould not ſhine unto them.

5 [3] For we preach not ourſelves, but Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, and ourſelves your ſervants for [f] Jeſus's ſake.

* Gen. 1. 3.

6 For God * [g] that commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs, is he which hath ſhined in our hearts, to give the [h] light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt.

7 [4] But we have this treaſure in earthen veſſels, [5] that the excellency of that power might be of God, and not of us.

8 We are afflicted on every ſide, yet are we not in diſtreſs: we are in doubt, but yet we deſpair not.

9 We are perſecuted, but not forſaken: caſt down, but we periſh not.

10 [6] Every where we bear about in our body the [i] dying of the Lord Jeſus, that the life of Jeſus might be alſo made manifeſt in our bodies.

11 For we which [k] live are always delivered unto

[l] The law, yea, and the ten commandments themſelves, together with Moſes, is aboliſhed, if we conſider the miniſtry of Moſes apart by itſelf.

[3] He ſheweth wherein ſtandeth this glory of the preaching of the goſpel, to wit, in that that it ſetteth forth plainly and evidently, that which the law ſhewed darkly: for it ſent them that heard it to be healed of Chriſt, which was to come, after that it had wounded them.

[4] He expoundeth by the way the allegory of Moſes's covering, which was a token of the darkneſs and weakneſs that is in men, which were rather dulled by the bright ſhining of the law than lightened: which covering was taken away by the coming of Chriſt, who lighteneth the hearts, and turneth them to the Lord, that we may be brought from the ſlavery of this blindneſs, and ſet in the liberty of the light by the virtue of Chriſt's Spirit.

[m] Into the very bottom of Moſes's miniſtry.

[n] Chriſt is that Spirit which taketh away that covering, by working in our hearts, whereunto alſo the law itſelf called us, though in vain, becauſe it ſpeaketh to dead men, until the Spirit quickeneth us.

[5] Going forwards in the allegory of the covering, he compareth the goſpel to a glaſs, which although it be moſt bright and ſparkling, yet doth it not only not dazzle their eyes which look in it, as the law doth, but alſo transformeth them with its beams, ſo that they alſo be partakers of the glory and ſhining of it, to lighten others: as Chriſt ſaid unto his, "You are the light of the world," whereas he himſelf was the only light. We are alſo commanded in another place to ſhine as candles before the world, becauſe we are partakers of God's Spirit. But Paul ſpeaketh here properly of the miniſters of the goſpel, as it appeareth by that that goeth before, and that that cometh after, and that ſetting them his own example and his fellows.

[1] Now he plainly witneſſeth that both he and his fellows (through the mercy of God) do their vocation and duty uprightly, and ſincerely, neglecting all dangers.

[a] Though we are broken in pieces with miſeries and calamities, yet we yield not.

[b] Subtilty and all kind of deceit which men hunt after, as it were dens and lurking holes to cover their ſhameleſs dealings withal.

[c] This is it that in the former chapter he called, making merchandiſe of the word of God.

[2] An objection: Many hear the goſpel, and yet are no more lightened thereby, than by the preaching of the law. He anſwereth, The fault is in the men themſelves, whoſe eyes Satan plucketh out, who ruleth in this world. And yet notwithſtanding doth he and his fellows ſet forth the moſt clear light of the goſpel to be ſeen and beholden, ſeeing that Chriſt whom only they preach, is he in whom only God will be known, and as it were, ſeen.

[d] The light of plain and lightſome preaching, which telleth forth the glory of Chriſt.

[e] In whom the Father ſetteth forth himſelf to be ſeen and beholden.

[3] He removeth, according to his accuſtomed manner, all ſuſpicion of ambition, avouching that he teacheth faithfully, but as a ſervant; and witneſſing that all this light, which he and his fellows give to others, proceedeth from the Lord.

[f] To preach this ſelf-ſame Jeſus to you.

[g] Which made it only with his word.

[h] That being lightened of God, we ſhould in like ſort give that light to others.

[4] He taketh away a ſtumbling-block, by which was darkened amongſt ſome the bright ſhining of the miniſtry of the goſpel, to wit, becauſe the apoſtles were the moſt miſerable of all men. Paul anſwereth, that he and his fellows are as it were earthen veſſels, but yet there is in them a moſt precious treaſure.

[5] He bringeth marvellous reaſons why the Lord doth ſo afflict his chiefeſt ſervants, to the end, ſaith he, that all men may perceive that they ſtand not by any man's virtue, but by the ſingular virtue of God, in that they die a thouſand times, but never periſh.

[6] An amplification of the former ſentence, wherein he compareth his afflictions to a daily death, and the virtue of the Spirit of God in Chriſt, to life, which oppreſſeth that death.

[i] So Paul calleth that miſerable ſtate and condition, that the faithful, but eſpecially the miniſters, are in.

[k] Which live that life, to wit, by the Spirit of Chriſt, among ſo many and ſo great miſeries.

A. D. 60.

unto death for Jeſus's ſake, that the life alſo of Jeſus might be made manifeſt in our [l] mortal fleſh:

12 [7] So then death worketh in us, and life in you.

13 [8] And becauſe we have the ſame [m] ſpirit of faith, according as it is written, * I believed, and therefore have I ſpoken: we alſo believe, and therefore ſpeak.

* Pſ. 116. 10.

14 Knowing that he which hath raiſed up the Lord Jeſus, ſhall raiſe us up alſo by Jeſus, and ſhall ſet us with you.

15 [9] For all things are for your ſakes, [n] that that moſt plenteous grace by the thankſgiving of many, may redound to the praiſe of God,

16 Therefore we faint not: [10] but though our outward man periſh, yet the inward man is [o] renewed daily.

17 For our [p] light affliction which is but for a moment, cauſeth unto us a far more excellent and an eternal weight of [q] glory:

18 While we look not on the things which are ſeen, but on the things which are not ſeen: for the things which are ſeen, are temporal: but the things which are not ſeen, are eternal.

CHAP. V.

1 He continueth in the ſame argument, 6 touching the certain hope of ſalvation 8 through faith, 12 not to praiſe himſelf, 14 ſeeing he hath God and his church before his eyes, 17 and eſteemeth nothing, but newneſs of life in Chriſt.

FOR [1] we know that if our earthly houſe of this tabernacle be deſtroyed, we have a building given of God, that is, an houſe not made with hands, but eternal in the heavens.

A. D. 60.

2 For therefore we ſigh, deſiring to be [a] clothed with our houſe, which is from [b] heaven.

3 [2] Becauſe that if we be clothed, we ſhall not be * found naked.

* Rev. 16. 15.

4 For indeed we that are in this tabernacle, ſigh and are burdened, becauſe we would not be unclothed, but would be clothed upon, that mortality might be ſwallowed up of life.

5 And he that hath [c] created us for this thing is God, who alſo hath given unto us the earneſt of the Spirit.

6 [3] Therefore we are alway [d] bold, though we know that while we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord.

7 (For we walk by [e] faith, and not by ſight.)

8 Nevertheleſs, we are [f] bold, and love rather to remove out of the body, and to dwell with the Lord.

9 Wherefore alſo we [g] covet, that both dwelling at home, and removing from home, we may be acceptable to him.

10 * [4] For we muſt all [h] appear before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt, that every man may receive the things which are done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or evil.

* Rom. 14. 10.

11 [5] Knowing therefore that [i] terror of the Lord, we perſuade men, and we are made manifeſt unto God, and I truſt alſo that we are made manifeſt in your conſciences.

---

[l] Subject to that miſerable condition.

[7] A very cunning concluſion: as if he would ſay, Therefore to be ſhort, we die that you may live by our death, for that they ventured into all thoſe dangers for the building of the church's ſake, and they ceaſed not to confirm all the faithful with the examples of their patience.

[8] He declareth the former ſentence, ſhewing that he and his fellows die in a ſort, to purchaſe life to others, but yet notwithſtanding they are partakers of the ſame life with them: becauſe they themſelves do firſt believe that which they propounded to others to believe, to wit, that they alſo ſhall be ſaved together with them in Chriſt.

[9] He ſheweth how this conſtancy is preſerved in them, to wit, becauſe they reſpect God's glory, and the ſalvation of the church committed unto them.

[n] When it ſhall pleaſe God to deliver me, and reſtore me to you, that exceeding benefit which ſhall be poured upon me, ſhall in like ſort redound to the glory of God, by the thankſgiving of many.

[10] He addeth as it were a triumphant ſong, how that he is outwardly afflicted, but inwardly he profiteth daily: and paſſeth not at all for all the miſeries that may be ſuſtained in this life, in compariſon of that moſt conſtant and eternal glory.

[o] Gathereth new ſtrength, that the outward man be not overcome with the miſeries which come freſhly, one upon the neck of another, being maintained and upholden with the ſtrength of the inward man.

[p] Afflictions are not called light, as though they were light of themſelves, but becauſe they paſs away quickly, when as indeed our whole life is of no great long continuance.

[q] Which remaineth for ever firm and ſtable, and can never be ſhaken.

[1] Taking occaſion by the former compariſon, he compareth this miſerable body, as it is in this life, to a frail and brittle tabernacle, againſt which he ſetteth the heavenly tabernacle, ſo terming that ſure and everlaſting condition of this ſame body glorified in heaven, inſomuch, ſaith he, that we are not only not addicted to this tabernacle, but alſo do with ſobs and ſighs deſire rather that tabernacle. And ſo this place alſo concerning the glory to come, is put within the treatiſe of the dignity of the miniſtry, as the other was, whereof we ſpake in the beginning of the ſecond chapter.

[a] He calleth the glory of immortality, which we ſhall be as it were cloathed with, a garment.

[b] Heavenly, not that the ſubſtance of it is heavenly, but for the glory of it.

[2] An expoſition of the former ſaying: We do not without cauſe deſire to be clad with the heavenly houſe, that is, with that everlaſting and immortal glory, as with a garment: for when we depart hence, we ſhall not remain naked, having once caſt off the covering of this body, but we ſhall take our bodies again, which ſhall put on as it were another garment beſides: and therefore we ſigh not for the wearineſs of this life, but for the deſire of a better life: Neither is this deſire in vain, for we are made to that life, the pledge whereof we have, even the Spirit of adoption.

[c] He meaneth that firſt creation, to give us to underſtand that our bodies were made to this end, that they ſhould be cloathed with heavenly immortality.

[3] He inferreth upon that ſentence that went next before, thus. Therefore ſeeing that we know by the Spirit, that we are ſtrangers ſo long as we are here, we patiently ſuffer this tarriance (for we are now ſo with God, that we behold him but by faith, and are therefore now abſent from him) but ſo that we aſpire and have a longing always to him: therefore alſo we behave ourſelves ſo, that we may be acceptable to him, both while we live here, and when we go from hence to him.

[d] He calleth them (bold) which are always reſolved with a quiet and ſettled mind to ſuffer what danger ſoever, nothing doubting but their end ſhall be happy.

[e] Faith, of thoſe things which we hope for, and not having God preſently in our view.

[f] And yet we are in ſuch ſort bold, and do ſo paſs on our pilgrimage with a valiant and a quiet mind, that yet notwithſtanding we had rather depart home to the Lord.

[g] And ſeeing it is ſo, we ſtrive to live ſo, that both in this our pilgrimage here, we may pleaſe him, and that at length we may be received home to him.

[4] That no man might think it to pertain to all, which he ſpake of that heavenly glory, he addeth, that every one ſhall firſt render an account of his pilgrimage, after that he is departed from hence.

[h] We muſt all appear perſonally, and enquiry ſhall be made of us, that all may ſee how we have lived.

[5] Now he paſſeth over, and taking occaſion of the former ſentence, returneth to the former chapter, verſe 16, confirming his own ſincerity and his fellows.

[i] That terrible judgment.

A. D. 60.

12 [6] For we praiſe not ourſelves again unto you, but give you an occaſion to rejoice of us, that ye may have to anſwer againſt them which rejoice in the [k] face, and not in the heart.

13 [7] For whether we be out of our wit, we are it to God: or whether we be in our right mind, we are it unto you.

14 [8] For that love of Chriſt [l] conſtraineth us,

15 Becauſe we thus judge, that if [m] one be dead for all, then were all dead: and he died for all, that they which live, ſhould not henceforth [n] live unto themſelves, but unto him which died for them, and roſe again.

16 [9] Wherefore, henceforth know we no man after the fleſh: [10] yea though we had known Chriſt after the fleſh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.

17 [11] Therefore if any man be in Chriſt, let him be a [o] new creature. * Old things are paſſed away: behold, all things are become new.

* Iſa. 43. 19. Rev. 21. 5.

18 [12] And all things are of God, which hath reconciled us unto himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and hath given unto us the miniſtry of reconciliation.

19 For God was in Chriſt, and reconciled the world to himſelf, not imputing their ſins unto them, and hath [p] committed to us the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then are we ambaſſadors for Chriſt: as though God did beſeech you through us, we pray you in Chriſt's ſtead, that ye be reconciled to God.

21 For he hath made him to be [q] ſin for us, which [r] knew no ſin, that we ſhould be made the [s] righteouſneſs of God in him.

CHAP. VI.

A. D. 60.

1 He exhorteth them to lead their lives as it becometh chriſtians, 5 neither to be diſmayed in tribulation, 9 nor puffed up with vain glory: 14 to avoid all uncleanneſs, 16 conſidering that they are the temples of the living God.

SO [1] we therefore as workers together beſeech you, that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.

2 [2] For he ſaith, * I have heard thee in a time [a] accepted, and in the day of ſalvation have I ſuccoured thee: behold now the accepted time, behold now the day of ſalvation.

* Iſa. 49. 8.

3 [3] We give no occaſion of offence in any thing, that our miniſtry ſhould not be reprehended.

4 But in all things we [b] approve ourſelves as * the miniſters of God [4] in much patience, in afflictions, in neceſſities, in diſtreſſes,

* 1 Cor. 4. 1.

5 In ſtripes, in priſons, in [c] tumults, in labours,

6 [5] By watchings, by faſtings, by purity, by knowledge, by long-ſuffering, by kindneſs, by the Holy Ghoſt, by love unfeigned,

7 By the [d] word of truth, by the [e] power of God, by the [f] armour of righteouſneſs on the right hand, and on the left,

8 By honour and diſhonour, by evil report, and good report: as deceivers, and yet true:

9 As unknown, and yet known: as dying, and behold, we live: as chaſtened, and yet not killed:

10 As

[6] He removeth all ſuſpicion of pride, by a new reaſon, becauſe it is behoveable, not for his part, but for theirs, that his apoſtleſhip be counted ſincere againſt the vain oſtentation of a few others.

[k] In outward diſguiſings, and that coloured ſhew of man's wiſdom and eloquence, and not in true godlineſs, which is ſealed in the heart.

[7] The meaning is: Even when I am mad (as ſome men think of me) whilſt I ſeem as a fool to boaſt myſelf, I do it for your profit, no leſs than when I preach the goſpel ſimply unto you.

[8] He goeth forward in putting away all ſuſpicion of deſire of eſtimation and boaſting: for the love of Chriſt, ſaith he, compelleth us hereunto, that ſeeing he died for us all, which were dead when as we lived to ourſelves (that is, while we were yet given to theſe earthly affections) we in like ſort ſhould conſecrate our whole life, which we have received of him, to him (to wit) being indued with the Holy Ghoſt, to this end and purpoſe, that we ſhould meditate upon nothing but that which is heavenly.

[m] He ſpeaketh here of ſanctification, whereby it cometh to paſs that Chriſt liveth in us.

[n] Look Romans, chap. 6. and 7.

[9] He ſheweth what it is, not to live to ourſelves but to Chriſt, to wit, to know no man according to the fleſh, that is to ſay, to be converſant amongſt men, as not to care for thoſe worldly and carnal things, as they do which reſpect a man's ſtock, his country, form, glory, riches, and ſuch like, wherein men commonly dote and weary themſelves.

[10] An amplification: This is, ſaith he, ſo true, that we do not now think carnally of Chriſt himſelf, who hath now left the world, and therefore muſt be conſidered of us ſpiritually.

[11] An exhortation for every man which is renewed with the Spirit of Chriſt, to meditate heavenly things, and not earthly.

[o] As a thing made anew of God, for though a man be not newly created when God giveth him the ſpirit of regeneration, but only his qualities are changed, yet notwithſtanding it pleaſed the Holy Ghoſt to ſpeak ſo, to teach us that we muſt attribute all things to the glory of God: not that we are ſtocks and blocks, but becauſe that God createth in us, both the will to will well, and the power to do well.

[12] He commendeth the excellency of the miniſtry of the goſpel, both by the authority of God himſelf, who is the author of that miniſtry, and alſo by the excellency of the doctrine of it: for it announceth atonement with God, by free forgiveneſs of our ſins, and juſtification offered unto us in Chriſt, and that ſo lovingly and liberally, that God himſelf doth after a ſort pray men by the mouth of his miniſters, to have conſideration of themſelves, and not to deſpiſe ſo great a benefit. And when he ſo ſaith, he plainly reprehendeth them which falſely challenged to themſelves the name of paſtors.

[q] A ſinner, not in himſelf, but by imputation of the guilt of all our ſins to him.

[r] Who was clean void of ſin.

[s] Righteous before God, and that with a righteouſneſs which is not eſſential to us, but being eſſential to Chriſt, God imputeth it to us through faith.

[1] Men do not only need the miniſtry of the goſpel, before they have received grace, that they may be partakers of it, but alſo after they have received grace, that they may continue in it.

[2] In that that grace is offered, it is of the grace of God, who hath appointed times and ſeaſons to all things, that we may take occaſion when it is offered.

[a] Which I of my free mercy and love towards thee liked of and appointed: at which time God poured out that his marvellous love upon us.

[3] He ſheweth the Corinthians the pattern of a true miniſter in his own example and Timotheus's, and Sylvanus's, to the end that (as he purpoſed from the beginning) he might procure authority to himſelf, and his like.

[b] Declare and ſhew indeed.

[4] He firſt of all reckoneth up thoſe things, which are neither always in the miniſters, nor without exception, unleſs it be according to the affection of the mind, patience only excepted, which alſo is one of the virtues which ought to be always in a good miniſter.

[c] In toſſing to and fro, finding no place of reſt and quietneſs.

[5] Secondly, he reckoneth up ſuch virtues as are neceſſary, and ought alway to be in them, and whereby, as by good armour, all lets and hindrances may be overcome.

[d] Preaching of the goſpel.

[e] Power to work miracles, and to bring under the wicked.

[f] Uprightneſs.

A. D. 60.

10 As ſorrowing, and yet alway rejoicing: as poor, and yet making many rich: as having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things.

11 [6] O Corinthians, our mouth is [g] open unto you: our heart is made large.

12 Ye are not [h] kept ſtrait in us, but ye are kept ſtrait in your own [i] bowels.

13 Now for the ſame recompence, I ſpeak as to my children, Be you alſo enlarged.

* Eccleſ. 3. 18.

14 [7] Be not unequally yoked with the infidels: for * what fellowſhip hath righteouſneſs with unrighteouſneſs? and what communion hath light with darkneſs?

15 And what concord hath Chriſt with Belial? or what [k] part hath the believer with the infidel?

* 1 Cor. 3. 16. and 6. 19. * Lev. 26. 11.

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? * for ye are the temple of the [l] living God: as God hath ſaid, * I will [m] dwell among them, and walk there: and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

* Iſa. 52. 11.

17 * Wherefore come out from among them, and ſeparate yourſelves, ſaith the Lord, and touch none unclean thing, and I will receive you.

* Jer. 31. 11.

18 * And I will be a father unto you, and ye ſhall be my ſons and daughters, ſaith the Lord Almighty.

CHAP. VII.

1 Leſt by overmuch urging them he ſhould diſmay their tender minds, 2 he proveth that all that he ſaid, 4 proceeded of the great good will he bare unto them: 8 and therefore they ſhould not be offended that he made them ſorry, 10 and brought them to repentance not to be repented of.

SEEING then we have theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe ourſelves from all filthineſs of the [a] fleſh and ſpirit, and finiſh our ſanctification in the fear of God.

2 [1] [b] Receive us: we have done wrong to no man: we have corrupted no man: we have defrauded no man.

3 I ſpeak it not to your [c] condemnation: for I have ſaid before, that ye are in our hearts, to die and live together.

4 I uſe great boldneſs of ſpeech toward you: I rejoice greatly in you: I am filled with comfort, and am exceeding joyous in all our tribulation.

A. D. 60.

5 For when we were come into Macedonia, our fleſh had no reſt, but we were troubled on every ſide, fightings without, and terrors within.

6 But God, that comforteth the [d] abject, comforted us at the [e] coming of Titus:

7 And not by his coming only, but alſo by the conſolation wherewith he was comforted of you, when he told us your great deſire, your mourning, your fervent mind to me-ward, ſo that I rejoiced much more.

8 [2] For though I made you ſorry with a letter, I repent not, though I did repent: for I perceive that the ſame epiſtle made you ſorry, though it were but for a ſeaſon.

9 I now rejoice, not that ye were ſorry, but that ye ſorrowed to [f] repentance: for ye ſorrowed godly, ſo that in nothing ye were hurt by us.

10 For [g] godly ſorrow cauſeth repentance unto ſalvation, not to be repented of: but the worldly ſorrow cauſeth death.

11 For behold, this thing that ye have been godly ſorry, what great care it hath wrought in you: yea, what clearing of yourſelves: yea, what indignation: yea, what fear: yea, how great deſire: yea, what a zeal: yea, what revenge: in all things ye have ſhewed yourſelves, that ye are pure in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cauſe that had done the wrong, neither for his cauſe that had the injury, but that our care toward you in the [h] ſight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we were comforted, becauſe ye were comforted: but rather we rejoiced much more for the joy of Titus, becauſe his ſpirit was refreſhed by you all.

14 For if that I have boaſted any thing to him of you, I have not been aſhamed: but as I have ſpoken unto you all things in truth, even ſo our boaſting unto Titus was true.

15 And his inward affection is more abundant toward you, when he remembereth the obedience of you all, and how with fear and trembling ye received him.

[6] Going about to rebuke them, he ſaith firſt, that he dealeth with them ſincerely, and with an open and plain heart, and therewithal complaineth that they do not the like in loving again their father.

[g] The opening of the mouth and heart, betokeneth a moſt earneſt affection in him that ſpeaketh, as it fareth commonly with them that are in ſome great joy.

[h] You are in my heart, as in a houſe, and that no narrow or ſtraight houſe, for I have opened my whole heart to you, but you are inwardly ſtrait-laced to me-ward.

[i] After the manner of the Hebrews, he calleth thoſe tender affections which reſt in the heart and bowels.

[7] Now he rebuketh them boldly, for that they became fellows with infidels in outward idolatry, as though it were a thing indifferent. And this is the fourth part of this epiſtle, the concluſion whereof is, that ſuch as the Lord hath vouchſafed the name of his children, muſt keep themſelves pure, not only in mind, but alſo in body, that they may wholly be holy unto the Lord.

[k] What can there be between them?

[l] He ſetteth the living God againſt idols.

[m] God dwelleth with us, becauſe Chriſt is become God with us.

[a] Both of body and ſoul, that by this means the ſanctification may be perfect, conſiſting in both the parts thereof.

[1] He returneth again from that admonition to his own perſon, oppoſing the teſtimonies both of his faithſulneſs, and alſo of his continual good will towards them.

[b] Let me have ſome place amongſt you, that I may teach you.

[c] To condemn you of unkindneſs or treachery.

[d] Whoſe hearts are caſt down, and are very far ſpent.

[e] With thoſe things which Titus told me of you at his coming, to wit, how fruitfully you read over my letters, moreover, and beſides that, I am exceedingly refreſhed with his preſence.

[2] An objection. But thou haſt handled us roughly: the apoſtle anſwereth that he uſed not this roughneſs without grief. And he addeth moreover, that he is alſo glad now that he drove them to that ſorrow, although it was againſt his will, ſince it was ſo profitable unto them: for there is a ſorrow not only praiſe-worthy, but alſo neceſſary, to wit, whereby repentance groweth by certain degrees, for the which repentance he praiſeth them highly. And this is the fifth part of this epiſtle.

[f] Inſomuch that that ſorrow did you much good towards the amending of your lewdneſs and ſins.

[g] Godly ſorrow is when we are not terrified with the fear of puniſhment, but becauſe we feel we have offended God, our moſt merciful Father. Contrary to this there is another ſorrow, that only feareth puniſhment, or when a man is vexed for the loſs of ſome worldly goods: the fruit of the firſt is repentance, the fruit of the ſecond is deſperation, unleſs the Lord help ſpeedily.

[h] It was not coloured nor counterfeit, but ſuch as I dare ſtand to before God.

A. D. 60.

16 I rejoice therefore that I may put my confidence in you in all things.

CHAP. VIII.

1 He exhorteth them by the example of the Macedonians, 9 and alſo even of Chriſt himſelf, 14 to be liberal towards the ſaints: 16 for which purpoſe he ſheweth that Titus 18 and another brother came unto them.

WE [1] do you alſo to wit, brethren, of the [a] grace of God beſtowed upon the churches of Macedonia,

2 Becauſe in [b] great trial of affliction their joy abounded, and their moſt extreme poverty abounded unto their rich liberality.

3 For to their power (I bear record) yea, and beyond their power, they were [c] willing.

4 And prayed us with great inſtance, that we would receive the [d] grace, and fellowſhip of the miniſtering which is toward the ſaints.

5 [2] And this they did, not as we looked for: but gave their ownſelves, firſt to the Lord, and after unto us by the will of God.

6 That we ſhould exhort Titus, that as he had begun, ſo he would alſo accompliſh the ſame grace among you alſo.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in faith and word, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love towards us, even ſo ſee that ye abound in this grace alſo.

8 [3] This ſay I not by commandment, but becauſe of the [e] diligence of others: therefore prove I the [f] naturalneſs of your love.

9 [4] For ye know the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that he being rich, for your ſakes became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

10 [5] And I ſhew my mind herein: for this is expedient for you, which have begun not to do only, but alſo to [g] will, a year ago.

11 Now therefore perform to do it alſo, that as there was a readineſs to will, even ſo ye may perform it of that which ye have.

12 [6] For if there be firſt a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 [7] Neither is it that other men ſhould be eaſed, and you grieved: but upon [h] like condition, at this time your abundance ſupplieth their lack:

A. D. 60.

14 That alſo their abundance may be for your lack, that there may be equality:

15 As it is written, * He that gathered much, had nothing over: and he that gathered little, had not the leſs.

* Exod. 16. 18.

16 [8] And thanks be unto God, which hath put in the heart of Titus the ſame care for you.

17 Becauſe he accepted the exhortation, yea, he was ſo careful, that of his own accord he went unto you.

18 And we have ſent alſo with him the brother, whoſe praiſe is [i] in the goſpel throughout all the churches.

19 (And not ſo only, but is alſo choſen of the churches to be a fellow in our journey, concerning this [k] grace that is miniſtered by us unto the glory of the ſame Lord, and declaration of your prompt mind.)

20 Avoiding this, that no man ſhould blame us in this [l] abundance that is miniſtered by us.

21 * Providing for honeſt things, not only before the Lord, but alſo before men.

* Rom. 12. 17.

22 And we have ſent with them our brother, whom we have oft-times proved to be diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, for the great confidence which I have in you.

23 Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my fellow and helper to you-ward: or of our [m] brethren, they are meſſengers of the churches, and the [n] glory of Chriſt.

24 Wherefore ſhew toward them, and before the [o] churches, the proof of your love, and of the rejoicing that we have of you.

CHAP. IX.

1 Why, albeit he think well of their ready wills, 3 yet earneſtly exhorteth them: 4 he yieldeth a reaſon. 6 He compareth alms to ſeed ſowing, 13 which God doth repay with great gains.

---

[1] The ſixth part of this epiſtle, containing divers exhortations to ſtir up the Corinthians to liberality, wherewith the poverty of the church of Jeruſalem might be helped in time convenient. And firſt of all, he ſetteth out before them the examples of the churches of Macedonia, which otherwiſe were brought by great miſery to extreme poverty, to the end that they ſhould follow them.

[a] The benefit that God beſtowed upon the churches.

[b] For thoſe manifold afflictions wherewith the Lord tried them, did not only not quell their joyful readineſs, but alſo made it much more excellent and famous.

[c] Of their own accord they were liberal.

[d] He calleth that, Grace, that other men would have called a burden. And this verſe is to be expounded by the ſixth verſe.

[2] He applieth the forwardneſs of the Macedonians, in this, that they alſo deſired Paul to ſtir up the Corinthians to accompliſh the giving of alms, by ſending again of Titus unto them.

[3] Thirdly, he warneth them that they deceive not their expectation which they have conceived of them.

[f] Then appeareth the naturalneſs of our love, when as indeed, and that frankly and freely, we help our brethren even for Chriſt's ſake.

[4] The fourth argument, taken from the example of Chriſt.

[5] He taketh good heed that he ſeem not to wreſt it out of them by conſtraint, for unleſs it be voluntary, God doth not accept it.

[g] Not only to do, but alſo to do willingly: for he noteth out a ready willingneſs, without any inforcement by any other men, much leſs came it of ambition and vain glory.

[6] Againſt ſuch as uſe to excuſe themſelves becauſe they are not rich, as though it were only proper to rich men to help the poor.

[7] Chriſtian liberality is mutual, that proportion may be obſerved.

[h] That like as now in your abundance you help others, which are poor, with ſome part of your goods, ſo ſhould others in like ſort beſtow ſome of theirs upon you.

[8] He commendeth Titus and his two companions for many cauſes, both that their credit might not be ſuſpected, as though he had ſent them ſlily to ſpoil the churches, and alſo that they might be ſo much the readier to contribute.

[i] In the preaching of the goſpel.

[k] Theſe alms which are beſtowed for the relief of the church of Jeruſalem.

[l] In this plentiful liberality of the churches, which is committed to our truſt.

[m] Titus's two companions.

[n] By whom the glory of Chriſt is ſet forth.

[o] All churches ſhall be witneſſes of this your godly dealing, in whoſe preſence you are, for ſo much as you ſee the meſſengers whom they have choſen by all their conſents, and ſent them unto you.

A. D. 60.

FOR [1] as touching the miniſtering to the ſaints, it is ſuperfluous for me to write unto you.

2 For I know your readineſs of mind, whereof I boaſt myſelf of you unto them of Macedonia, and ſay, that Achaia was prepared a year ago, and your zeal hath provoked many.

3 Now have I ſent the brethren, leſt our rejoicing over you ſhould be in vain in this behalf, that ye (as I have ſaid) be ready:

4 Leſt if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we may not ſay, you) ſhould be aſhamed in this my [a] conſtant boaſting.

5 Wherefore, I thought it neceſſary to exhort the brethren to come before unto you, and to finiſh your benevolence appointed afore, that it might be ready, and come as of benevolence, and not as of [b] niggardlineſs.

6 [2] This yet remember, that he which ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reap alſo ſparingly: and he that ſoweth liberally, ſhall reap alſo liberally.

7 As every man [c] wiſheth in his heart, ſo let him give, not * [d] grudgingly, or of [e] neceſſity: * for God loveth a chearful giver.

*Rom. 12. 8.
*Eccleſ. 35. 10.

8 And God is able to make [f] all grace to abound toward you, that ye always having all ſufficiency in all things, may abound in [g] every good work.

*Pſ. 112. 9.

9 (* As it is written, He hath diſperſed abroad and hath given to the poor: his benevolence remaineth for [h] ever.

10 Alſo he that findeth ſeed to the ſower, will miniſter likewiſe bread for food, and multiply your ſeed, and increaſe the [i] fruits of your benevolence,)

11 That on all parts ye may be made rich unto all liberality, which cauſeth through us thankſgiving unto God.

12 [3] For the miniſtration of this ſervice not only ſupplieth the neceſſities of the ſaints, but alſo abundantly cauſeth many to give thanks to God

A. D. 60.

13 (Which by the [k] experiment of this miniſtration praiſe God for your [l] voluntary ſubmiſſion to the goſpel of Chriſt, and for your liberal diſtribution to them, and to all men),

14 And in their prayer for you, to long after you greatly, for the abundant grace of God in you.

15 [m] Thanks therefore be unto God for his unſpeakable gift.

CHAP. X.

2 He ſheweth with what confidence, 4 with what weapons, 6 and with what revenge, he is armed againſt the cavillations of the wicked: 7 and that, when he is preſent, his deeds have no leſs power, 11 than his words have force, when he is abſent.

NOW [1] I Paul myſelf beſeech you by the meekneſs and [a] gentleneſs of Chriſt, which when I am preſent among you, am baſe, but am bold toward you being abſent:

2 And this I require you, that I need not to be bold when I am preſent, with that ſame confidence, wherewith I think to be bold againſt ſome, which eſteem us as though we walked [b] according to the fleſh:

3 [2] Nevertheleſs, though we walk in the fleſh, yet we do not war after the fleſh.

4 (For the weapons of our warfare are not [c] carnal, but mighty through [d] God, to caſt down holds)

5 Caſting down the imaginations, and every high thing that is exalted againſt the knowledge of God, [3] and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt.

6 And having ready the vengeance againſt all

---

[1] He wiſely meeteth with the ſuſpicion which the Corinthians might conceive: as though the apoſtle, in urging them ſo carefully, ſhould doubt of their good will. Therefore he witneſſeth that he doth it not to teach them that they ought to help the ſaints, ſeeing that he had become ſurety for them to the Macedonians, but only to ſtir them up which were running of themſelves, to the end that all things might both be in a better readineſs, and alſo be more plentiful.

[a] The word which he uſeth, ſignifieth ſuch a ſtayedneſs and ſettledneſs of mind, as cannot be moved with any terror or fear.

[b] As from covetous men.

[2] Alms muſt be given neither niggardly, nor with a loathful mind, or hardly: but a frank and free alms is compared to a ſowing which hath a moſt plentiful harveſt of moſt abundant bleſſing following it.

[c] Determineth and appointeth freely with himſelf.

[d] With a ſparing and niggardly heart.

[e] Againſt his will, as loth to be evil reported of.

[f] All God's bountiful liberality.

[g] To help others by all means poſſible, in doing them good in their neceſſities.

[h] Is everlaſting: now David ſpeaketh of a man that feareth God, and loveth his neighbour, who ſhall never want (ſaith he) to give to others.

[i] There is none ſo good an inheritance to the godly, as bountifulneſs is.

[3] Another excellent and double fruit of liberality towards the ſaints, is this: that it giveth occaſion to praiſe God, and that our faith alſo is thereby made manifeſt.

[k] By this proof of your liberality in this helping and ſuccouring of them.

[l] In ſhewing with one conſent, that you acknowledge that only goſpel, which you have willingly ſubmitted yourſelves unto, declaring thereby, that you agree with the church of Jeruſalem.

[m] Leſt by this great commendation and praiſe, the Corinthians ſhould be puffed up, he ſhutteth up this exhortation with this exclamation.

[1] He returneth to the defence of his apoſtleſhip, but ſo that he uſeth his authority therein: for he warneth them earneſtly and gravely, uſing alſo terrible threatenings, to ſhew themſelves ſuch as are apt to be inſtructed. And he refelleth certain proud men which made no better account of him, than of a bragging Thraſo, in that he uſed to be ſharp againſt them when he was abſent, becauſe they ſaw no great majeſty in him after the manner of men, and beſides had proved his lenity, notwithſtanding that in his abſence he had written to them ſharply. Therefore, firſt of all, he profeſſeth that he was gentle and moderate, but after the example of Chriſt: but if they continue to ſtill deſpiſe his gentleneſs, he proteſteth unto them that he will ſhew indeed how far they are deceived, which make that account of the office of an apoſtle, that they do of worldly offices, that is, according to the outward appearance.

[a] That nature which is inclined to mercy, rather than to rigour of juſtice.

[b] As though I had no other aid and help than that which outwardly I ſeem to have: and therefore Paul ſetteth his fleſh, that is, his weak condition and ſtate againſt his ſpiritual and apoſtolic dignity.

[2] Secondly, he witneſſeth, that although he be like unto other men, yet he cometh furniſhed with that ſtrength which no holds of man can match, whether they reſiſt by craft and deceit, or by force and might, becauſe he warfareth with divine weapons.

[c] Are not ſuch as men get them authority withal one of another, and do great acts.

[d] Stand upon that infinite power of God.

[3] An amplification of this ſpiritual virtue, which in ſuch ſort conquereth the enemies, be they never ſo crafty and mighty, that it bringeth ſome of them by repentance unto Chriſt, and juſtly revengeth others that are ſtubbornly obſtinate, ſeparating them from the others which ſuffer themſelves to be ruled.

A. D. 60.

diſobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 [4] Look ye on things after the [e] appearance? If any man truſt in himſelf that he is Chriſt's, let him conſider this again of [f] himſelf, that as he is Chriſt's, even ſo are we Chriſt's.

8 For though I ſhould boaſt ſomewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your deſtruction, I ſhould have no ſhame.

9 This I ſay, that I may not ſeem as it were to fear you with letters.

10 For the letters, ſaith [g] he, are ſore and ſtrong, but his bodily preſence is weak, and his ſpeech is of no value.

11 Let ſuch one think this, that ſuch as we are in word by letters, when we are abſent, ſuch will we be alſo indeed, when we are preſent.

12 [5] For we [h] dare not make ourſelves of the number, or to compare ourſelves of them which praiſe themſelves: but they underſtand not that they meaſure themſelves with [i] themſelves, and [k] compare themſelves with themſelves.

13 But we will not rejoice of things which are not within our [l] meaſure, * but according to the meaſure of the line whereof God hath diſtributed unto us a meaſure to attain even unto you. *Epheſ. 4. 7.

14 For we ſtretch not ourſelves beyond our meaſure, as though we had not attained unto you: for even to you alſo have we come in preaching the goſpel of Chriſt,

15 Not boaſting of things which are [m] without our meaſure: that is, of other men's labours: and we hope, when your faith ſhall increaſe, to be magnified by you, according to our line abundantly.

16 And to preach the goſpel in thoſe regions which are beyond you: not to rejoice in [n] another man's line, that is, in the things that are prepared already.

17 * [6] But let him that rejoiceth, rejoice in the Lord. *Jer. 9. 24. 1 Cor. 1. 31.

18 For he that praiſeth himſelf is not allowed, but he whom the Lord praiſeth.

CHAP. XI.

A. D. 60.

2 He teſtifieth, that for the great love's ſake he beareth to the Corinthians, he is compelled 5 to utter his own praiſes: 9 and that he beſtowed his labour on them without any reward, 13 that the falſe apoſtles ſhould not ſurpaſs him in any thing, 22 whom he far excelled in thoſe things which are praiſe-worthy indeed.

WOULD [1] to God, ye could ſuffer a little my fooliſhneſs, and indeed, ye ſuffer me:

2 For I am jealous over you with [a] godly jealouſy: for I have prepared you for one huſband, to [b] preſent you as a pure virgin to Chriſt:

3 But I fear leſt as the * ſerpent beguiled Eve through his ſubtilty, ſo your minds ſhould be [c] corrupt from the ſimplicity that is in [d] Chriſt: *Gen. 3. 4.

4 [2] For if he that cometh, preacheth [e] another Jeſus whom we have not preached: or if ye receive another ſpirit whom ye have not received: either another goſpel, which ye have not received, ye might well have ſuffered him.

5 Verily I ſuppoſe that I was not inferior to the very chief apoſtles.

6 [3] And though I be [f] rude in ſpeaking, yet I am not ſo in knowledge, but among you we have been made manifeſt to the uttermoſt, in all things.

7 [4] Have I committed an offence, becauſe I abaſed myſelf, that ye might be exalted, and becauſe I preached to you the goſpel of God freely?

8 I robbed other churches, and took wages of them to do you ſervice.

9 And when I was preſent with you, and had need, * I was not ſlothful to the hindrance of any man: for that which was lacking unto me, the brethren which came from Macedonia ſupplied, and in all things I kept [5] and will keep myſelf, that I ſhould not be grievous to you. Ch. 12. 13.

[4] He beateth into their heads that ſame matter, with great weight of words and ſentences.

[e] Do ye judge of things according to the outward ſhew?

[f] Not being told of it by me.

[g] He noteth out ſome one that was the ſeeds-man of this ſpeech.

[5] Being conſtrained to refel the fooliſh brags of certain ambitious men, he witneſſeth that they are able to bring nothing, but that they falſely perſuade themſelves of themſelves: and as for himſelf, although he brag of excellent things, yet he will not paſs the bounds which God hath meaſured him out, according whereunto he came even unto them in preaching the goſpel of Chriſt, and truſteth that he ſhall go further, when they have ſo profited that he ſhall not need to tarry any longer amongſt them to inſtruct them. And hereunto is added an amplification, in that he never ſucceeded other men in their labours.

[h] This is ſpoken after a taunting ſort.

[i] Upon a vain perſuaſion that they have of themſelves, they take upon them they care not what.

[k] They contemn all other, and meaſure all their doings only by themſelves.

[l] Of thoſe things which God hath not meaſured to me.

[m] As though God had divided the whole world among the apoſtles to be huſbanded.

[n] In countries which other men have prepared and huſbanded with the preaching of the goſpel.

[6] He ſomewhat mitigateth that which he ſpake of himſelf, and therewith alſo prepareth the Corinthians to hear other things, witneſſing that he ſeeketh nothing elſe, but to approve himſelf to God, whoſe glory he only ſeeketh.

[1] He granteth that after a ſort he playeth the fool in this vaunting of things, but he addeth that he doth it againſt his will for their profit, becauſe he ſeeth them deceived by certain vain and crafty men, through the craft and ſubtlety of Satan.

[a] He ſpeaketh as a woer, but yet as one that ſeeketh them not for himſelf, but for God.

[b] To marry you together.

[c] This place is to be marked againſt them which loath that plain and pure ſimplicity of the ſcriptures, in compariſon of the colours and paintings of man's eloquence.

[d] Which is meet for them that are in Chriſt.

[2] He ſheweth that they deceive themſelves, if they look to receive of any other man, either a more excellent goſpel, or more excellent gifts of the Holy Ghoſt.

[e] A more perfect doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt.

[3] He refuteth the ſlanders of thoſe Thraſoes. I grant, ſaith he, that I am not ſo eloquent an orator, but yet they cannot take away the knowledge of the goſpel from me, whereof you have had good proof, and that every manner of way.

[f] Paul lacked not of that kind of eloquence which is meet for a man, and fit for the goſpel, but he willingly wanted that painted kind of ſpeech, which too many nowadays hunt after and follow.

[4] Another ſlander, to wit, that he was a raſcal, and lived by the labour of his own hands. But herein, ſaith the apoſtle, what can you lay againſt me, but that I was content to take any pains for your ſakes, and when I lacked, to travail for my living with mine own hands in part, and partly alſo when poverty conſtrained me, I choſe rather otherwiſe to ſeek my ſuſtenance, than to be any burden to you, altho' I preached the goſpel unto you?

[5] An amplification: ſo far is he from being aſhamed of this

A. D. 60. 10 The [g] truth of Chriſt is in me; that this rejoicing ſhall not be [h] ſhut up againſt me in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? becauſe I love you not? God knoweth.

12 But what I do, that will I do: that I may cut away occaſion from them which deſire occaſion, that they may be found like unto us in that wherein they [i] rejoice.

13 [6] For ſuch falſe apoſtles are deceitful workers, and transform themſelves into the apoſtles of Chriſt.

14 And no marvel: for Satan himſelf is transformed into an angel of [k] light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing, though his miniſters transform themſelves, as though they were the miniſters of righteouſneſs, whoſe end ſhall be according to their works.

16 [7] I ſay again, Let no man think that I am fooliſh, or elſe take me even as a fool, that I alſo may boaſt myſelf a little.

17 That I ſpeak, I ſpeak it not after the Lord: but as it were fooliſhly in this my great boaſting.

18 Seeing that many rejoice after the fleſh, I will rejoice alſo.

19 For ye ſuffer fools gladly, becauſe that ye are wiſe.

20 [8] For ye ſuffer, even as if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take your goods, if a man exalt himſelf, if a man ſmite you on the face.

21 I ſpeak as concerning the [l] reproach: as though that we had been [m] weak: but wherein any man is bold (I ſpeak fooliſhly) I am bold alſo.

*Phil. 3. 5. 22 They are Hebrews, * ſo am I: they are Iſraelites, ſo am I: they are the ſeed of Abraham, ſo am I:

23 They are the miniſters of Chriſt (I ſpeak as a fool) I am [n] more: in labours more abundant: in ſtripes above meaſure: in priſon more plenteouſly: in [o] death oft.

24 Of the Jews [p] five times received I forty ſtripes ſave one. A. D. 60.

25 I was [q] thrice * beaten with rods: I was * once ſtoned: I ſuffered thrice * ſhipwreck: night and day have I been in the deep ſea. *Acts16.23. *Acts14.19. *Acts27.14.

26 In journeying I was often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own nation, in perils among the Gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderneſs, in perils in the ſea, in perils among falſe brethren, 27 In wearineſs and [r] painfulneſs, in watching often, in hunger and thirſt, in faſtings often, in cold and in nakedneſs.

28 [9] Beſide the things which are outward, I am cumbered daily, and have the care of all the churches.

29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is offended, and I burn not?

30 [10] If I muſt needs rejoice, I will rejoice of mine infirmities.

31 The God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is bleſſed for evermore, knoweth that I lye not.

32 In * Damaſcus the governor of the people under king Aretas, laid watch in the city of the Damaſcenes, and would have caught me, *Acts 9. 24.

33 But at a window was I let down in a baſket through the wall, and eſcaped his hands.

CHAP. XII.

1 He doth even unwillingly make rehearſal 3 of the heavenly viſions, 4 that were revealed unto him, 6 for which, though he might indeed glory, yet he will not, 10 being privy of his own infirmities: 11 but they drive him to this kind of folly, 20 in that they give ear to certain vain-glorious perſons, who draw them from Chriſt.

IT [1] is not expedient for me no doubt to rejoice: for I will come to viſions and revelations of the Lord.

this act, that he hath alſo reſolved with himſelf to do no otherwiſe hereafter amongſt them, to the intent that it may always be truly ſaid, that he taught in Achaia for nothing not that he diſdaineth the Corinthians, but that theſe Thraſoes may never find occaſion which they have already ſought for, and he in the mean ſeaſon may ſet ſomething before them to follow, that at length they may truly ſay, that they are like to Paul.

[g] This is a form of an oath; as if he ſaid, Let me not be thought to have any truth in me.

[h] Shall be always open to me.

[i] Paul's adverſaries ſought all occaſions they could to be equal to him. And therefore ſeeing they had rather eat up the Corinthians, than preach to them for nothing, they ſought another occaſion, to wit, to make Paul to take ſomething: which thing if he had done, then hoped they by that means to be equal to him: for they made ſuch a ſhew of zeal and knowledge, and ſet it forth with ſuch a gloſing kind of eloquence, that ſome of them even deſpiſed Paul: but he ſheweth that all this is nothing but colours and painting.

[6] Now at length he painteth out theſe fellows in their colours, forewarning, that it will come to paſs, that they will at length betray themſelves, what countenance ſoever they make of the zeal that they have of God's glory.

[k] By light is meant the heavenly glory, whereof the angels are partakers.

[7] He goeth forward boldly, and uſing a vehement irony or kind of taunting, deſireth the Corinthians to pardon him, if for a time he contend as a fool before them being wiſe, with thoſe jolly fellows touching thoſe external things, to wit, touching his ſtock, his anceſtors and valiant acts.

[8] Before he cometh to the matter, he toucheth the Corinthians, who perſuading themſelves to be very wiſe men, did not mark, in the mean ſeaſon, that thoſe falſe apoſtles abuſed their ſimplicity for advantage.

[l] As if he ſaid, In reſpect of that reproach which they do unto you (I ſpeak it) which ſurely is as evil as if they did beat you.

[m] Paul is called weak, in that he ſeemeth to the Corinthians a vile and abject man, a beggarly artificer, a moſt wretched and miſerable ideot, whereas notwithſtanding, therein God's mighty power was made manifeſt.

[n] Paul being honourable indeed, defendeth his miniſtry openly, not for his own ſake, but becauſe he ſaw his doctrine come into hazard.

[o] In danger of preſent death.

[p] He alludeth to that that is written, Deut. 25. 3. and moreover this place ſheweth us, that Paul ſuffered many things which Luke paſſed over.

[q] Of the Roman magiſtrates.

[r] Painfulneſs is a troubleſome ſickneſs, as when a man is weary and would reſt, he is conſtrained to fall to new labour.

[9] He addeth this in concluſion further, that the Corinthians might be aſhamed to deſpiſe him, upon whoſe care almoſt all churches depended, as it was plainly ſeen by experience.

[10] He turneth that againſt the adverſaries, which they objected againſt him: as if he ſhould ſay, They alledged my calamities, to take away my authority from me; but if I would boaſt myſelf, I would take no better argument: and God himſelf is my witneſs that I deviſe and forge nothing.

[1] He goeth forward in his purpoſe, and becauſe thoſe bragging mates boaſted of revelations, he reckoneth up thoſe things which lift him up above the common capacity of men: but he uſeth a preface, and excuſeth himſelf adviſedly.

[a] I ſpeak this in Chriſt, that is, be it ſpoken without vain-glory, for I ſeek nothing but Chriſt Jeſus only.

A. D. 60.

years agone (whether he were in the body, I cannot tell, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth) which was taken up into the [b] third heaven.

3 And I know ſuch a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth)

4 How that he was taken up into [c] Paradiſe, and heard words which [d] cannot be ſpoken, which are not [e] poſſible for man to utter.

5 [2] Of ſuch a man will I rejoice: of myſelf will I not rejoice, except it be of mine infirmities.

6 For though I would rejoice, I ſhould not be a fool, for I will ſay the truth: but I refrain, leſt any man ſhould think of me above that he ſeeth in me, or that he heareth of me.

7 [3] And leſt I ſhould be exalted out of meaſure through the abundance of revelations, there was given unto me a [f] prick in the fleſh, the meſſenger of [g] Satan to buffet me, becauſe I ſhould not be exalted out of meaſure.

8 For this thing I beſought the Lord [h] thrice that it might depart from me.

9 And he ſaid unto me, My grace is ſufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect through weakneſs. [4] Very gladly therefore will I rejoice rather in mine infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may [i] dwell in me.

10 Therefore I take [k] pleaſure in infirmities, in reproaches, in neceſſities, in perſecutions, in anguiſh for Chriſt's ſake: for when I am weak, then am I ſtrong.

11 I was a fool to boaſt myſelf: ye have compelled me: [5] for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing was I inferior unto the very chief apoſtles, though I be nothing.

12 The [l] ſigns of an apoſtle were wrought among you with all patience, with ſigns, and wonders, and great works.

13 For what is it wherein ye were inferiors unto other churches, * except that I have not been [m] ſlothful to your hindrance? forgive me this wrong.

A. D. 60.

* Ch. 11. 9.

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come unto you, and yet will I not be ſlothful to your hindrance: for I ſeek not yours, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the fathers, but the fathers for the children.

15 And I will moſt gladly beſtow, and will be beſtowed for your ſouls: though the more I love you, the leſs I am loved.

16 [6] But be it that I charged you not: yet foraſmuch as I was crafty, I took you with guile.

17 Did I pill you by any of them whom I ſent unto you?

18 I have deſired Titus, and with him I have ſent a brother: did Titus pill you of any thing? walked we not in the ſelf-ſame ſpirit? walked we not in the ſame ſteps?

19 [7] Again, think ye that we excuſe ourſelves unto you? we ſpeak before God in [n] Chriſt, but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 [8] For I fear leſt, when I come, I ſhall not find you ſuch as I would: and that I ſhall be found unto you ſuch as ye would not, and leſt there be ſtrife, envying, wrath, contentions, backbitings, whiſperings, ſwellings, and diſcord.

21 I fear leſt, when I come again, my God abaſe me among you, and I ſhall bewail many of them which have ſinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanneſs and fornication, and wantonneſs, which they have committed.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Coming the third time, 2 he denounceth the ſharper vengeance towards them, 5 who have a perfect trial of the power of Chriſt in his apoſtleſhip: 10 at length he prayeth for their repentance, 11 and wiſheth them proſperity.

[b] Into the higheſt heaven: for we need not to diſpute ſubtilly upon the word (Third) but yet this place is to be marked againſt them, which would have heaven to be every where.

[c] So the Grecians name that, which we call a Park, that is to ſay, a place where trees are planted, and wild beaſts kept, by which name they that tranſlated the Old Teſtament out of Hebrew into Greek, called the garden Eden, whereinto Adam was put ſtraight after his creation, as a moſt delicate and pleaſant place. And hereupon grew it, that that bleſſed ſeat of the glory of God is called by that name.

[d] Which no man is able to utter.

[e] Which the ſaints themſelves are not by any means able to expreſs, becauſe it is God himſelf. Thus doth Clemens Alexandrinus expound this place. Strom. 5.

[2] To remove all ſuſpicion of ambition he witneſſeth that he braggeth not of thoſe things, as of his own, but as out of himſelf, and yet notwithſtanding feigneth nothing, leſt by this occaſion other men ſhould attribute unto him more than indeed he is: and therefore he had rather glory in his miſeries.

[3] An excellent doctrine: why God will even have his beſt ſervants to be vexed of Satan, and by all kind of temptations: to wit, leſt they ſhould be too much puffed up, and alſo that they may be made perfect by that continual exerciſe.

[f] He meaneth concupiſcence, that ſticketh faſt in us, as it were a prick, inſomuch as it conſtrained Paul himſelf being regenerate, to cry out, I do not that good that I would, &c. And he calleth that a prick, by a borrowed kind of ſpeech taken from thorns, or ſtumps, which are very dangerous and hurtful for the feet, if a man walk through woods that are cut down.

[g] Which ſetteth thoſe luſts on fire.

[h] Oft.

[4] He concludeth, that he will only ſet his miſeries againſt the vain brags of the falſe apoſtles, and therewith alſo excuſeth himſelf, for that by their importunity he was conſtrained to ſpeak ſo much of thoſe things as he did: to wit, becauſe that if his apoſtleſhip were ſubverted, his doctrine muſt needs fall.

[i] That I might feel the virtue of Chriſt more and more: for the weaker that our tabernacles are, the more doth Chriſt's virtue appear in them.

[k] I do not only take them patiently, and with a good heart, but alſo I take great pleaſure in them.

[5] Again he maketh the Corinthians witneſſes of thoſe things whereby God had ſealed his apoſtleſhip amongſt them; and again, he declareth by certain arguments how far he is from all covetouſneſs, and alſo how he is affectioned towards them.

[l] The arguments whereby it may well appear, that I am indeed an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt.

[m] I was not ſlothful in getting my living with mine own hands, that I might not be burthenſome to you.

[6] He putteth away another moſt grievous ſlander, to wit, that he did ſubtilly, and by others, make his gain and profit of them.

[7] He concludeth that he writeth not theſe things unto them, as though he needeth to defend himſelf, for he is guilty of nothing: but becauſe it is behoveable for them to doubt nothing of his fidelity, who inſtructed them.

[n] As it becometh him to ſpeak truly and ſincerely, that profeſſeth himſelf to be in Chriſt, that is to ſay, to be a Chriſtian.

[8] Having confirmed his authority unto them, he rebuketh them ſharply, and threateneth them alſo like an apoſtle, ſhewing that he will not ſpare them hereafter, unleſs they repent, ſeeing that this is the third time that he hath warned them.

A. D. 60.

* Deut. 19. 15. Mark 18.16. John 8. 17. Heb. 10. 28. LO this is the third time that I come unto you. * In the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall every word ſtand.

2 I told you before, and tell you before: as though I had been preſent the ſecond time, ſo write I now being abſent, to them which heretofore have ſinned, and to all others, that if I come again, I will not ſpare,

3 [1] Seeing that ye ſeek experience of Chriſt, that ſpeaketh in me, which toward you is not weak, but is [a] mighty in you.

4 For though he was crucified concerning [b] his infirmity, yet liveth he through the power of God. And we no doubt are weak in him, but we ſhall live with him, through the power of God toward you.

* 1 Cor. 11. 28. 5 * [2] Prove yourſelves whether ye are in the faith: examine yourſelves: know ye not your ownſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be reprobates?

6 [3] But I truſt that ye ſhall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray unto God that ye do none evil, not that we ſhould ſeem approved, but that ye ſhould do that which is honeſt: though we be as [c] reprobates.

8 For we cannot do any thing againſt the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we are glad when we are weak, and that ye are ſtrong: this alſo we wiſh for, even your [d] perfection.

10 Therefore write I theſe things being abſent, leſt when I am preſent, I ſhould uſe ſharpneſs, according to the power which the Lord hath given me, to edification, and not to deſtruction.

11 [4] Finally, brethren, fare ye well: be perfect: be of good comfort: be of one mind: live in peace, and the God of love and peace ſhall be with you.

12 [5] Greet one another with an * holy kiſs. All the ſaints ſalute you. * 1 Cor. 16. 20.

13 The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghoſt, be with you all. Amen.

¶ The ſecond epiſtle to the Corinthians, written from Philippi, a city in Macedonia, and ſent by Titus and Lucas.

[1] A moſt ſharp reprehenſion, for that while they deſpiſe the apoſtles's admonitions, they tempt Chriſt's own patience; and alſo while they contemn him as wretched and miſerable, they lay nothing herein againſt him, which is not common to him with Chriſt.

[a] And will be moſt mighty to be revenged of you when need ſhall be.

[b] As touching that baſe form of a ſervant which he took upon him when he abaſed himſelf.

[2] He confirmeth that which he ſpake of the virtue of God appearing in his miniſtry, and he gathereth by the mutual relation between the people's faith, and the miniſters preaching, that they muſt either reverence his apoſtleſhip, upon whoſe doctrine their faith is grounded, or they muſt condemn themſelves of infidelity, and muſt confeſs themſelves not to be of Chriſt's body.

[3] He mitigateth the ſharpneſs, truſting that they will ſhew themſelves toward their faithful apoſtles, apt and willing to be taught: adding this moreover, that he paſſeth not for his own fame and eſtimation, ſo that he may ſerve to their ſalvation, which is the only mark that he ſhooteth at.

[c] In men's judgment.

[d] That all things may be in good order amongſt you, and the members of the church reſtored into their place, which have been ſhaken and out of place.

[4] A brief exhortation, but yet ſuch an one as comprehendeth all the parts of a chriſtian man's life.

[5] He ſaluteth them familiarly, and in concluſion wiſheth well unto them.

The Epiſtle of the Apoſtle PAUL to the GALATIANS.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 58.

1 Straight after the ſalutation. 6 he reprehendeth the Galatians for revolting 9 from his goſpel, 15 which he received from God, 17 before he had communicated with any of the apoſtles.

* Tit. 1. 3. PAUL [1] an apoſtle (not [a] of men, neither by [b] man, * but by [c] Jeſus Chriſt, and God the Father which hath raiſed him from the dead)

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Galatia:

3 Grace be with you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

4 [2] Which gave himſelf for our ſins, that he might deliver us * from this preſent evil [d] world, according to the will of God even our Father. * Luke 1. 74.

5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 [3] I marvel that ye are ſo ſoon [e] removed away unto another goſpel, from him that had called you in the grace of Chriſt,

---

[1] A ſalutation, comprehending in few words the ſum of the apoſtle's doctrine, and alſo beſides, ſtraightway from the beginning, ſhewing the gravity meet for the authority of an apoſtle, which he had to maintain againſt the falſe apoſtles.

[a] He ſheweth who is the author of the miniſtry generally: for herein the whole miniſtry agreeth, that whether they be apoſtles, or ſhepherds, or doctors, they are appointed of God.

[b] He toucheth the inſtrumental cauſe: for this is a peculiar prerogative to the apoſtles, to be called immediately from Chriſt.

[c] Chriſt no doubt is man, but he is God alſo, and Head of the church, and in this reſpect to be exempted out of the number of men.

[2] The ſum of the true goſpel is this, that Chriſt by his only offering ſaveth us, being choſen out from the world, by the free decree of God the Father.

[d] Out of that moſt corrupt ſtate which is without Chriſt.

[3] The firſt part of the epiſtle, wherein he witneſſeth that he is an apoſtle, nothing inferior to thoſe chief diſciples of Chriſt, and wholly agreeing with them, whoſe names the falſe apoſtles did abuſe. And he beginneth with chiding, reproving them of lightneſs, for that they gave ear ſo eaſily unto them which perverted them and drew them away unto a new goſpel.

[e] He uſeth the paſſive voice to caſt the fault upon the falſe apoſtles, and he uſeth the time that now is, to give them to underſtand, that it was not already done, but in doing.

A. D. 58.

7 [4] Which is not another goſpel, ſave that there be ſome which trouble you, and intend to [f] pervert the goſpel of Chriſt.

8 But though that we, or an angel from heaven, preach unto you otherwiſe than that which we have preached unto you, let him be [g] accurſed.

9 As we ſaid before, ſo ſay I now again, If any man preach unto you otherwiſe than that ye have received, let him be accurſed.

10 [5] For now preach I [h] man's doctrine, or God's? or go I about to pleaſe men? for if I ſhould yet pleaſe men, I were not the ſervant of Chriſt.

* 1Cor.15.1. 11 * [6] Now I certify you, brethren, that the goſpel which was preached of me, was not after man.

12 For neither received I it of man, neither was I taught it but by the [i] revelation of Jeſus Chriſt.

* Acts 9.1. 13 [7] For ye have heard of my converſation in time paſt, in the Jewiſh religion, how that * I perſecuted the church of God extremely, and waſted it,

14 And profited in the Jewiſh religion above many of my companions of mine own nation, and was much more zealous of the [k] traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleaſed God (which had [l] ſeparated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace)

*Ephes.3.8. 16 To reveal his Son [m] in me, that I ſhould preach him * among the Gentiles, immediately [8] I communicated not with [n] fleſh and blood:

17 Neither came I again to Jeruſalem to them which were apoſtles before me, but I went unto Arabia, and turned again unto Damaſcus.

18 Then after three years I came again to Jeruſalem to viſit Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

A. D. 58.

19 And none other of the apoſtles ſaw I, ſave James the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, I witneſs [o] before God, that I lye not.

21 After that, I went into the coaſts of Syria and Cilicia: for I was unknown by face unto the churches of Judea, which were in Chriſt.

22 But they had heard only ſome ſay, He which perſecuted us in time paſt, now preacheth the [p] faith which before he deſtroyed.

23 And they glorified God for me.

CHAP. II.

1 That the apoſtles did nothing diſagree from his goſpel, 3 he declareth by the example of Titus being uncircumciſed, 11 and alſo by his avouching the ſame againſt Peter's diſſimulation: 17 and ſo he paſſeth to the handling of our free juſtification by Chriſt, &c.

THEN [1] fourteen years after, I went up again to Jeruſalem with Barnabas, and took with me Titus alſo.

2 And I went up by revelation, and declared unto them that goſpel which I preach among the Gentiles, but particularly to them that were the chief, leſt by any means I ſhould run, or had run [a] in vain:

3 But neither yet Titus which was with me, though he were a Grecian, was compelled to be circumciſed,

4 To wit, for the [b] falſe brethren which were craftily

---

[4] He warneth them in time to remember that there are not many goſpels, and therefore whatſoever theſe falſe apoſtles pretend which had the law, Moſes, and the fathers, in their mouths, yet they are indeed ſo many corruptions of the true goſpel, inſomuch that he himſelf, yea, and the very angels themſelves (and therefore much more theſe falſe apoſtles) ought to be holden accurſed, if they go about to change the leaſt jot that may be in the goſpel that he delivered to them before.

[f] For there is nothing more contrary to faith or free juſtification, than juſtification by the law, or by our deſervings.

[g] Look Rom. 9. 3.

[5] A confirmation taken both from the nature of the doctrine itſelf, and alſo from the manner which he uſed in teaching: for neither, ſaith he, did I teach thoſe things which pleaſed men, as theſe men do, which put a part of ſalvation in external things, and works of the law, neither went I about to procure any man's favour: And therefore the matter itſelf ſheweth that that doctrine which I delivered unto you, is heavenly.

[h] He toucheth the falſe apoſtles, who had nothing but men in their mouths, and he, though he would derogate nothing from the apoſtles, preacheth God, and not men.

[6] A ſecond argument to prove that his doctrine is heavenly, becauſe he had it from heaven, from Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, without any man's help, wherein he excelleth them whom Chriſt taught here on earth, after the manner of men.

[i] This place is to be underſtood of an extraordinary revelation, for otherwiſe the Son alone revealed his goſpel by his Spirit, although by the miniſtry of men, which Paul ſhutteth out here.

[7] He proveth that he was extraordinarily taught of Chriſt himſelf, by the hiſtory of his former life, which the Galatians themſelves knew well enough: for, ſaith he, it is well known in what ſchool I was brought up, even from a child, to wit, amongſt the deadly enemies of the goſpel. And that no man may cavil and ſay, That I was a ſcholar of the Phariſees in name only, and not in deed, no man is ignorant how that I excelled in Phariſaiſm, and was ſuddenly made of a Phariſee, an apoſtle of the Gentiles, ſo that I had no ſpace to be inſtructed of men.

[k] He calleth them the traditions of his fathers, becauſe he was not only a Phariſee himſelf, but alſo had a Phariſee to his father.

[l] He ſpeaketh of God's everlaſting predeſtination, whereby he appointed him to be an apoſtle, whereof he maketh three degrees; the everlaſting counſel of God, his appointing from his mother's womb, and his calling: here is no mention at all, we ſee, of works foreſeen.

[m] To me: and this is a kind of ſpeech which the Hebrews uſe, whereby this is given us to underſtand, that this gift cometh from God.

[8] Becauſe it might be objected, that indeed he was called of Chriſt in the way, but afterward was inſtructed of the apoſtles and others, whoſe names (as I ſaid before) the falſe apoſtles abuſed to deſtroy his apoſtleſhip, as though he delivered another goſpel than the true apoſtles did, and as though he were not of their number, which are to be credited without exception: therefore Paul anſwereth, that he began ſtraightway after his calling to preach the goſpel at Damaſcus and in Arabia, and was not from that time in Jeruſalem but only fifteen days, where he ſaw only Peter and James, and afterwards he began to teach in Syria and Cilicia, with the conſent and approbation of the churches of the Jews, which knew him only by name: ſo far off was it, that he was there inſtructed of men.

[o] This is a kind of oath.

[p] The doctrine of faith.

[1] Now he ſheweth how he agreeth with the apoſtles, with whom he granteth that he conferred touching his goſpel which he taught among the Gentiles, fourteen years after his converſion, and they allowed it, in ſuch ſort, that they conſtrained not his fellow Titus to be circumciſed, although ſome tormented themſelves therein, which traiterouſly laid wait againſt him, but in vain: neither did they add the leaſt jot that might be to the doctrine which he had preached, but contrariwiſe they gave to him and Barnabas the right hands of fellowſhip, and acknowledged them as apoſtles appointed of the Lord to the Gentiles.

[a] Unfruitful, for as touching his doctrine, Paul doubteth not of it, but becauſe there were certain reports caſt abroad of him, that he was of another opinion than the reſt of the apoſtles were, which thing might have hindered the courſe of the goſpel, therefore he laboureth to remedy this ſore.

[b] Which by deceit and counterfeit holineſs crept in amongſt the faithful.

A. D. 58.

craftily ſent in, and crept in privily to ſpy out our liberty, which we have in Chriſt Jeſus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave not place by [c] ſubjection for an hour, that the [d] truth of the goſpel might continue with [e] you.

6 But by them which ſeemed to be great, I was not taught (whatſoever they were in time paſſed, I am nothing the better: * God accepteth no man's perſon) for they that are the chief, did add nothing to me above that I had.

* Deut. 10. 17. 2 Cor. 19. 7. Job 34. 19. Acts 10. 34. Rom. 2. 11. Ephes. 6. 9. Coloſſ. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17.

7 But contrariwiſe, when they ſaw that the goſpel over the [f] uncircumciſion was committed unto me, as the goſpel over the circumciſion was unto Peter:

8 (For he that was mighty by Peter in the apoſtleſhip over the circumciſion, was alſo mighty by me toward the Gentiles)

9 And when James, and Cephas, and John, knew of the grace that was given unto me, which are [g] counted to be pillars, they gave to me and to Barnabas the right [h] hands of fellowſhip, that we ſhould preach unto the Gentiles, and they unto the circumciſion,

10 Warning only that we ſhould remember the poor: which thing alſo I was diligent to do.

11 ¶ And when Peter was come to Antioch, I withſtood him to his [i] face: for he was to be condemned.

12 [2] For before that certain came from James, he ate with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and ſeparated himſelf, fearing them which were of the circumciſion.

13 And the other Jews played the hypocrites likewiſe with him, inſomuch that Barnabas was [k] led away with them by that their hypocriſy.

14 But when I ſaw, that they went not the [l] right way to the [m] truth of the goſpel, I ſaid unto Peter before all men, If thou being a Jew liveſt as the Gentiles, and not like the Jews, why [n] conſtraineth thou the Gentiles to do like the Jews?

A. D. 58.

15 [3] We which are [o] Jews by nature, and not [p] ſinners of the Gentiles,

16 Know that a man is not juſtified by the works of the law, but by the faith [q] of Jeſus Chriſt, even we, I ſay, have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the faith of Chriſt, and not by the works of the law, becauſe that by the works of the law [r] no fleſh ſhall be juſtified.

17 * [4] If then while [s] we ſeek to be made righteous by Chriſt, we ourſelves are found ſinners, is Chriſt therefore the miniſter of ſin? God forbid.

* Rom. 3. 19.

18 For if I build again the things that I have deſtroyed, I make myſelf a treſpaſſer.

19 For I through the law am dead to the [t] law, that I might live unto God.

20 I am crucified with Chriſt: but I live, yet not [u] I any more, but Chriſt liveth in me: and in that that I now live in the [x] fleſh, I live by the faith in the Son of God, who hath loved me, and given himſelf for me.

21 [5] I do not abrogate the grace of God: for if righteouſneſs be by the law, then Chriſt died without a [y] cauſe.

CHAP. III.

1 He rebuketh them for ſuffering themſelves to be drawn from the grace of free juſtification in Chriſt, moſt lively ſet out unto them. 6 He bringeth in Abraham's example, 10 declaring the effect 21 and cauſes of the giving of the law.

O Fooliſh

---

[c] By ſubmitting ourſelves to them, and betraying our own liberty.

[d] The true and ſincere doctrine of the goſpel, which remained ſafe from being corrupt with any of thoſe men's falſe doctrines.

[e] Under the Galatians name, he underſtandeth all nations.

[f] Among the Gentiles, as Peter had to preach it among the Jews.

[g] Whom alone and only, theſe men count for pillars of the church, and whoſe name they abuſe to deceive you.

[h] They gave us their hand, in token that we agreed wholly in the doctrine of the goſpel.

[i] Before all men.

[2] Another moſt vehement proof of his apoſtleſhip, and alſo of that doctrine which he had delivered concerning free juſtification by faith only, becauſe for that this thing only he reprehended Peter at Antioch, who offended herein, in that for a few Jews ſakes which came from Jeruſalem he played the Jew, and offended the Gentiles which had believed.

[k] By example rather than by judgment.

[l] Word for word, with a right foot, which he ſetteth againſt halting and diſſembling, which is backward.

[m] He calleth the truth of the goſpel, both the doctrine itſelf, and alſo the uſe of the doctrine, which we call the practice.

[n] He ſaith they were conſtrained, which played the Jews by Peter's example.

[3] The ſecond part of this epiſtle, the ſtate whereof is this: we are juſtified by faith in Chriſt Jeſus, without the works of the law. Which thing he propoundeth in ſuch ſort, that firſt of all he meeteth with an objection (for I alſo, ſaith he, am a Jew, that no man may ſay againſt me, that I am an enemy to the law), and afterward he confirmeth it by the expreſs witneſs of David.

[o] Although we be Jews, yet we preach juſtification by faith, becauſe we know undoubtedly, that no man can be juſtified by the law.

[p] So the Jews called the Gentiles, becauſe they were ſtrangers from God's covenant.

[q] In Jeſus Chriſt.

[r] No man, and in this word (fleſh) there is a great vehemency, whereby is meant that the nature of man is utterly corrupt.

[4] Before he goeth any further, he meeteth with their objection, which abhorred this doctrine of free juſtification by faith, becauſe they ſay, men are by this means withdrawn from the ſtudy of good works. And in this ſort is the objection: If ſinners ſhould be juſtified through Chriſt by faith without the law, Chriſt ſhould approve ſinners, and ſhould as it were exhort them thereunto by his miniſtry. Paul anſwereth, that this conſequence is falſe, becauſe that Chriſt deſtroyeth ſin in the believers: For ſo, ſaith he, do men flee unto Chriſt through the terror and fear of the law, that being quit from the curſe of the law, and juſtified, they may be ſaved by him, that together therewithal, he beginneth in them by little and little that ſtrength and power of his, which deſtroyeth ſin: to the end that this old man being aboliſhed by the virtue of Chriſt crucified, Chriſt may live in them, and they may conſecrate themſelves to God. Therefore if any man give himſelf to ſin after he hath received the goſpel, let him not accuſe Chriſt nor the goſpel, but himſelf, for that he deſtroyeth the work of God in himſelf.

[s] He goeth from juſtification to ſanctification, which is another benefit we receive by Chriſt, if we lay hold on him by faith.

[t] The law that terrifieth the conſcience, bringeth us to Chriſt, and he only cauſeth us to die to the law indeed, becauſe that by making us righteous, he taketh away from us the terror of conſcience; and by ſanctifying us, cauſeth, through the mortifying of luſt in us, that it cannot take ſuch occaſion to ſin by the reſtraint which the law maketh, as it did before, Rom. 7. 10, 11.

[u] The ſame that I was before.

[x] In this mortal body.

[5] The ſecond argument taken of an abſurdity: If men may be juſtified by the law, then was it not neceſſary for Chriſt to die.

[y] For there was no cauſe why he ſhould do ſo.

A. D. 58.

O [1] Fooliſh Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye ſhould not obey the truth, to whom Jeſus Chriſt before was deſcribed in your [a] ſight, and among you crucified?

2 This only would I learn of you, Received ye [b] the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of [c] faith preached?

3 [2] Are ye ſo fooliſh, that after ye have begun in the Spirit, ye would now be made perfect by the [d] fleſh?

4 [3] Have ye ſuffered ſo many things in vain? if ſo be it be even in vain.

5 [4] He therefore that miniſtereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he it through the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith preached?

6 [5] Yea, rather as [e] Abraham believed God, and it was * imputed to him for righteouſneſs.

* Gen. 15. 6. Rom. 4. 3. James 2. 23.

7 [6] Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the ſame are the children of Abraham.

8 [7] For the ſcripture foreſeeing, that God would juſtify the Gentiles through faith, preached before the goſpel unto Abraham, ſaying, * [8] In thee ſhall all the Gentiles be [f] bleſſed.

* Gen. 12. 3. Acts 3. 25.

9 [9] So then they which be of faith, are bleſſed [g] with faithful Abraham.

10 [10] For as many as are of the works of the law, are under the curſe: [11] for it is written, * Curſed is every man that continueth not in all things, which are written in the book of the law, to do them.

A. D. 58.

* Deut. 27. 26.

11 [12] And that no man is juſtified by the law in the ſight of God, it is evident: * for the juſt ſhall live by faith.

* Hab. 2. 4. Rom. 1. 17. Heb. 10. 38.

12 [13] And the law is not of faith: but * the man that ſhall do theſe things, ſhall live in them.

* Lev. 18. 5.

13 [14] Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the law, being made a curſe for us, ([15] for it is written, * [h] Curſed is every one that hangeth on a tree.

* Deut. 21. 23.

14 [16] That the bleſſing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Chriſt Jeſus, that we might receive the promiſe of the Spirit through faith.

15 [17] Brethren, I ſpeak as [i] men do: * though it be but a man's covenant, when it is [k] confirmed, yet no man doth abrogate it, or addeth any thing thereto.

* Heb. 9. 17.

16 Now to Abraham and his ſeed were the promiſes made. He ſaith not, And to the ſeeds, as

---

[1] The third reaſon, or argument, taken of thoſe gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, wherewith they were endued from heaven after they had heard and believed the goſpel by Paul's miniſtry: which ſeeing they were ſo evident to all men's eyes, that they were, as it were, lively images, wherein they might behold the truth of the doctrine of the goſpel, no leſs than if they had beheld with their eyes Chriſt himſelf crucified, in whoſe only death they ought to have their truſt, he marvelleth how it could be that they could be ſo bewitched by the falſe apoſtles.

[a] Chriſt was laid before you ſo notably and ſo plainly, that you had his lively image, as it were, repreſented before your eyes, as if he had been crucified before you.

[b] Thoſe ſpiritual graces and gifts which were a ſeal, as it were, to the Galatians, that the goſpel which was preached to them was true.

[c] Of the doctrine of faith.

[2] The fourth argument mixed with the former: and it is double. If the law be to be joined with faith, this were not to go forward, but backward, ſeeing that thoſe ſpiritual gifts which were beſtowed upon you are more excellent than any that could proceed from yourſelves. And moreover, it ſhould follow, that the law is better than Chriſt, becauſe it ſhould perfect and bring to an end that which Chriſt began only.

[d] By the (fleſh) he meaneth the ceremonies of the law, againſt which he ſetteth the Spirit, that is, the ſpiritual working of the goſpel.

[3] An exhortation by manner of upbraiding, that they do not in vain ſuffer ſo many conflicts.

[4] He repeateth the third argument, which was taken of the effects, becauſe he had interlaced certain other arguments by the way.

[5] The firſt argument, which is of great force, and hath three grounds. The firſt, that Abraham was juſtified by faith, to wit, by free imputation of righteouſneſs according to the promiſe apprehended by faith, as Moſes doth moſt plainly witneſs.

[e] Look Romans 4.

[6] The ſecond, that the ſons of Abraham muſt be eſteemed and accounted of by faith.

[7] The third, that all people that believe, are without exception comprehended in the promiſe of the bleſſing.

[8] A proof of the firſt and ſecond ground, out of the words of Moſes.

[f] Bleſſing, in this place, ſignifieth the free promiſe by faith.

[9] The concluſion of the fifth argument: Therefore as Abraham is bleſſed by faith, ſo are all his children (that is to ſay, all the Gentiles that believe) bleſſed, that is to ſay, freely juſtified.

[g] With faithful Abraham, and not by faithful Abraham, to give us to underſtand that the bleſſing cometh not from Abraham, but from him by whom Abraham and all his poſterity are bleſſed.

[10] The ſixth argument, the concluſion whereof is alſo in the former verſe taken of contraries, thus: They are accurſed which are of the works of the law, that is to ſay, which value their righteouſneſs by the performance of the law. Therefore they are bleſſed which are of faith, that is, they which have righteouſneſs by faith.

[11] A proof of the former ſentence or propoſition, and the propoſition of this argument is this: Curſed is he that fulfilleth not the whole law.

[12] The ſecond propoſition with the concluſion: But no man fulfilleth the law. Therefore no man is juſtified by the law, or elſe, All are accurſed which ſeek righteouſneſs by the works of the law. And there is annexed alſo this manner of proof of the ſecond propoſition, to wit, righteouſneſs and life are attributed to faith. Therefore no man fulfilleth the law.

[13] Here is a reaſon ſhewed of the former conſequence: Becauſe the law promiſeth life to all that keep it, and therefore if it be kept, it juſtifieth and giveth life. But the ſcripture attributing righteouſneſs and life to faith, taketh it from the law, ſeeing that faith juſtifieth by imputation, and the law by the performing of the work.

[14] A preventing of an objection: How then can they be bleſſed, whom the law pronounceth to be accurſed? Becauſe Chriſt ſuſtained the curſe which the law laid upon us, that we might be quit from it.

[15] A proof of the anſwer by the teſtimony of Moſes.

[h] Chriſt was accurſed for us, becauſe he bare the curſe that was due to us, to make us partakers of his righteouſneſs.

[16] A concluſion of all that was ſaid before in the handling of the fifth and ſixth reaſons, to wit, that both the Gentiles are made partakers of the free bleſſing of Abraham in Chriſt, and alſo that the Jews themſelves, of whoſe number the apoſtle counteth himſelf to be, cannot obtain that promiſed grace of the goſpel, which he calleth the Spirit, but only by faith. And the apoſtle doth ſeverally apply the concluſion, both to the one and to the other, preparing himſelf a way to the next argument, whereby he declareth that that one only ſeed of Abraham, which is made of all people, can no otherwiſe be joined and grow up together but by faith in Chriſt.

[17] He putteth forth two general rules before the next argument, which is the ſeventh in order: The one is, that it is not lawful to break covenants and contracts which are juſtly made, and according to law, among men, neither may any thing be added unto them: the other is, that God did ſo make a covenant with Abraham, that he would gather together his children which conſiſt both of Jews and Gentiles into one body (as appeareth by that which hath been ſaid before). For he did not ſay, that he would be the God of Abraham and of his ſeeds, (which thing notwithſtanding ſhould have been ſaid, if he had many and divers ſeeds, as the Gentiles apart, and the Jews apart) but that he would be the God of Abraham, and of his ſeed, as of one.

[i] I will uſe an example which is common among you, that you may be aſhamed that you give not ſo much to God's covenant as you do to man's.

[k] Authentical, as we call it.

A. D. 58.

as ſpeaking of many: but, And to thy ſeed, as of one, [18] which is [l] Chriſt.

17 [19] And this I ſay, that the covenant that was confirmed afore of God [m] in reſpect of Chriſt, the [20] law which was four hundred and thirty years after cannot diſanul, that it ſhould make the promiſe of none effect.

18 [21] For if the [n] inheritance be of the law, it is no more by the promiſe, but God gave it freely unto Abraham by promiſe.

19 [22] Wherefore then ſerveth the law? It was added becauſe of the [o] tranſgreſſions, [p] till the ſeed came, unto the which the promiſe was made: [23] and it was [q] ordained by [r] angels in the hand of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one: [24] but God is one.

21 [25] Is the law then againſt the promiſes of God? God forbid: For if there had been a law given which could have given life, ſurely righteouſneſs ſhould have been by the law.

*Rom. 3. 9.

22 But the [s] ſcripture hath * concluded [t] all under ſin, that the [u] promiſe by the faith of Jeſus Chriſt ſhould be given to them that believe.

23 [26] But before faith came, we were kept under the law, as under a gariſon, and ſhut up unto [x] that faith, which ſhould afterward be revealed.

A. D. 58.

24 Wherefore the law was our ſchoolmaſter to bring us to Chriſt, that we might be made righteous by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a ſchoolmaſter.

26 [27] For ye are all the ſons of God by faith, in Chriſt Jeſus.

27 [28] For all ye that are [y] baptized into Chriſt, have [z] put on Chriſt.

28 There is neither Jew nor Grecian: there is neither bond nor free: there is neither male nor female: for ye are all [a] one in Chriſt Jeſus.

29 And if ye be Chriſt's, then are ye Abraham's ſeed, and heirs by promiſe.

CHAP. IV.

1 Being delivered from the bondage of the law, 4 by Chriſt's coming, who is the end thereof, 9 it is very abſurd to ſlide back to beggarly ceremonies: 13 he calleth them again therefore to the purity of the doctrine of the goſpel, 21 confirming his diſcourſe with a fine allegory.

---

[18] He putteth forth the ſum of the ſeventh argument, to wit, that both the Jews and the Gentiles grow together in one body of the ſeed of Abraham, in Chriſt only, ſo that all are one in Chriſt, as it is afterward declared, ver. 28.

[l] Paul ſpeaketh not of Chriſt's perſon, but of two peoples, which grew together in one, in Chriſt.

[19] The eighth argument taken of compariſon, thus: If a man's covenant (being authentical) be firm and ſtrong, much more God's covenant. Therefore the law was not given to abrogate the promiſe made to Abraham, which had reſpect to Chriſt, that is to ſay, the end whereof did hang on Chriſt.

[m] Which tended to Chriſt.

[20] An enlarging of that argument, thus: Moreover and beſides that the promiſe is of itſelf firm and ſtrong, it was alſo confirmed with the preſcription of long time, to wit, of four hundred and thirty years, ſo that it could in no wiſe be broken.

[21] An objection: We grant that the promiſe was not abrogated by the covenant of the law, and therefore we join the law with the promiſe. Nay, ſaith the apoſtle, theſe two cannot ſtand together, to wit, that the inheritance ſhould both be given by the law and alſo by promiſe, for the promiſe is free: whereby it followeth that the law was not given to juſtify, for by that means the promiſe ſhould be broken.

[n] By this word (inheritance) is meant the right of the ſeed, which is, that God ſhould be our God, that is to ſay, that by virtue of the covenant that was made with faithful Abraham, we that be faithful, might by that means be bleſſed of God as well as he.

[22] An objection which riſeth from the former anſwer: If the inheritance be not by the law (at leaſt in part) then why was the law given after that the promiſe was made? therefore ſaith the apoſtle, to reprove men of ſin, and to teach them to look unto Chriſt, in whom at length that promiſe of ſaving all people together ſhould be fulfilled, and not that the law was given to juſtify men.

[o] That men might underſtand, by diſcovering of their ſins, that they are ſaved by the only grace of God, which he revealed to Abraham, and that in Chriſt.

[p] Until the partition wall was broken down, and that full ſeed ſprang up, framed of two peoples, both of Jews and Gentiles: for by this word Seed, we may not underſtand Chriſt alone by himſelf, but coupled and joined together with his body.

[23] A confirmation of the former anſwer taken from the manner and form of giving the law: for it was given by angels, ſtriking a great terror into all, and by Moſes, a mediator, coming between. Now they that are one, need no mediator, but they that are twain, at the leaſt, and that are at variance one with another. Therefore the law itſelf, and the mediator, were witneſſes of the wrath of God, and not that God would by this means reconcile men to himſelf, and aboliſh the promiſe, or add the law unto the promiſe.

[q] Commanded and given, or proclaimed.

[r] By the ſervice and miniſtry.

[24] A taking away of an objection, leſt any man might ſay, that ſometimes by conſent of the parties which have made a covenant, ſomething is added to the covenant, or the former covenants are broken. This, ſaith the apoſtle, cometh not to paſs in God who is always one, and the ſelfſame, and like himſelf.

[25] The concluſion uttered by a manner of aſking a queſtion, and it is that ſame that was uttered before, verſ. 17. but proceeding of another rule: ſo that the argument is new, and is this: God is always like unto himſelf: therefore the law was not given to aboliſh the promiſes. But it ſhould aboliſh them if it gave life, for by that means it ſhould juſtify, and therefore it ſhould aboliſh that juſtification, which was promiſed to Abraham and to his ſeed by faith. Nay, it was rather given to bring to light the guiltineſs of all men, to the end that all believers fleeing to Chriſt promiſed, might be freely juſtified in him.

[s] By this word Scripture, he meaneth the law.

[u] In every one of theſe words there lieth an argument againſt the merit of works: for all theſe words, promiſe, faith, Chriſt, might be given to believers, are againſt merits, and not one of them can ſtand with deſerving works.

[26] Now there followeth another handling of the ſecond part of this epiſtle: the ſtate whereof was this: Although the law, (that is, the whole government of God's houſe according to the law) do not juſtify, is it therefore to be aboliſhed, ſeeing that Abraham himſelf was circumciſed, and his poſterity held ſtill the uſe of Moſes's law? Paul affirmeth that it ought to be aboliſhed, becauſe it was inſtituted for that end and purpoſe, that it ſhould be, as it were, a ſchoolmaſter and keeper to the people of God, until the promiſe appeared in deed, that is to ſay, Chriſt, and the goſpel manifeſtly publiſhed with great efficacy of the Spirit.

[27] Becauſe age changeth not the condition of ſervants, he addeth that we are free by condition, and therefore, ſeeing we are out of our childhood, we have no more need of a keeper and ſchoolmaſter.

[28] Uſing a general particle, leſt the Jews at the leaſt ſhould not think themſelves bound with the band of the law, he pronounceth that baptiſm is common to all believers, becauſe it is a pledge of our deliverance in Chriſt, as well to the Jews as to the Grecians, that by this means all may be truly one in Chriſt, that is to ſay, that promiſed ſeed to Abraham, and inheriters of eternal life.

[y] He ſetteth baptiſm ſecretly againſt circumciſion, which the falſe apoſtles ſo much bragged of.

[z] The church muſt put on Chriſt, as it were a garment, and be covered with him, that it may be thoroughly holy and without blame.

[a] You are all as one: and ſo is this great knot and conjunction ſignified.

A. D. 58.

THEN [1] I ſay, that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a ſervant, though he be Lord of all.

2 But is under tutors and governors, [a] until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even ſo we, when we were children, were in bondage under the [b] rudiments of the world.

4 [2] But when the [c] fulneſs of time was come, God ſent forth his Son made of a [d] woman, and made under the law:

5 That he might redeem them which were under the law, that we might * receive the [e] adoption of the ſons. *Rom.8.15.

6 [3] And becauſe ye are ſons, God hath [f] ſent forth the [g] Spirit of his Son into your hearts, which crieth, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore, thou art no more a [h] ſervant, but a ſon: now if thou be a ſon, thou art alſo the [i] heir of God through Chriſt.

8 [4] But even then, when ye knew not God, ye did ſervice unto them which by nature are not gods:

9 But now ſeeing ye know God, yea, rather are known of God, how turn ye again unto impotent and [k] beggarly rudiments, whereunto as from the beginning ye will be in bondage [l] again?

10 Ye obſerve days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am in fear of you, leſt I have beſtowed on you labour in vain.

12 [5] Be ye as I (for I am even as you) brethren, I beſeech you: ye have not hurt me at all. A. D. 58.

13 And ye know, how through [m] infirmity of the fleſh, I preached the goſpel unto you at the firſt.

14 And the [n] trial of me, which was in my fleſh, ye deſpiſed not, neither abhorred: but ye received me as an angel of God, yea as [o] Chriſt Jeſus.

15 [p] What was then your felicity? for I bear you record, that if it had been poſſible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them unto me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, becauſe I tell you the truth?

17 They are jealous over you [q] amiſs: yea they would exclude you, [r] that ye ſhould altogether love them.

18 But it is a good thing to love [s] earneſtly always in a good thing, and not only when I am preſent with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again, until Chriſt be formed in you.

20 And I would I were with you now, that I might [t] change my voice: for I am in doubt of you.

21 [6] Tell me, ye that [u] would be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two ſons,

---

[1] He declareth that by another double ſimilitude, which he ſaid before concerning the keeper and ſchoolmaſter: For he ſaith that the law, (that is, the whole government of God's houſe according to the law) was as it were a tutor or overſeer appointed for a time, until ſuch time as that protection and overſeeing, which was but for a time, being ended, we ſhould at length come to be at our own liberty, and ſhould live as children, and not as ſervants. Moreover, he ſheweth by the way, that that governance of the law was as it were an A B C, and as certain principles, in compariſon of the doctrine of the goſpel.

[a] This is added, becauſe he that is always under a tutor or governor, may hardly be counted a freeman.

[b] The law is called rudiments, becauſe that by the law God inſtructed his church as it were by rudiments, and afterward poured out his Holy Spirit moſt plentifully in the time of the goſpel.

[2] He uttereth and declareth many things at once, to wit, that this tutorſhip was ended at his time: that curious men may leave to aſk, why that ſchoolmaſterſhip laſted ſo long. And moreover, that we are not ſons by nature, but by adoption, and that in that Son of God, who therefore took upon him our fleſh, that we might be made his brethren.

[c] The time is ſaid to be full, when all parts of it are paſt and ended, and therefore Chriſt could not have come either ſooner or later.

[d] He calleth Mary a woman, in reſpect of the ſex, and not as the word is uſed in a contrary ſenſe to a virgin, for ſhe remained a virgin ſtill.

[e] The adoption of the ſons of God is from everlaſting, but is revealed and ſhewed in the time appointed for it.

[3] He ſheweth that we are in ſuch ſort free and ſet at liberty, that in the mean ſeaſon we muſt be governed by the Spirit of Chriſt, which reigning in our hearts, may teach us the true ſervice of the Father. But this is not to ſerve, but rather to enjoy true liberty, as it becometh ſons and heirs.

[f] By that that followeth, he gathereth that that went before: for if we have his Spirit, we are his ſons; and if we are his ſons, then are we free.

[g] The Holy Ghoſt, who is both of the Father, and of the Son: but there is a peculiar reaſon why he is called the Spirit of the Son, to wit, becauſe the Holy Ghoſt ſealeth up our adoption in Chriſt, and maketh us a full aſſurance of it.

[h] The word, ſervant, is not taken here for one that liveth in ſin, which is proper to the infidels, but for one that is yet under the ceremonies of the law, which is proper to the Jews.

[4] He applieth the former doctrine to the Galatians, with a peculiar reprehenſion: for in compariſon of them, the Jews might have pretended ſome excuſe as men that were born and brought up in that ſervice of the law. But ſeeing that the Galatians were taken and called out of idolatry to Chriſtian liberty, what pretence might they have to go back to thoſe impotent and beggarly rudiments?

[k] They are called impotent and beggarly ceremonies, being conſidered apart by themſelves without Chriſt: and again, for that by that means they gave good teſtimony that they were beggars in Chriſt, whenas notwithſtanding, for men to fall back from Chriſt to ceremonies, is nothing elſe but to caſt away riches, and to follow beggary.

[5] He mitigateth and qualifieth thoſe things, wherein he might have ſeemed to have ſpoken ſomewhat ſharply, very artificially and divinely, declaring his good will toward them in ſuch ſort, that the Galatians could not but either be utterly deſperate when they read theſe things, or acknowledge their own lightneſs with tears, and deſire pardon.

[m] Many afflictions.

[n] Thoſe daily troubles wherewith the Lord tried me amongſt you.

[o] For my miniſtry's ſake.

[p] What a talk was there abroad in the world amongſt men, how happy you were?

[q] For they are jealous over you for their own commodity.

[r] That they may convey all your love from me, to themſelves.

[s] He ſetteth his own true and good love, which was earneſtly bent toward them, againſt the naughty vicious love of the falſe apoſtles.

[t] Uſe other words among you.

[6] Becauſe the falſe apoſtles urged this, that unleſs the Gentiles were circumciſed, Chriſt could profit them nothing at all, and this diſſenſion of them which believed of the circumciſion, againſt them which believed of the uncircumciſion, was full of offence: the apoſtle, after divers arguments, whereby he hath refuted their error, bringeth forth an allegory, wherein he ſaith, The Holy Ghoſt did ſhadow out unto us, all theſe myſteries: to wit, that it ſhould come to paſs, that two ſorts of ſons ſhould have Abraham a father common to them both: but not with like ſucceſs, for as Abraham begat Iſhmael, by the common courſe of nature, of Agar his bond-maid, and a ſtranger, and begat Iſaac of Sarah, a free woman, by the virtue of the promiſe, and by grace only; and the firſt was not only, not heir, but alſo perſecuted

A. D. 58. ſons, * one by a ſervant, and * one by a free woman.

* Gen. 16. 15. * Gen. 21. 1. 23 But he which was of the ſervant, was born after the [x] fleſh: and he which was of the free woman, was born by [y] promiſe:

24 By the which things another thing is meant: for [z] theſe mothers are the [a] two teſtaments, the one which is Agar of mount [b] Sinai, which gendereth unto bondage,

25 (For Agar, or Sinai, is a mountain in Arabia, and it [c] anſwereth to Jeruſalem which now is) and [d] ſhe is in bondage with her children:

26 But Jeruſalem, which is [e] above, is free: which is the mother of us all.

* Iſa. 54. 1. 27 [7] For it is written, * Rejoice, thou barren that beareſt no children: break forth, and cry, thou that travaileſt not: for the [f] deſolate hath many more children than ſhe which hath an huſband.

* Rom. 8. 9. 28 * Therefore, brethren, we are, after the [g] manner of Iſaac, children of the [h] promiſe.

29 But as then he that was born after the [i] fleſh, perſecuted him that was born after the [k] Spirit, even ſo, it is now.

* Gen. 21. 10. 30 But what ſaith the ſcripture? * Put out the ſervant and her ſon: for the ſon of the ſervant ſhall not be heir with the ſon of the free woman.

31 [8] Then, brethren, we are not children of the ſervant, but of the free woman.

CHAP. V.

A. D. 58.

1 Having declared that we came of the free woman, he ſheweth the price of that freedom, 13 and how we ſhould uſe the ſame, 16 that we may obey the Spirit, 19 and reſiſt the fleſh.

STAND faſt therefore in the liberty wherewith Chriſt hath made us free, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 [1] * Behold, I Paul ſay unto you, that if ye be [a] circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing. * Acts 15. 1.

3 For I teſtify again to every man which is circumciſed, that he is bound to keep the whole law.

4 Ye are * [b] aboliſhed from Chriſt, whoſoever are [c] juſtified by the law: ye are fallen from grace: * 1Cor. 1. 17.

5 [2] For we through the [d] Spirit wait for the hope of righteouſneſs through faith.

6 [3] For in Jeſus Chriſt neither circumciſion availeth any thing, neither [4] uncircumciſion, [5] but [e] faith which worketh by love.

7 [6] Ye did run well: who did let you, that ye did not obey the truth?

8 [7] It is not the perſuaſion of [f] him that calleth you.

9 * [8] A little leaven doth leaven the whole lump. * 1Cor. 5. 6.

10 I have

cuted the heir: ſo there are two covenants, and as it were, two ſons born to Abraham of thoſe two covenants, as it were of two mothers. The one was made in Sinai, without the land of promiſe, according to which covenant Abraham's children, according to the fleſh, were begotten: to wit, the Jews, which ſeek righteouſneſs by that covenant, that is, by the law: but they are not heirs, nay they ſhall at length be caſt out of the houſe, as they that perſecute the true heirs. The other was made in that high Jeruſalem, or in Sion (to wit, by the ſacrifice of Chriſt) which begetteth children of promiſe, to wit, believers by the virtue of the Holy Ghoſt, which children, (as Abraham) do reſt themſelves in the free promiſe, and they only by the right of children ſhall be partakers of the father's inheritance, and thoſe ſervants ſhall be ſhut out.

[u] That deſire ſo greatly.

[x] As all men are, and by the common courſe of nature.

[y] By virtue of the promiſe, which Abraham laid hold on for himſelf and his true ſeed, for otherwiſe Abraham and Sarah were paſt begetting and bearing of children.

[z] Theſe do repreſent and ſhadow forth.

[a] They are called two covenants, one of the Old Teſtament, and another of the New: which were not two indeed, but in reſpect of the times, and the diverſity of the government.

[b] He maketh mention of Sinai, becauſe that covenant was made in that mountain, of which mountain Agar was a ſhadow.

[c] Look how the caſe ſtandeth between Agar and her children, even ſo ſtandeth it between Jeruſalem and hers.

[d] That is, Sinai.

[e] Which is excellent and of great account.

[7] He ſheweth that in this allegory, he hath followed the ſteps of Iſaiah, who foretold that the church ſhould be made and conſiſt of the children of barren Sarah, that is to ſay, of them which only ſpiritually ſhould be made Abraham's children by faith, rather than of fruitful Agar, even then foreſhewing the caſting off of the Jews, and calling of the Gentiles.

[f] She that is deſtroyed and waſted.

[g] After the manner of Iſaac, who is the firſt begotten of the heavenly Jeruſalem, as Iſhmael is of the ſlaviſh ſynagogue.

[h] That ſeed unto which the promiſe belongeth.

[i] By the common courſe of nature.

[k] By the virtue of God's promiſe, and after a ſpiritual manner.

[8] The concluſion of the former allegory, that we by no means procure and call back again the ſlavery of the law, ſeeing that the children of the bondmaid ſhall not be heirs.

[1] Another obteſtation, wherein he plainly witneſſeth that juſtification of works, and juſtification of faith, cannot ſtand together, becauſe no man can be juſtified by the law, but he that doth fully and perfectly fulfil it. And he taketh the example of circumciſion, becauſe it was the ground of all the ſervice of the law, and was chiefly urged of the falſe apoſtles.

[a] Circumciſion is in other places called the ſeal of righteouſneſs, but here we muſt have conſideration of the circumſtance of the time, for now had baptiſm come in the place of circumciſion. And moreover Paul reaſoneth according to the opinion that his enemies had of it, which made circumciſion a piece of their ſalvation.

[b] That is, as he himſelf expoundeth it afterward, Ye are fallen from grace.

[c] That is, ſeek to be juſtified by the law, for indeed no man is juſtified by the law.

[2] He privily compareth the new people with the old: for it is certain that they alſo did ground all their hope of juſtification and life in faith, and not in circumciſion, but ſo, that their faith was wrapped in the external and ceremonial worſhip: but our faith is bare, and content with ſpiritual worſhip.

[d] Through the Spirit which engendereth faith.

[3] He addeth a reaſon, for that now circumciſion is aboliſhed, ſeeing that Chriſt is exhibited unto us with full plenty of ſpiritual circumciſion.

[4] He maketh mention alſo of uncircumciſion, leſt the Gentiles ſhould pleaſe themſelves in it, as the Jews do in circumciſion.

[5] The taking away of an objection: If all that worſhip the law be taken away, wherein then ſhall we exerciſe ourſelves? In charity, ſaith Paul: for faith, whereof we ſpeak, cannot be idle, nay it bringeth forth daily fruits of charity.

[e] So is true faith diſtinguiſhed from counterfeit faith: for charity is not joined with faith, as a fellow cauſe, to help forward our juſtification with faith.

[6] Again he chideth the Galatians, but with an admiration, and therewithal a praiſe of their former race, to the end that he may make them more aſhamed.

[7] He playeth the part of an apoſtle with them, and uſeth his authority, denying that that doctrine can come from God, which is contrary to his.

[f] Of God.

[8] He addeth this, that they may not ſeem to contend upon a trifle, warning them diligently (by a ſimilitude, which he borroweth of leaven, as Chriſt himſelf alſo did) not to ſuffer the purity of the apoſtolical doctrine to be infected with the leaſt corruption that may be.

10 [9] I have truſt in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwiſe minded: but he that troubleth you, ſhall bear his condemnation, whoſoever he be.

11 [10] And, brethren, if I yet preach circumciſion, why do I yet ſuffer perſecution? Then is the ſlander of the croſs aboliſhed.

12 [11] Would to God they were even cut off which do [g] diſquiet you.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty: [12] only uſe not your liberty as an occaſion unto the fleſh, but by love ſerve one another.

14 [13] For [h] all the law is fulfilled in one word, which is this, * Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf.

*Lev. 19. 18. Matt. 22. 39. Mark 12. 31. Rom. 13. 9. James 2. 8.

15 [14] If ye bite and devour one another, take heed leſt ye be conſumed one of another.

16 [15] Then I ſay, * Walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh.

* Rom. 13. 14. 1 Pet. 2. 11.

17 For the [i] fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh: and theſe are contrary one to another, ſo that ye cannot do the ſame things that ye would.

18 And if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law,

19 [16] Moreover the works of the fleſh are manifeſt, which are adultery, fornication, uncleanneſs, wantonneſs,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, debate, emulation, wrath, contentions, ſeditions, hereſies,

21 Envy, murders, drunkenneſs, gluttony, and ſuch like, whereof I tell you before, as I alſo have told you before, that they which do ſuch things, ſhall not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But the [k] fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long ſuffering, gentleneſs, goodneſs, faith,

23 Meekneſs, temperance: [17] againſt ſuch there is no law.

24 For they that are Chriſt's, have crucified the fleſh, with the affections and the luſts.

25 If we [l] live in the Spirit, let us alſo walk in the Spirit.

26 [18] Let us not be deſirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAP. VI.

1 Now he entreateth particularly of charity toward ſuch as offend, 6 toward the miniſters of the word, 10 and thoſe that are of the houſhold of faith: 11 Not like unto ſuch who have a counterfeit zeal of the law, 13 glorying in the mangling of the fleſh, 14 and not in the croſs of Chriſt.

BRethren, [1] if a man be [a] ſuddenly taken in any offence, ye which are [b] ſpiritual, [3] reſtore ſuch one with the [d] ſpirit of meekneſs, [2] conſidering thyſelf, leſt thou alſo be tempted.

2 [3] Bear ye one another's burden, and ſo fulfil the [e] law of Chriſt.

3 For if any man ſeem to himſelf that he is ſomewhat, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himſelf in his imagination.

4 But let every man prove his own work: and then ſhall he have rejoicing in himſelf only, and not in another.

5 * [4] For every man ſhall bear his own burden.

*1 Cor. 3. 8.

6 [5] Let him that is taught in the word, make him that hath taught him partaker of [f] all his * goods.

*1 Cor. 9. 7.

7 [6] Be not deceived: God is not mocked: for

---

[9] He mitigateth the former reprehenſion, caſting the fault upon the falſe apoſtles, againſt whom he denounceth the horrible judgments of God.

[10] He willeth them to conſider how that he ſeeketh not his own profit in this matter, ſeeing that he could eſchew the hatred of men, if he would join Judaiſm with Chriſtianity.

[11] An example of a true paſtor: inflamed with the zeal of God's glory, and love of his flock.

[g] For they that preach the law, cauſe men's conſciences always to tremble.

[12] The third part of this epiſtle, ſhewing that the right uſe of Chriſtian liberty conſiſteth in this, that being delivered and ſet at liberty from the ſlavery of ſin, and the fleſh, and being obedient to the Spirit, we ſhould ſerve unto one another's ſalvation through love.

[13] He propoundeth the love of our neighbour, as a mark whereunto all Chriſtians ought to refer all their actions, and thereunto he citeth the teſtimony of the law.

[h] This particle (All) muſt be reſtrained to the ſecond table.

[14] An exhortation to the duties of charity, by the profit that enſueth thereof, becauſe that no men provide worſe for themſelves than they that hate one another.

[15] He acknowledgeth the great weakneſs of the godly, for that they are but in part regenerate: but he willeth them to remember that they are endued with the Spirit of God, which hath delivered them from the ſlavery of ſin, and ſo of the law, ſo far forth as it is the virtue of ſin, that they ſhould not give themſelves to luſts.

[i] For the fleſh dwelleth even in the regenerate man, but the Spirit reigneth, although not without great ſtrife, as is largely ſet forth, Rom. 7.

[16] He ſetteth out that particularly, which he ſpake generally, reckoning up ſome chief effects of the fleſh, and oppoſing them to the fruits of the Spirit, that no man may pretend ignorance.

[k] Therefore they are not the fruits of free will, but ſo far forth as our will is made free by grace.

[17] Leſt that any man ſhould object that Paul playeth the ſophiſter, as one who urging the Spirit, urgeth nothing but that which the law commandeth, he ſheweth that he requireth, not that literal and outward obedience, but ſpiritual, which proceedeth not from the law, but from the Spirit of Chriſt, which doth beget us again, and muſt and ought to be the ruler and guider of our life.

[l] If we be indeed endued with the quickening Spirit, which cauſeth us to die to ſin, and live to God, let us ſhew it in our deeds, that is, by holineſs of life.

[18] He addeth peculiar exhortations, according as he knew the Galatians ſubject to divers vices: and firſt of all, he warneth them to take heed of ambition, which vice hath two fellows, backbiting and envy, out of which two it cannot be but many contentions muſt needs ariſe.

[1] He condemneth importunate rigour, becauſe that brotherly reprehenſions ought to be moderated and tempered by the ſpirit of meekneſs.

[a] Through the malice of the fleſh, and the devil.

[b] Which are upholden by the virtue of God's Spirit.

[c] Labour to fill up that that is wanting in him.

[d] This is a kind of ſpeech which the Hebrews uſe, giving to underſtand thereby, that all good gifts come from God.

[2] He toucheth the ſore: for they commonly are moſt ſevere judges which forget their own infirmities.

[3] He ſheweth that this is the end of reprehenſions, to raiſe up our brother which is fallen, and not proudly to oppreſs him. Therefore every one muſt ſeek to have commendation of his own life by approving of himſelf, and not by reprehending others.

[e] Chriſt, in plain and flat words, calleth the commandment of charity his commandment.

[4] A reaſon wherefore men ought to have the greateſt eye upon themſelves, becauſe that every man ſhall be judged before God, according to his own life, and not by comparing himſelf with other men.

[5] It is meet that maſters ſhould be found by their ſcholars ſo far forth as they are able.

[f] Of whatſoever he hath, according to his ability.

[6] He commendeth liberality towards the poor, and firſt of all chideth them which were not aſhamed to pretend this for whatſoever a man ſoweth, that ſhall he alſo reap.

A. D. 58.

8 For he that ſoweth to his [g] fleſh, ſhall of the fleſh reap corruption: but he that ſoweth to the Spirit, ſhall of the Spirit reap life everlaſting.

*2 Theſſ. 3. 13.

9 * [7] Let us not therefore be weary of well doing: for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reap, if we faint not.

10 [8] While we have therefore time, let us do good unto all men, but ſpecially unto them which are of the houſhold of faith.

11 ¶ [9] Ye ſee how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

12 As many as deſire to make a [h] fair ſhew in [i] the fleſh, they conſtrain you to be circumciſed, only becauſe they would not ſuffer perſecution for the [k] croſs of Chriſt.

13 For they themſelves which are circumciſed keep not the law, but deſire to have you circumciſed, that they might rejoice in [l] your fleſh.

14 [10] But God forbid that I ſhould [m] rejoice, but in the croſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whereby the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

15 For in Chriſt Jeſus neither circumciſion availeth any thing, nor uncircumciſion, but a new creature.

16 And as many as walk according to this rule, peace ſhall be upon them, and mercy, and upon the [n] Iſrael of God.

17 [11] From henceforth let no man put me to buſineſs: for I bear in my body the [o] marks of the [p] Lord Jeſus.

18 [12] Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your [q] ſpirit. Amen.

¶ Unto the Galatians, written from Rome.

this and that, and all becauſe they would not help their neighbours, as though they could deceive God: and afterward compareth alms to a ſpiritual ſowing which ſhall have a moſt plentiful harveſt, ſo that it ſhall be very profitable: and compareth covetous niggardlineſs to a carnal ſowing, whereof nothing can be gathered but ſuch things as fade away, and periſh by and by.

[g] To the commodities of this preſent life.

[7] Againſt ſuch as are liberal at the beginning, but continue not, becauſe the harveſt ſeemeth to be deferred very long, as though the ſeed time and the harveſt were at one inſtant.

[8] They that are of the houſhold of faith, that is, ſuch as are joined with us in the profeſſion of one ſelf-ſame religion, ought to be preferred before all other, yet ſo notwithſtanding that our liberality extend to all.

[9] The fourth and laſt part of the epiſtle, wherein he returneth to his principal end and purpoſe, to wit, that the Galatians ſhould not ſuffer themſelves to be led out of the way by the falſe apoſtles: and he painteth out thoſe falſe apoſtles in their colours, reproving them of ambition, as men that do not that which they do, for any affection or zeal they have to the law, but only for this purpoſe, that they may purchaſe themſelves favour amongſt their own ſort, by the circumciſion of the Galatians.

[h] He ſetteth a fair ſhew againſt the truth.

[i] In keeping of ceremonies.

[k] For the preaching of him that was crucified.

[l] That they have entangled you in Judaiſm, and yet he harpeth on the form of circumciſion.

[10] He ſticketh not to compare himſelf with them, ſhewing, that, on the contrary part, he rejoiceth in thoſe afflictions which he ſuffereth for Chriſt's ſake, and as he is deſpiſed of the world, ſo doth he in like ſort eſteem the world as nought: which is the true circumciſion of a true Iſraelite.

[m] When Paul uſeth this word in good ſenſe, or part, it ſignifieth to reſt a man's ſelf wholly in a thing, and to content himſelf therewith.

[n] Upon the true Iſrael, whoſe praiſe is of God, and not of man, Rom. 2. 19.

[11] Continuing ſtill in the ſame metaphor, he oppoſeth his miſeries and the marks of thoſe ſtripes which he bare for Chriſt's ſake, againſt the ſcar of the outward circumciſion, as a true mark of his apoſtleſhip.

[o] Marks which are burnt into a man's fleſh, as they uſed in old time to mark their ſervants that had run away from them.

[p] For it importeth much, whoſe marks we bear: for the cauſe maketh the martyr, and not the puniſhment.

[12] Taking his farewel of them, he wiſheth them grace, and the Spirit, againſt the deceits of the falſe apoſtles, which laboured to beat thoſe outward things into their brains.

[q] With your minds and hearts.

[1] The inſcription and ſalutation, whereof we have ſpoken in the former epiſtles.

[a] This is the definition of the ſaints, ſhewing what they are.

[2] The firſt part of the epiſtle, wherein he handleth all the parts of our ſalvation, propounding the example of the Epheſians, and uſing divers exhortations, and beginning after his manner with thankſgiving.

[3] The efficient cauſe of our ſalvation is God, not conſidered confuſedly and generally, but as the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

[4] The next final cauſe, and in reſpect of us, is our ſalvation, all things being beſtowed upon us which are neceſſary to our ſalvation, which kind of bleſſing is heavenly, and proper to the elect.

A. D. 64.

4 [6] As he hath choſen us in [d] him, before the foundation of the world, [7] that we [e] ſhould [f] be holy, and without blame [g] before him in love:

5 [8] Who hath predeſtinate us to be adopted through Jeſus Chriſt [h] in himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of his will,

6 [9] To the [i] praiſe of the glory of his grace [10], wherewith he hath made us freely accepted in his Beloved:

7 [11] By whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſs of ſins according to his rich grace:

8 [12] [k] Whereby he hath been abundant toward us in [l] all wiſdom and underſtanding,

9 And hath opened unto us the [m] myſtery of his will [13] according to his good pleaſure, which he hath purpoſed in him,

10 [14] That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſs of the times, he might [n] gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth, even in Chriſt:

11 [15] In whom alſo we are choſen when we were predeſtinate, according to the purpoſe of him which worketh [o] all things after the counſel of his own will,

12 That we, which [p] firſt truſted in Chriſt, ſhould be unto the praiſe of his glory:

13 [16] In whom alſo ye have truſted, after that ye heard the [q] word of truth, even the goſpel of your ſalvation: wherein alſo after that ye believed, ye were [r] ſealed with the holy [s] Spirit of promiſe,

A. D. 64.

14 Which is the earneſt of our inheritance, for the [t] redemption of that liberty purchaſed unto the praiſe of his glory.

15 [17] Therefore alſo after that I heard of the faith which ye have in the Lord Jeſus, and love toward all the ſaints,

16 I ceaſe not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers,

17 [18] That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that Father of [u] glory, might give unto you the Spirit of wiſdom and revelation through the [x] acknowledging of him,

18 That the eyes of your underſtanding may be lightened, that ye may know what the [y] hope is of his calling, and what the riches of his glorious inheritance is in the ſaints,

19 [19] And what is the exceeding greatneſs of his power toward us which believe, [*] according to the working of his mighty power,

[*] Ch. 3. 7. Col. 2. 12.

20 [20] Which he wrought in Chriſt, when he raiſed

---

[6] He declareth the efficient cauſe, or by what means God the Father ſaveth us in his Son: Becauſe, ſaith he, he choſe us from everlaſting in his Son.

[d] To be adopted in him.

[7] He expoundeth the next final cauſe, which he maketh double, to wit, ſanctification and juſtification, whereof he will ſpeak hereafter. And hereby alſo two things are to be noted, to wit, that holineſs of life cannot be ſeparate from the grace of election: and again, what pureneſs ſoever is in us, is the gift of God, who hath freely of his mercy choſen us.

[e] Then God did not chuſe us, becauſe we were, or otherwiſe ſhould have been holy, but to the end we ſhould be holy.

[f] Being cloathed with Chriſt's righteouſneſs.

[g] Truly and ſincerely.

[8] Another plainer expoſition of the efficient cauſe, and alſo of eternal election, whereby God is ſaid to have choſen us in Chriſt, to wit, becauſe it pleaſed him to appoint us out when we were not yet born, whom he would make to be his children by Jeſus Chriſt: ſo that there is no reaſon here of our election to be ſought, but in the free mercy of God; neither is faith which God foreſaw, the cauſe of our predeſtination, but the effect.

[h] God reſpecteth nothing, either that preſent is, or that is to come, but himſelf only.

[9] The uttermoſt and chiefeſt final cauſe is the glory of God the Father, who ſaveth us freely in his Son.

[i] That as his bountiful goodneſs deſerveth all praiſe, ſo alſo it ſhould be ſet forth and publiſhed.

[10] Another final cauſe more near is our juſtification, while that he freely accounteth us for juſt in his Son.

[11] An expounding of the material cauſe, how we are made acceptable to God in Chriſt, for it is he only whoſe ſacrifice by the mercy of God is imputed unto us, for forgiveneſs of ſins.

[12] Now he cometh at length to the formal cauſe, that is to ſay, to vocation or preaching of the goſpel, whereby God executeth that eternal counſel of our free reconciliation and ſalvation in Chriſt, and putting in place of the goſpel all wiſdom and underſtanding, he ſheweth how excellent it is.

[k] By which gracious goodneſs and bountifulneſs.

[l] In perfect and ſound wiſdom.

[m] For unleſs the Lord had opened unto us that myſtery, we could never have ſo much as dreamed of it ourſelves.

[13] Not only the election, but alſo the vocation proceedeth of meer grace.

[14] The Father exhibited and gave Chriſt, who is the head of all the elect, unto the world, at that time which was convenient, according as he moſt wiſely diſpoſed all times from everlaſting. And Chriſt is he, in whom all the elect from the beginning of the world, (otherwiſe wandering and ſeparated from God) are gathered together: of which ſome were then in heaven, when he came into the earth, (to wit, ſuch as by faith in him to come, were gathered together) and other being found upon the earth, were gathered together of him, and the reſt are daily gathered together.

[n] The faithful are ſaid to be gathered together in Chriſt, becauſe they are joined together with him through faith, and become as it were one man.

[15] He applieth ſeverally the benefit of vocation to the believing Jews, going back to the very fountain, that even they alſo may not attribute their ſalvation, neither to themſelves, nor to their ſtock, nor any other thing, but to the only grace and mercy of God, both becauſe they were called, and alſo becauſe they were firſt called.

[o] All things are attributed to the grace of God without exception, and yet for all that, we are not ſtocks, for he giveth us grace both to will, and to be able to do thoſe things that are good, Phil. 2. 13.

[p] He ſpeaketh of the Jews.

[16] Now he maketh the Epheſians (or rather all the Gentiles) equal to the Jews, becauſe that notwithſtanding they came laſt, yet being called by the ſame goſpel, they embraced it by faith, and were ſealed up with the ſame Spirit, which is the pledge of election, until the inheritance itſelf be ſeen, that in them alſo the glory of God might ſhine forth and be manifeſted.

[q] That word which is truth indeed, becauſe it cometh from God.

[r] This is a borrowed kind of ſpeech taken of a ſeal, which being put to any thing, maketh difference between thoſe things that are authentical, and others that are not.

[s] With that Spirit, which bringeth not the law, but the promiſe of free adoption.

[t] Full and perfect.

[17] He returneth to the former gratulation, concluding two things together of thoſe things that went before: the firſt is, that all good things come to us from God the Father in Chriſt, and by Chriſt, that for them he may be praiſed of us. The ſecond is, that all thoſe things (which he bringeth to two heads, to wit, faith and charity) are increaſed in us by certain degrees, ſo that we muſt deſire increaſe of his grace, from whom we have the beginning, and of whom we hope for the end.

[18] The cauſes of faith, are God the Father lightening our minds with his Holy Spirit, that we may embrace Chriſt opened unto us in the goſpel, to the obtaining of everlaſting life, and the ſetting forth of God's glory.

[u] Full of majeſty.

[x] For it is not enough for us to have known God once, but we muſt know him every day more and more.

[y] What bleſſings they are which he calleth you to hope for, whom he calleth to Chriſt.

[19] The excellency of faith is declared by the effects, becauſe the mighty power of God is ſet forth and ſhewed therein.

[20] The apoſtle willeth us to behold in our moſt glorious Chriſt, with the eyes of faith, that moſt excellent power and glory of God, whereof all the faithful are partakers, although it be as yet very dark in us, by reaſon of the ignominy of the croſs, and the weakneſs of the fleſh.

A. D. 64.

raiſed him from the dead, and ſet him at his [z] right hand in the heavenly places,

21 Far above all principality, and power, and might, and domination, and every [a] name that is named, not in this world only, but alſo in that that is to come:

22 [21] And hath made all things ſubject under his feet, and hath given him over all things to be the [b] head to the church,

23 Which is his body, even the [c] fulneſs of him that filleth all in all things.

CHAP. II.

2 The better to ſet out the grace of Chriſt, he uſeth a compariſon, calling them to mind, 5, 12 that they were altogether caſt-aways and aliens: 8 that they are ſaved by grace, 13 and brought near, 16 by reconciliation through Chriſt, 17 publiſhed by the goſpel.

* Coloſſ. 2. 13.

AND [1] * you hath he quickened, that were [a] dead in [2] treſpaſſes and ſins,

2 [3] Wherein, in times paſt, ye walked, [4] according to the courſe of this world, and [b] after the prince that ruleth in the air, even the ſpirit that now [5] worketh in the [c] children of diſobedience,

3 [6] Among whom we alſo had our converſation in times paſt in the luſts of our [d] fleſh, in fulfilling the will of the fleſh, and of the mind, and [7] were by nature the [e] children of wrath, as well as [f] others.

A. D. 64.

4 [8] But God which is rich in mercy, through his great love wherewith he loved us,

5 Even when we were dead by ſins, hath quickened us together in Chriſt, by whoſe grace ye are ſaved,

6 And hath raiſed us up [g] together, and made us ſit together in the heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus.

7 That he might ſhew in the ages to come the exceeding riches of his grace, through his kindneſs toward us in Chriſt Jeſus.

8 For by [h] grace are ye ſaved through faith, and that not of yourſelves: it is the gift of God:

9 [9] Not of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt himſelf:

10 For we are [i] his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God hath ordained, that we ſhould walk in them.

11 [10] Wherefore remember that ye being in time paſt Gentiles in the fleſh, and [k] called uncircumciſion, of them which are [l] called circumciſion in the fleſh, made with hands:

12 That ye were, I ſay, at that time [m] without Chriſt, and were [n] aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and were * ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, and had no hope, and were without God in the world.

* Rom. 9. 4.

13 [11] But now in Chriſt Jeſus, ye which once were far off, are made near by the blood of Chriſt.

14 For

---

[z] To be ſet on God's right hand, is to be partaker of the ſovereignty which he hath over all creatures.

[a] Every thing whatſoever it be, or above all things, be they of never ſo much power or excellency.

[21] That we ſhould not think that that excellent glory of Chriſt is a thing wherewith we have nought to do, he witneſſeth, that he was appointed of God the Father, head of all the church, and therefore the body muſt be joined to this head, which otherwiſe would be a maimed thing without the members: which notwithſtanding is not of neceſſity (ſeeing that the church is rather quickened and ſuſtained by the only virtue of Chriſt, ſo far off is it, that he needeth the fulneſs thereof) but of the infinite good will and pleaſure of God, who vouchſafeth to join us to his Son.

[b] Inſomuch that there is nothing but is ſubject unto him.

[c] For the love of Chriſt is ſo great towards the church, that though he do fully ſatisfy all with all things, yet he eſteemeth himſelf but a maimed and imperfect head, unleſs he have the church joined to him as his body.

[1] He declareth again the greatneſs of God's good will by comparing that miſerable ſtate wherein we are born, with that dignity whereunto we are advanced by God the Father in Chriſt. So that he deſcribeth that condition in ſuch ſort, that he ſaith, that touching ſpiritual motions we are not only born half dead, but wholly and altogether dead.

[a] Look Rom. 6. 2. So then he calleth them dead, which are not regenerate: for as the immortality of them which are damned is no life, ſo this knitting together of body and ſoul, is properly no life but death in them which are not ruled by the Spirit of God.

[2] He ſheweth the cauſe of death, to wit, ſins.

[3] He proveth, by the effects, that all were ſpiritually dead.

[4] He proveth this evil to be univerſal, inſomuch as all are ſlaves of Satan.

[b] At the pleaſure of the prince.

[5] Men are therefore ſlaves to Satan, becauſe they are willingly rebellious againſt God.

[c] They are called the children of diſobedience, which are given to diſobedience.

[6] After that he hath ſeverally condemned the Gentiles, he confeſſeth that the Jews, amongſt whom he numbereth himſelf, are not a whit better.

[d] By the name of fleſh, in the firſt place, he meaneth the whole man, which he divideth into two parts: into the fleſh, which is the part that the philoſophers term without reaſon; and into the thought, which they call reaſonable: ſo that he leaveth nothing in man half dead, but concludeth that the whole of man is of nature the ſon of wrath.

[7] The concluſion: All men were born ſubject to the wrath and curſe of God.

[e] Men are ſaid to be the children of wrath paſſively, that is to ſay, guilty of everlaſting death, by the judgment of God, who is angry with them.

[f] Prophane people which knew not God.

[8] Now hereof followeth another member of the compariſon, declaring our excellency, to wit, that by the virtue of Chriſt we are delivered from that death, and made partakers of eternal life, to the end that at length we may reign with him. And by divers and ſundry means he beateth this into their heads, that the efficient cauſe of this benefit is the free mercy of God: and Chriſt himſelf is the material cauſe: and faith is the inſtrument, which alſo is the free gift of God: and the end is God's glory.

[g] To wit, as he addeth afterwards, in Chriſt, for as yet this is not fulfilled in us, but only in our head, by whoſe Spirit we have begun to die to ſin, and live to God, until that work be fully brought to an end: but yet the hope is certain, for we are as ſure of that we look for, as we are of that we have received already.

[h] So then, grace, that is to ſay, the gift of God, and faith, do ſtand one with another, to which two, theſe are contrary, To be ſaved by ourſelves, or by our works. Therefore what mean they which would join together things of contrary nature?

[9] He taketh away expreſly, and namely from our works, the praiſe of juſtification, ſeeing that the good works themſelves are the effects of grace in us.

[i] He ſpeaketh here of grace, and not of nature: therefore be the works never ſo good, look what they are, it is of grace.

[10] Applying the former doctrine to the Gentiles, he ſheweth that they were not only as the Jews by nature, but alſo after an eſpecial ſort, ſtrangers and without God: therefore, they ought ſo much the rather remember that ſame ſo great a benefit of God.

[k] You were called no otherwiſe than Gentiles, that all the world might witneſs of your uncleanneſs.

[l] Of the Jews which were known from you by the mark of circumciſion, the mark of the covenant.

[m] He beginneth firſt with Chriſt, who was the end of all the promiſes.

[n] You had no right or title to the commonwealth of Iſrael.

[11] Chriſt is the only bond of the Jews and Gentiles, whereby they be reconciled to God.

A. D. 64.

14 [12] For he is our peace, which hath made of both one, and hath broken the ſtop of the partition wall,

* Coloſſ. 2. 14.

15 * In abrogating through his fleſh the hatred, that is, the law of commandments which ſtandeth in ordinances, for to make of twain one new man in himſelf, ſo making peace:

16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in [o] one body by his croſs, and [p] ſlay hatred thereby:

17 [13] And came, and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were near.

18 For [q] through him we have both an entrance unto the Father by one Spirit.

19 [14] Now therefore ye are no more ſtrangers and foreigners: but citizens with the ſaints, and of the houſhold of God,

20 [15] And are built upon the foundation of the apoſtles and prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the [r] chief corner ſtone,

21 In whom all the building [s] coupled together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord:

22 In whom ye alſo are built together to be the habitation of God by the Spirit.

CHAP. III.

1 He declareth that therefore he ſuffered many things of the Jews, 3 becauſe he preached the myſtery touching the ſalvation of the Gentiles, 8 at God's commandment. 13 After, he deſired the Epheſians not to faint for his afflictions: 14 and for this cauſe he prayeth unto God, 18 that they may underſtand the great love of Chriſt.

FOR [1] this cauſe, I Paul am the [a] priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt for you Gentiles,

2 If ye have heard of the diſpenſation of the grace of God, which is given me to you-ward,

3 That is, that God by revelation hath ſhewed this myſtery unto me (as I wrote above in few words,

4 Whereby when ye read, ye may know mine underſtanding in the myſtery of Chriſt)

A. D. 64.

5 Which in [b] other ages was not opened unto the ſons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apoſtles and prophets by the Spirit,

6 That the Gentiles ſhould be inheriters alſo, and of the ſame body, and partakers of his promiſe in Chriſt by the goſpel,

7 Whereof I am made a miniſter by the gift of the grace of God given unto me through the effectual working of his power:

8 Even unto me the leaſt of all ſaints is this grace given, that I ſhould preach among the Gentiles the unſearchable riches of Chriſt,

9 And to make clear unto all men what the fellowſhip of the myſtery is, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who hath created all things by Jeſus Chriſt,

10 [2] To the intent that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the church the [c] manifold wiſdom of God,

11 According to the [d] eternal purpoſe which he wrought in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord:

12 By whom we have boldneſs and entrance with confidence, by faith in him.

13 Wherefore I deſire that ye faint not at my tribulations for your ſakes, which is your glory.

14 [3] For this cauſe I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

15 (Of whom is named the whole [e] family in heaven and in earth)

16 That he might grant you according to the [f] riches of his glory, that ye may be ſtrengthened by his Spirit in the [g] inner man,

17 That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by faith:

18 That ye, being rooted and grounded in [h] love, may be able to comprehend with all ſaints [i] what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height:

19 And

[12] As by the ceremonies and worſhip appointed by the law, the Jews were divided from the Gentiles, ſo now Chriſt, having broken down the partition wall, joineth them both together, both in himſelf, and betwixt themſelves, and to God. Whereby it followeth, that whoſoever eſtabliſheth the ceremonies of the law, maketh the grace of Chriſt void, and of none effect.

[o] He alludeth to the ſacrifices of the law, which repreſented that true and only ſacrifice.

[p] For he deſtroyed death by death, and faſtened it, as it were, to the croſs.

[13] The preaching of the goſpel, is an effectual inſtrument of this grace, common as well to the Jews, as to the Gentiles.

[q] Chriſt is the gate, as it were, by whom we come to the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt, is as it were, our loadſman who leadeth us.

[14] The concluſion: The Gentiles are taken into the fellowſhip of ſalvation, and he deſcribeth the excelleney of the church, calling it the city and houſe of God.

[15] The Lord committed the doctrine of ſalvation, firſt to the prophets, and then to the apoſtles, the end whereof, and matter, as it were, and ſubſtance, is Chriſt. Therefore that is indeed the trueand catholic church, which is builded upon Chriſt by the prophets and apoſtles, as a ſpiritual temple conſecrated to God.

[r] That is, the head of the building, for the foundations are, as it were, the heads of the building.

[s] So that God is the workman not only of the foundation, but alſo of the whole building.

[1] He maintaineth his apoſtleſhip againſt the offence of the croſs, whereon alſo he taketh an argument to confirm himſelf, affirming that he was not only appointed an apoſtle by the mercy of God, but was alſo particularly appointed to the Gentiles to call them on every ſide to ſalvation, becauſe God had ſo determined it from the beginning, although he deferred a great while the manifeſtation of that his counſel.

[a] Theſe words, the priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt, are taken paſſively, that is to ſay, I Paul am caſt into priſon for maintaining the glory of Chriſt.

[b] He meaneth not that none knew the calling of the Gentiles before, but becauſe very few knew of it, and they that did know of it, as the prophets, had it revealed unto them very darkly and under figures.

[2] The unlooked-for calling of the Gentiles, was as it were a glaſs to the heavenly angels, wherein they might behold the marvellous wiſdom of God.

[c] God never had but one way only to ſave men by: but it had divers faſhions and forms.

[d] Which was before all beginnings.

[3] He teacheth by his own example, that the efficacy of the doctrine dependeth upon the grace of God, and therefore we ought to join prayers with the preaching and hearing of the word: which are needful not only to them which are younglings in religion, but even to the oldeſt alſo, that they growing up more and more by faith in Chriſt, being confirmed with all ſpiritual gifts, may be grounded and rooted in the knowledge of that immeaſurable love wherewith God the Father hath loved us in Chriſt, ſeeing that the whole family, whereof part is already received into heaven, and part is yet here on earth, dependeth upon that adoption of the heavenly Father, in his only Son.

[e] All that whole people which had but one houſhold-Father, and that is the church, which is adopted in Chriſt.

[f] According to the greatneſs of his mercy.

[g] Look Rom. 7. 22.

[h] Wherewith God loveth us, which is the root of our election.

[i] How perfect that work of Chriſt is in every part.

A. D. 64.

19 And to know the [k] love of Chriſt, which [l] paſſeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all [m] fulneſs of God.

20 [4] Unto him therefore that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we aſk or think, according to the power that worketh in us,

21 Be praiſe in the church by Chriſt Jeſus, throughout all generations for ever. Amen.

CHAP. IV.

Theſe three laſt chapters contain precepts of manners. 1 He exhorteth them to mutual love. 7 Sundry gifts are therefore beſtowed of God, 16 that the church may be built up. 18 He calleth them from the vanity of the infidels, 25 from lying, 29 and from filthy talking.

I Therefore, [1] being priſoner in the Lord, pray you that ye walk worthy of the [a] vocation whereunto ye are called:

2 [2] With all humbleneſs of mind and meekneſs, with [b] long ſuffering, ſupporting one another through love,

3 [3] Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

4 [4] There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your vocation.

5 There is one Lord, one faith, one baptiſm,

6 One God and Father of all, which is [c] above all, and [d] through all, and [e] in you all.

A. D. 64.

7 [5] But unto every one of us is given grace, according to the meaſure of the [f] gift of Chriſt.

8 Wherefore he ſaith, When he aſcended up on high, he led [g] captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men

9 (Now, in that he aſcended, what is it but that he had alſo deſcended firſt into the [h] loweſt parts of the earth?

10 He that deſcended, is even the ſame that aſcended, far above all heavens, that he might [i] fill [k] all things).

11 [6] He therefore gave ſome to be [l] apoſtles, and ſome [m] prophets, and ſome [n] evangeliſts, and ſome [o] paſtors and teachers:

12 [7] For the repairing of the ſaints, for the work of the miniſtry, and for the edification of the [p] body of Chriſt,

13 [8] Till we all meet together (in the [q] unity of faith, and that acknowledging of the Son of God) unto a perfect man, and unto the meaſure of the [r] age of the fulneſs of Chriſt:

14 [9] That we henceforth be no more children, [10] wavering and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the [s] deceit of men, and [t] with craftineſs, whereby they lay in wait to deceive.

15 [11] But let us follow the truth in love, and in all things grow up into him which is the head, that is, Chriſt:

16 By whom all the body being coupled and knit together by every joint, for the furniture

---

[k] Which God hath ſhewed us in Chriſt.

[l] Which paſſeth all the capacity of man's wit to comprehend it fully in his mind: for otherwiſe whoſo hath the Spirit of God, perceiveth ſo much (according to the meaſure that God hath given him) as is ſufficient to ſalvation.

[m] So that we have abundantly in us, whatſoever things are requiſite to make us perfect with God.

[4] He breaketh forth into a thankſgiving, whereby the Epheſians alſo may be confirmed to hope for any thing of God.

[1] Another part of the epiſtle, containing precepts of Chriſtian life, the ſum whereof is this, that every man behave himſelf as it is meet for ſo excellent grace of God.

[a] By this is meant the general calling of the faithful, which is this, to be holy, as our God is holy.

[2] Secondly, he commendeth meekneſs of the mind, which is ſhewed forth by bearing one with another.

[b] Look Matt. 28. 25.

[3] Thirdly, he requireth perfect agreement, but yet ſuch as is knit with the band of the Holy Ghoſt.

[4] An argument of great weight, for an earneſt entertaining of brotherly love and charity one with another, becauſe we are made one body, as it were, of one God and Father, by one Spirit, worſhipping one Lord with one faith, and conſecrated to him with one baptiſm, and hope of one ſelf-ſame glory, whereunto we are called. Therefore whoſoever breaketh charity, breaketh all theſe things aſunder.

[c] Who only hath the chief authority over the church.

[d] Who only poureth forth his providence, through all the members of the church.

[e] Who only is joined together with us in Chriſt.

[5] He teacheth us, that we indeed are all one body, and that all good gifts proceed from Chriſt only, who reigneth in heaven, having mightily conquered all his enemies (from whence he heapeth all gifts upon his church): but yet notwithſtanding theſe gifts are diverſly and ſundry ways divided according to his will and pleaſure, and therefore every man ought to be content with that meaſure that God hath given him, and to beſtow it to the common profit of the whole body.

[f] Which Chriſt hath given.

[g] A multitude of captives.

[h] Down to the earth, which is the loweſt part of the world.

[i] Fill with his gifts.

[k] The church.

[6] Firſt of all he reckoneth up the eccleſiaſtical functions, which are partly extraordinary and for a ſeaſon, as apoſtles, prophets, evangeliſts, and partly ordinary and perpetual, as paſtors and doctors.

[l] The apoſtles were thoſe twelve, unto whom Paul was afterward added, whoſe office was to plant churches throughout all the world.

[m] The prophet's office was one of the chiefeſt, which were men of a marvellous wiſdom, and ſome of them could foretel things to come.

[n] Theſe the apoſtles uſed as fellows in the execution of their office, being not able to anſwer all places themſelves.

[o] Paſtors are they which govern the church, and teachers are they which govern the ſchools.

[7] He ſheweth the end of eccleſiaſtical functions, to wit, that by the miniſtry of men all the ſaints may ſo grow up together, that they may make one myſtical body of Chriſt.

[p] The church.

[8] The uſe of this miniſtry is perpetual, ſo long as we are in this world, that is, until that time that having put off the fleſh, and throughly and perfectly agreeing betwixt ourſelves, we ſhall be joined with Chriſt our head. Which thing is done by that knowledge of the Son of God increaſing in us, and he himſelf by little and little growing up in us, until we come to be a perfect man, which ſhall be in the world to come, when God ſhall be all in all.

[q] In that moſt near conjunction which is knit and faſtened together by faith.

[r] Chriſt is ſaid to grow up to full age, not in himſelf, but in us.

[9] Betwixt our childhood (that is to ſay, a very weak ſtate, while as yet we do altogether waver) and our perfect age, which we ſhall have at length in another world, there is a mean, to wit, our youth, and ſteady going forward to perfection.

[10] He compareth them, which reſt not themſelves upon the word of God, to little boats which are toſſed hither and thither with the doctrines of men, as it were, with contrary winds, and therewithal forewarneth them that it cometh to paſs not only by the lightneſs of man's brain, but alſo by the craftineſs of certain, which make as it were an art of it.

[s] With thoſe uncertain chances which toſs men to and fro.

[t] By the deceit of thoſe men which are very well practiſed in deceiving of others.

[11] By earneſt affection of the truth and love, we grow up into Chriſt: for he (being effectual by the miniſtry of his word, which as the vital ſpirit doth ſo quicken the whole body, that it nouriſheth all the limbs thereof according to the meaſure and proportion of each one) quickeneth and cheriſheth his church, which conſiſteth of divers functions, as of divers members, and preſerveth the proportion of every one. And therefore it followeth that neither this body can live without Chriſt, neither can any man grow up ſpiritually, which ſeparateth himſelf from the other members.

A. D. 64.

thereof (according to the [u] effectual power which is in the meaſure of every part) receiveth [x] increaſe of the body, unto the edifying of itſelf in [y] love.

17 [12] This I ſay therefore, and teſtify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as * other Gentiles walk, in [z] vanity of their mind, * Rom. 1. 21.

18 Having their underſtanding darkened, and being ſtrangers from the [a] life of God, through the ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the hardneſs of their heart:

19 Which being [b] paſt feeling, have given themſelves unto wantonneſs, to work all uncleanneſs, even with [c] greedineſs.

20 [13] But ye have not ſo learned Chriſt,

21 If ſo be ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, [d] as the truth is in Jeſus,

22 * That is, that ye caſt off concerning the converſation in time paſt, [e] that old man, which is corrupt through the deceivable luſts, * Col. 3. 8.

23 And be renewed in the [f] ſpirit of your mind,

24 And put on the new man, which [g] after God is created [h] unto righteouſneſs, and [i] true holineſs.

25 [14] Wherefore caſt off lying, and ſpeak every man truth unto his neighbour: for we are members one of another.

26 [15] Be [k] angry, but ſin not: let not the ſun go down [l] upon your wrath,

27 Neither give place to the devil.

28 [16] Let him that ſtole, ſteal no more: but let him rather labour, and work with his hands the thing which is [m] good, that he may have to give unto him that needeth.

29 [17] Let no [n] corrupt communication proceed out of your mouths: but that which is good to the uſe of edifying, that it may miniſter [o] grace unto the hearers:

A. D. 64.

30 [18] And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, by whom ye are ſealed unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all bitterneſs, and anger, and wrath, crying, and evil ſpeaking, be put away from you, with all malicioufneſs.

32 Be ye courteous one to another, and tender-hearted, freely forgiving one another, even as God, for Chriſt's ſake, freely forgave you.

CHAP. V.

3 Leſt in thoſe vices which he reprehended, they ſhould ſet light by his admonitions, 5 he terrifieth them by denouncing ſevere judgments, 8 and ſtirreth them forward. 15 Then he deſcendeth from general leſſons of manners, 21 to the particular duties of wives, 25 and huſbands.

BE ye therefore followers of God, as dear children,

2 * And walk in love, even as Chriſt hath loved us, and hath given himſelf for us, to be an offering and a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour to God. * John 13. 34. and 15. 12. 1 John 3. 23.

3 * [1] But fornication, and all uncleanneſs, or covetouſneſs, let it not be once named among you, as it becometh ſaints, * Ch. 4. 29. Col. 3. 5. 1 Theſſ. 4. 3.

4 Neither filthineſs, neither fooliſh talking, neither [a] jeſting, which are things not comely, but rather giving of thanks.

5 [2] For this ye know, that no whoremonger, neither unclean perſon, nor covetous perſon, which

---

[u] Of Chriſt, who in manner of the ſoul, quickeneth all the members.

[x] Such increaſe as is meet the body ſhould have.

[y] Charity is the knitting of the limbs together.

[12] He deſcendeth to the fruits of Chriſtian doctrine, and reaſoneth firſt upon the principles of manners and actions, ſetting down a moſt grave compariſon between the children of God, and them which are not regenerate: For in theſe men, all the powers of the mind are corrupted, and their mind is given to vanity, and their ſenſes are darkened with moſt groſs miſtineſs, and their affections are ſo accuſtomed by little and little to wickedneſs, that at length they run headlong into all uncleanneſs, being utterly deſtitute of all judgment.

[z] If the nobleſt parts of the ſoul be corrupted, what is man but corruption only?

[a] Whereby God liveth in them.

[b] Void of all judgment.

[c] They ſtrove to paſs one another, as though there had been ſome gain to be gotten by it.

[13] Here followeth the contrary part, touching men which are regenerate by the true and lively knowledge of Chriſt, which have other principles of their doings far different, to wit, holy and honeſt deſires, and a mind clean changed by the virtue of the Holy Ghoſt, from whence proceed alſo like effects, as a juſt and holy life indeed.

[d] As they have learned, which acknowledge Chriſt indeed, and in good earneſt.

[e] Yourſelves.

[f] Where there ought to have been the greateſt force of reaſon, there is the greateſt corruption of all which waſteth all things.

[g] After the image of God.

[h] The effect and end of the new creation.

[i] Not feigned nor counterfeit.

[14] He commendeth ſeverally certain peculiar Chriſtian virtues, and firſt of all, he requireth truth, (that is to ſay, ſincere manners) condemning all deceit and diſſembling, becauſe we are born one for another.

[15] He teacheth us how to bridle our anger, in ſuch ſort, that although it be hot, yet that it break not out, and that it be ſtraightways quenched before we ſleep, leſt Satan taking occaſion to give us evil counſel, through that wicked counſellor, deſtroy us.

[k] If it ſo fall out that ye be angry, yet ſin not: that is, bridle your anger, and do not wickedly put that in execution, which you have wickedly conceived.

[l] Let not the night come upon you in your anger, that is, make an atonement quickly for all matters.

[16] He deſcendeth from the heart to the hands, condemning theft: and becauſe the men which give themſelves to this wickedneſs, uſe to pretend poverty, he ſheweth that labour is a good remedy againſt poverty, which God bleſſeth in ſuch ſort, that they which labour have always ſome overplus to help other, ſo far is it from this, that they are conſtrained to ſteal other men's goods.

[m] By labouring in things that are holy, and profitable to his neighbour.

[17] He bridleth the tongue alſo, teaching us ſo to temper our talk, that our hearers minds be not only not deſtroyed, but alſo inſtructed.

[n] Word for word, rotten.

[o] By grace, he meaneth that whereby men may profit to the going on forward in godlineſs and love.

[18] A general precept againſt all exceſs of affections which dwell in that part of the mind, which they call, angry, and he ſetteth againſt them the contrary means. And uſeth a moſt vehement preface, how we ought to take heed that we grieve not the Holy Spirit of God through our immoderateneſs and intemperancy, who dwelleth in us, to this end, to moderate all our affections.

[19] An argument taken from the example of Chriſt, moſt grave and vehement, both for pardoning of thoſe injuries which have been done unto us by our greateſt enemies, and much more for having conſideration of the miſerable, and uſing moderation and gentle behaviour towards all men.

[1] Now he cometh to another kind of affections, which is in that part of the mind, which men call covetous or deſirous: and he reprehendeth fornication, covetouſneſs and jeſting, very ſharply.

[a] Jeſts which men caſt one at another: that no lightneſs be ſeen, nor evil example given, nor any offence moved by evil words or backbiting.

[2] Becauſe theſe ſins are ſuch, that the moſt part of men count them not for ſins, he awaketh the godly to the end they ſhould ſo much the more take heed to themſelves from them, as moſt hurtful plagues.

* Matt. 24. 4. Mark 13. 5. Luke 21. 8. 2 Theſſ. 2. 3.

6 * Let no man deceive you with vain words: for, for ſuch things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience.

7 [3] Be not therefore companions with them:

8 For ye were once darkneſs, but are now [c] light in the Lord: walk as children of light

9 (For the fruit of the [d] Spirit is in all goodneſs, and righteouſneſs, and truth),

10 Approving that which is pleaſing to the Lord,

11 And have no fellowſhip with the unfruitful works of darkneſs, but even [e] reprove them rather.

12 For it is ſhame even to ſpeak of the things which are done of them in ſecret.

13 But all things when they are reproved of the light, are manifeſt: for it is light that maketh all things manifeſt.

14 Wherefore [f] he ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand up from the [g] dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee light.

19 Speaking unto yourſelves in pſalms, and hymns, and ſpiritual ſongs, ſinging, and making melody to the Lord in your [l] hearts,

20 Giving thanks always for all things unto God even the Father, in the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

A. D. 64.

21 [6] Submitting yourſelves one to another in the fear of God.

* Col. 3. 18. Tit. 2. 5. 1 Pet. 3. 1.

22 ¶ * [7] Wives, ſubmit yourſelves unto your huſbands, [8] as unto the Lord:

* 1 Cor. 11. 3.

23 * [9] For the huſband is the wife's head, even as Chriſt is the head of the church, [10] and the ſame is the ſaviour of his body.

24 [11] Therefore as the church is in ſubjection to Chriſt, even ſo let the wives be to their huſbands in every thing.

* Col. 3. 19.

25 ¶ * [12] Huſbands, love your wives, even as Chriſt loved the church, and gave himſelf for it,

26 [13] That he might [m] ſanctify it, and cleanſe it by the waſhing of water through the [n] word:

27 That he might make it unto himſelf a glorious church, [o] not having ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, but that it ſhould be holy and without blame.

28 [14] So ought men to love their wives, as their own bodies: he that loveth his wife, loveth himſelf.

29 For no man ever yet hated his [p] own fleſh, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it, even as the Lord doth the church.

30 For we are members of his body, [q] of his fleſh, and of his bones.

* Gen. 2. 24. Matt. 19. 5. Mark 10. 7. 1 Cor. 6. 16.

31 * For this cauſe ſhall a man leave father and mother, and ſhall [r] cleave to his wife, and they twain ſhall be one fleſh.

32 [15] This is a great ſecret, but I ſpeak concerning Chriſt, and concerning the church.

33 [16] Therefore every one of you, do ye ſo: let every one love his wife, even as himſelf, and let the wife ſee that ſhe fear her huſband.

CHAP.

---

[b] A bondſlave to idolatry, for the covetous man thinketh that his life ſtandeth in his goods.

[3] Becauſe we are not ſo ready to any thing, as to follow evil examples, therefore the apoſtle warneth the godly to remember always, that the other are, but as it were darkneſs, and that they themſelves are as it were light. And therefore the others commit all villainies (as men are wont in the dark) but they ought not only not to follow their examples, but alſo (as the property of the light is) reprove their darkneſs, and to walk ſo, having Chriſt that true light going before them, as it becometh wiſe men.

[c] The faithful are called light, both becauſe they have the true light in them which lighteneth them, and alſo becauſe they give light to others, inſomuch that their honeſt converſation reproveth the life of wicked men.

[d] By whoſe force we are made light in the Lord.

[e] Make them open to all the world, by your good life.

[f] The ſcriptures, or God in the ſcripture.

[g] He ſpeaketh of the death of ſin.

[4] The worſe and more corrupt that the manner of this world are, the more watchful ought we to be againſt all occaſions, and reſpect nothing but the will of God.

[h] This is a metaphor taken from the merchants: who prefer the leaſt profit that may be before all their pleaſures.

[i] The times are troubleſome and ſharp.

[5] He ſetteth the ſober and holy aſſemblies of the faithful, againſt the diſſolute banquets of the unfaithful, in which the praiſes of the only Lord muſt ring, be it in proſperity or adverſity.

[k] All kind of riot, joined with all manner of filthineſs and ſhamefulneſs.

[l] With an earneſt affection of the heart, and not with the tongue only.

[6] A ſhort repetition of the end whereunto all things ought to be referred, to ſerve one another for God's ſake.

[7] Now he deſcendeth to a family, dividing orderly all the parts of a family. And he ſaith, that the duty of wives conſiſteth herein, to be obedient to their huſbands.

[8] The firſt argument, for they cannot be diſobedient to their huſbands, but they muſt reſiſt God alſo, who is the author of this ſubjection.

[9] A declaration of the former ſaying: becauſe God hath made the man head of the woman in matrimony, as Chriſt is the head of the church.

[10] Another argument: becauſe the good eſtate of the wife dependeth of the man, ſo that this ſubmiſſion is not only juſt, but alſo very profitable: as alſo the ſalvation of the church is of Chriſt, although far otherwiſe.

[12] The huſbands duty towards their wives, is to love them as themſelves, of which love, the love of Chriſt toward his church is a lively pattern.

[13] Becauſe many men pretend the infirmities of their wives to excuſe their own hardneſs and cruelty, the apoſtle willeth us to mark what manner of church Chriſt gat, when he joined it to himſelf, and how he doth not only not loath all her filth, and uncleanneſs, but ceaſeth not to wipe the ſame away with his cleanneſs, until he wholly purged it.

[m] Make it holy.

[n] Through the promiſe of free juſtification and ſanctification in Chriſt, received by faith.

[o] The church, as it is conſidered in itſelf, ſhall not be without wrinkle, before it come to the mark it ſhooteth at: for while it is in this life, it runneth in a race: but if it be conſidered in Chriſt, it is clean and without wrinkle.

[14] Another argument: Every man loveth himſelf, even of nature, therefore he ſtriveth againſt nature that loveth not his wife: he proveth the conſequence, firſt, by the myſtical knitting of Chriſt and the church together, and then by the ordinance of God, who ſaith that man and wife are as one, that is, not to be divided.

[q] He alludeth to the making of the woman, which ſignifieth our coupling together with Chriſt, which is wrought by faith, but is ſealed by the ſacrament of the ſupper.

[r] Look Matt. 15. 5.

[15] That no man might dream of natural conjunction, or knitting of Chriſt and his church together (ſuch as the huſbands and the wives is) he ſheweth that it is ſecret, to wit, ſpiritual, and ſuch as far differeth from the common capacity of man: as which conſiſteth by the virtue of the Spirit, and not of the fleſh, by faith and by no natural band.

[16] The concluſion both of the huſband's duty towards his wife, and of the wife's towards her huſband.

A. D. 64.

CHAP. VI.

1 He ſheweth the duties of children, 5 ſervants, 9 and maſters. 10 Then he ſpeaketh of the fierce battle that the faithful have, 12 and what weapons we muſt uſe in the ſame. 21 In the end he commendeth Tychicus.

5 [7] * Servants, be obedient unto them that are your maſters, [8] according to the fleſh, with [d] fear and trembling, in ſingleneſs of your hearts, as unto Chriſt:

6 Not with ſervice to the eye, as men pleaſers, but as the ſervants of Chriſt, [9] doing the will of God from the heart,

7 With good will, ſerving the [e] Lord, and not men.

9 [11] And ye maſters, do the ſame things unto them, putting away threatening: and know that even your maſter alſo is in heaven, neither is there * [f] reſpect of perſon with him.

10 ¶ [12] Finally, my brethren, be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

11 Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the devil.

* Ch. 2. 2.

12 [13] For we wreſtle not againſt fleſh and [g] blood, but againſt * [h] principalities, againſt powers, and againſt the worldly governors, the princes of the darkneſs of this world, againſt ſpiritual wickedneſſes, which are in the high places.

13 [14] For this cauſe take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to reſiſt in the [i] evil day, and having finiſhed all things, ſtand faſt.

14 Stand therefore, and your loins girded about with verity, and having on the breaſtplate of righteouſneſs,

15 And your feet ſhod with the [k] preparation of the goſpel of peace:

16 Above all, take the ſhield of faith, wherewith ye may quench all the fiery darts of the wicked,

17 And take the helmet of ſalvation, and the ſword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.

18 And pray always with all manner prayer and ſupplication in the [l] Spirit: and watch thereunto with all perſeverance and ſupplication for all ſaints,

19 And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly to publiſh the ſecret of the goſpel,

20 Whereof I am the ambaſſador in bonds, that therein I may ſpeak boldly, as I ought to ſpeak.

21 ¶ [15] But that ye may alſo know mine affairs, and what I do, Tychicus my dear brother and faithful miniſter in the Lord, ſhall ſhew you of all things,

22 Whom I have ſent unto you for the ſame purpoſe, that ye might know mine affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts.

23 Peace be with the brethren, and love with faith from God the Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

24 Grace be with all them which love our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to their [m] immortality. Amen.

---

[1] He cometh to another part of a family, and ſheweth that the duty of the children toward their parents, conſiſteth in obedience unto them.

[2] The firſt argument: becauſe God hath ſo appointed: whereupon it followeth alſo that children are ſo far forth bound to obey their parents, as they may not ſwerve from the true worſhip of God.

[a] For the Lord is author of all fatherhood, and therefore we muſt yield ſuch obedience as he will have us.

[3] The ſecond argument: Becauſe this obedience is moſt juſt.

[4] A proof of the firſt argument.

[5] The third argument taken of the profit that enſueth thereby: Becauſe the Lord vouchſafed this commandment amongſt all the reſt, of a ſpecial bleſſing.

[b] With a ſpecial promiſe: for otherwiſe the ſecond commandment hath a promiſe of mercy to a thouſand generations, but that promiſe is general.

[6] It is the duty of fathers to uſe their fatherly authority moderately and to God's glory.

[c] Such information and precepts as, being taken out of God's book, are holy and acceptable to him.

[7] Now he deſcendeth to the third part of a family, to wit, to the duty both of the maſters and of the ſervants. And he ſheweth that the duty of ſervants conſiſteth in a hearty love and reverence to their maſters.

[8] He mitigateth the ſharpneſs of ſervice, in that they are ſpiritually free notwithſtanding the ſame, and yet that ſpiritual freedom taketh not away corporal ſervice: inſomuch that they cannot be Chriſt's, unleſs they ſerve their maſters willingly and faithfully, ſo far forth as they may with ſafe conſcience.

[d] With careful reverence, for ſlaviſh fear is not allowable, much leſs in Chriſtian ſervants.

[9] To cut off occaſion of all pretences, he teacheth us that it is God's will, that ſome are either born or made ſervants, and therefore they muſt reſpect God's will, although their ſervice be never ſo hard.

[e] Being moved with a reverence to God-ward, as though ye ſerved God himſelf.

[10] Although they ſerve unkind and cruel maſters, yet the obedience of ſervants is no leſs acceptable to God, than the obedience of them that are free.

[11] It is the duty of maſters, to uſe the authority that they have over their ſervants modeſtly and holily, ſeeing that they in another reſpect have a common maſter, which is in heaven, who will judge both the bond and the free.

[f] Either of freedom or bondage.

[12] He concludeth the other part of this epiſtle, with a grave exhortation, that all be ready and fight conſtantly, truſting to ſpiritual weapons, until their enemies be clean put to flight. And firſt of all, he warneth us to take the armour of God, wherewith only our enemy may be diſpatched.

[13] Secondly, he declareth that our chiefeſt and mightieſt enemies are inviſible, that we may not think that our chiefeſt conflict is with men.

[g] Againſt men, which are of a frail and brittle nature, againſt which are ſet ſpiritual ſubtilties, more mighty than the other by a thouſand parts.

[h] He giveth theſe names to the evil angels, by reaſon of the effects which they work: not that they are able to do the ſame of themſelves, but becauſe God giveth them the bridle.

[14] He ſheweth that theſe enemies are put to flight with the only armour of God, to wit, with uprightneſs of conſcience, a godly and holy life, knowledge of the goſpel, faith, and to be ſhort, with the word of God, and uſing daily earneſt prayer for the health of the church, and eſpecially for the conſtancy of the true, godly, and valiant miniſters of the word.

[i] Look chap. 5. 16.

[k] That the preparation of the goſpel may be as it were ſhoes to you: and it is very fitly called the goſpel of peace, for that, ſeeing we have to go to God through moſt dangerous ranks of enemies, this may encourage us to go on manfully, in that we know by the doctrine of the goſpel, that we may take our journey to God who is at peace with us.

[l] That holy prayers may proceed from the holy Spirit.

[15] A familiar and very amiable declaration of his ſtate, together with a ſolemn prayer, wherewith Paul is wont to end his epiſtles.

[m] To life everlaſting.

The Epiſtle of PAUL to the PHILIPPIANS.

CHAP. I.

3 Having teſtified his godly and tender affection towards the Philippians, 12 he intreateth of himſelf, and his bonds: 22 And pricketh them forward by his own example, 27 and exhorteth them to unity, 28 and patience.

PAUL [1] and Timotheus, the ſervants of Jeſus Chriſt, to all the ſaints in Chriſt Jeſus, which are at Philippi, with the [a] biſhops and deacons:

2 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3 I thank my God, having you in perfect memory

4 (Always in all my prayers for all you, praying with gladneſs),

5 Becauſe of the [b] fellowſhip which ye have in the goſpel, from the [c] firſt day unto now.

6 And I am perſuaded of this ſame thing, that he that hath begun this good work in you, will perform it until the [d] day of Jeſus Chriſt:

7 As it becometh me ſo to judge of you all, becauſe I have you in remembrance, that both in my [e] bands, and in my defence and confirmation of the goſpel, you all were partakers of my [f] grace.

8 [2] For God is my record, how I long after you all from the very heart root in Jeſus Chriſt.

9 [3] And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all judgment,

10 That ye may allow thoſe things which are beſt: that ye may be pure, and without offence, until the day of Chriſt,

11 Filled with the [g] fruits of righteouſneſs, which are by Jeſus Chriſt unto the glory and praiſe of God.

12 ¶ [4] I would ye underſtood, brethren, that the things which have come unto me, are turned rather to the furthering of the goſpel,

13 So that my bands [h] in Chriſt are famous throughout all the [i] judgment-hall, and in all other places,

14 Inſomuch that many of the brethren in the Lord are boldened through my bands, and dare more frankly ſpeak the [k] word.

15 Some preach Chriſt even through envy and ſtrife, and ſome alſo of good will.

16 The one part preacheth Chriſt of contention and not [l] purely, ſuppoſing to add more afflictions to my bands:

17 But the others of love, knowing that I am ſet for the defence of the goſpel.

18 [5] What then? yet Chriſt is preached all manner of ways, whether it be under a [m] pretence, or ſincerely: and I therein joy: yea, and will joy.

19 For I know that this ſhall turn to my ſalvation through your prayer, and by the help of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt,

20 [6] As I fervently look for, and hope, that in nothing I ſhall be aſhamed, but that with all confidence, as always, ſo now, Chriſt ſhall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death.

21 For Chriſt is to me both in life, and in death advantage.

22 [7] And whether to live in the [n] fleſh were profitable for me, and what to chuſe I know not.

23 For I am diſtreſſed between both, deſiring to be looſed, and to be with Chriſt, which is beſt of all.

24 Nevertheleſs, to abide in the fleſh, is more needful for you.

25 And this am I ſure of, that I ſhall abide, and with you all continue, for your furtherance and joy of your faith,

26 That ye may more abundantly rejoice in Jeſus Chriſt for me, by my coming to you again.

[1] The mark whereat he ſhooteth in this epiſtle, is to confirm the Philippians, by all means poſſible, not only not to faint, but alſo to go forward. And firſt of all, he commendeth their former doings, to exhort them to go forward: which thing he ſaith, he hopeth fully they will do, and that by the teſtimony of their lively charity, but in the mean ſeaſon he referreth all things to the grace of God.

[a] By the biſhops are meant both the paſtors, which have the diſpenſation of the word, and the elders that govern: and by deacons, are meant thoſe that were ſtewards of the treaſury of the church, and had to look unto the poor.

[b] Becauſe that you alſo are made partakers of the goſpel.

[c] Ever ſince I knew you.

[d] The Spirit of God will not forſake you unto the very latter end, until your mortal bodies ſhall appear before the judgment of Chriſt to be glorified.

[e] A true proof of a true knitting together with Chriſt.

[f] He calleth his bands grace, as though he had received ſome ſingular benefit.

[2] He declareth his good will towards them, therewithal ſhewing by what means chiefly they may be confirmed, to wit, by continual prayer.

[3] He ſheweth what thing we ought chiefly deſire, to wit, firſt of all that we may increaſe in the true knowledge of God, (ſo that we may be able to diſcern things that differ one from another) and alſo in charity, that even to the end we may give ourſelves to good works indeed, to the glory of God by Jeſus Chriſt.

[g] If righteouſneſs be the tree, and good works the fruits, then muſt the Papiſts needs be deceived, when they ſay that works are the cauſe of righteouſneſs.

[4] He preventeth the offence that might come by his perſecution, whereby divers took occaſion to diſgrace his apoſtleſhip. To whom he anſwereth, that God hath bleſſed his impriſonment in ſuch wiſe, that he is by that means become more famous, and the dignity of the goſpel, by this occaſion, is greatly enlarged, although not with like affection in all men, yet in deed.

[h] For Chriſt's ſake.

[i] In the emperor's court.

[k] The goſpel is called the word, to ſet forth the excellency of it.

[l] Not with a pure mind, for otherwiſe their doctrine was pure.

[5] He ſheweth, by ſetting forth his own example, that the end of our afflictions is true joy, and that through the virtue of the Spirit of Chriſt, which he giveth to them that aſk it.

[m] Under a godly colour and ſhew: for they made Chriſt a colour for their ambition and envy.

[6] We muſt continue even to the end, with great confidence, having nothing before our eyes but Chriſt's glory only, whether we live or die.

[7] An example of a true ſhepherd, who maketh more account how he may profit his ſheep, than he doth of any commodity of his own whatſoever.

[n] To live in this mortal body.

A. D. 64.

27 [8] Only let your converſation be as it becometh the goſpel of Chriſt, that whether I come and ſee you, or elſe be abſent, I may hear of your matters, that ye [o] continue in one ſpirit, and in one mind, fighting together through the faith of the goſpel.

28 [9] And in nothing fear your adverſaries, which is to them a token of perdition, and to you of ſalvation, and that of God.

29 [10] For unto you it is given for Chriſt, that not only ye ſhould believe in him, but alſo ſuffer for his ſake,

30 [11] Having the ſame fight which ye ſaw in me, and now hear to be in me.

CHAP. II.

1 He exhorteth them above all things 3 to humility, 6 and that by the example of Chriſt. 19 He promiſeth to ſend Timotheus ſhortly unto them, 26 and excuſeth the long tarrying of Epaphroditus.

IF [1] there be therefore any conſolation in [a] Chriſt, if any comfort of love, if any fellowſhip of the Spirit, if any [b] compaſſion and mercy,

2 Fulfil my joy, that ye be like minded, having the [c] ſame love, being of one accord, and of one judgment,

3 That nothing be done through contention or vain glory, but that in meekneſs of mind every man eſteem other better than himſelf.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man alſo on the things of other men.

5 [2] Let the ſame mind be in you that was even in Chriſt Jeſus,

6 Who being in the [d] form of God, [e] thought it no robbery to be [f] equal with God:

7 But he made himſelf of [g] no reputation, and took on him the [h] form of a ſervant, and was made like unto men, and was found in ſhape as a man.

A. D. 64.

8 He humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto the death, even the death of the croſs.

9 [3] Wherefore God hath alſo highly exalted him, and given him a [i] name above every name,

10 That at the name of Jeſus ſhould [k] every knee bow, both of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth,

11 And that [l] every tongue ſhould confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt is the Lord, unto the glory of God the Father.

12 [4] Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed me, not as in my preſence only, but now much more in mine abſence: ſo [m] make an end of your own ſalvation with fear and trembling.

13 [5] For it is God which worketh in you both [n] the will and the deed, even of his good pleaſure.

14 [6] Do all things without * murmuring and reaſonings,

* 1 Pet. 4. 9.

15 [7] That ye may be blameleſs, and pure, and the ſons of God, without rebuke in the midſt of a naughty and crooked nation, among whom ye ſhine as * lights in the world,

* Matt. 5. 14.

16 Holding forth the [o] word of life, [8] that I may rejoice in the day of Chriſt, that I have not run in vain, neither have laboured in vain.

17 Yea and though I be offered up upon the [p] ſacrifice and ſervice of your faith, I am glad and rejoice with you all.

18 For the ſame cauſe alſo be ye glad, and rejoice with me.

[8] Having ſet down thoſe things before in manner of a preface, he deſcendeth now to exhortations, warning them firſt of all, to conſent both in doctrine and mind, and afterwards, that being thus knit together with thoſe common bands, they continue through the ſtrength of faith to bear all adverſity in ſuch ſort, that they admit nothing unworthy the profeſſion of the goſpel.

[o] The word ſignifieth to ſtand faſt, and it is proper to wreſtlers, that ſtand faſt and ſhrink not a foot.

[9] We ought not to be diſcouraged, but rather encouraged by the perſecutions which the enemies of the goſpel imagine and practiſe againſt us: ſeeing that they are certain witneſſes from God himſelf, both of our ſalvation, and of the deſtruction of the wicked.

[10] He proveth that his ſaying, that perſecution is a token of our ſalvation, becauſe it is a gift of God to ſuffer for Chriſt, which gift he beſtoweth upon his own, as he doth the gift of faith.

[11] Now he ſheweth for what purpoſe he made mention of his afflictions.

[1] A moſt earneſt requeſt to remove all thoſe things whereby that great and ſpecial conſent and agreement is commonly broken, to wit, contention and pride, whereby it cometh to paſs that they ſeparate themſelves one from another.

[a] Any Chriſtian comfort.

[b] If any feeling of inward love.

[c] Like love.

[2] He ſetteth before them a moſt perfect example of all modeſty and ſweet converſation, Chriſt Jeſus, whom we ought to follow with all our might: who abaſed himſelf ſo far for our ſakes, although he be above all, that he took upon him the form of a ſervant, to wit, our fleſh, willingly ſubject to all infirmities, even to the death of the croſs.

[d] Such as God himſelf is, and therefore God, for there is none in all parts like to God, but God himſelf.

[e] Chriſt that glorious and everlaſting God knew that he might rightfully and lawfully not appear in the baſe fleſh of man, but remain with majeſty meet for God: yet he choſe rather to debaſe himſelf.

[f] If the Son be equal with the Father, then is there of neceſſity an equality, which Arius that heretic denieth: and if the Son be compared to the Father, then is there a diſtinction of perſons, which Sabellius that heretic denieth.

[g] He brought himſelf from all things, as it were to nothing.

[h] By taking our manhood upon him.

[3] He ſheweth the moſt glorious event of Chriſt's ſubmiſſion, to teach us that modeſty is the true way to praiſe and glory.

[i] Dignity and renown, and the matter with it.

[k] All creatures ſhall at length be ſubject to Chriſt.

[4] The concluſion: We muſt go on to ſalvation with humility and ſubmiſſion, by the way of our vocation.

[m] He is ſaid to make an end of his ſalvation, which runneth in the race of righteouſneſs.

[5] A moſt ſure and grounded argument againſt pride, for that we have nothing in us praiſeworthy, but it cometh of the free gift of God, and is without us; for we have no ability or power, ſo much as to will well, (much leſs to do well) but only of the free mercy of God.

[n] Why then? we are not ſtocks, but yet we do not will well of nature, but only becauſe God hath made of our naughty will a good will.

[6] He deſcribeth modeſty by the contrary effects of pride, teaching us, that it is far both from all malicious and cloſe or inward hatred, and alſo from open contentions and brawlings.

[7] To be ſhort, he requireth a life without fault, and pure, that being lightened with the word of God, they may ſhine in the darkneſs of this world.

[o] The goſpel is called the word of life, becauſe of the effects which it worketh.

[8] Again he pricketh them forward, ſetting before them his true apoſtolic care that he had of them: comforting them moreover, to the end they ſhould not be ſorry for the greatneſs of his afflictions, no not although he ſhould die to make perfect their oblation with his blood, as it were with a drink-offering.

[p] As if he ſaid, I brought you Philippians to Chriſt, my deſire is that you preſent yourſelves a lively ſacrifice to him, and then ſhall it not grieve me to be offered up as a drink-offering, to accompliſh this your ſpiritual offering.

A. D. 64.

19 [9] And I truſt in the Lord Jeſus, to ſend * Timotheus ſhortly unto you, that I alſo may be of [q] good comfort when I know your ſtate. * Acts 16. 1.

20 For I have no man like minded, who will faithfully care for your matters.

21 * For [r] all ſeek their own, and not that which is Jeſus Chriſt's. * 1 Cor. 10. 24.

22 But ye know the proof of him, that as a ſon with the father, he hath ſerved with me in the goſpel:

23 Him therefore I hope to ſend, as ſoon as I know how it will go with me.

24 And I truſt in the Lord, that I alſo myſelf ſhall come ſhortly.

25 But I ſuppoſed it neceſſary to ſend my brother Epaphroditus unto you, my companion in labour, and fellow ſoldier, even your meſſenger, and he that miniſtered unto me ſuch things as I wanted.

26 For he longed after all you, and was full of heavineſs, becauſe ye had heard that he had been ſick.

27 And no doubt he was ſick, very near unto death: but God had mercy on him, and not on him only, but on me alſo, leſt I ſhould have ſorrow upon ſorrow:

28 I ſent him therefore the more diligently, that when ye ſhould ſee him again, ye might rejoice, and I might be the leſs ſorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladneſs, and make much of ſuch:

30 Becauſe that for the [s] work of Chriſt he was near unto death, and regarded not his life, to fulfil that ſervice which was lacking on your part toward me.

CHAP. III.

2 He refuteth the vain boaſtings of the falſe apoſtles, 7 and ſetteth Chriſt againſt them. 10 He ſetteth out the force and nature of faith, 15 that laying all things aſide, they may be partakers of the croſs of Chriſt, 18 the enemies whereof he noteth out.

MOreover, [1] my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. [2] It grieveth me not to write the [a] ſame things to you, and for you it is a ſure thing.

A. D. 64.

2 Beware of dogs: beware of evil workers: beware of the [b] conciſion.

3 [3] For we are the circumciſion which worſhip God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus, and have no confidence [c] in the fleſh:

4 [4] Though I might alſo have confidence in the fleſh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might truſt in the fleſh, much more I,

5 Circumciſed the eighth day, of the kindred of Iſrael, of the tribe of Benjamin: * an Hebrew of the Hebrews, * by the law a Phariſee. * 2 Cor. 11. 22. * Acts 23. 6.

6 Concerning zeal, I perſecuted the church: touching the righteouſneſs which is in the law, I was unrebukeable.

7 But the things that were [d] vantage unto me, the ſame I counted loſs for Chriſt's ſake:

8 Yea, doubtleſs I think [e] all things but loſs for the excellent knowledge ſake of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord, for whom I have counted all things loſs, and do judge them to be dung, that I might [f] win Chriſt,

9 And might be found in [g] him, that is, [h] not having mine own righteouſneſs, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, even the righteouſneſs which is of God through faith,

10 [5] That I may [i] know him, and the virtue of his reſurrection, and the [6] fellowſhip of his afflictions, and be made conformable unto his death,

11 If by any means I might attain unto the [k] reſurrection of the dead:

12 Not as though I had already attained to it, either were already perfect: but I follow, if that I may comprehend that for whoſe ſake alſo I am [l] comprehended of Chriſt Jeſus.

13 Brethren, I count not myſelf, that I have attained to it, but one thing I do: I forget that which is behind, and endeavour myſelf unto that which is before,

14 And follow hard toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus.

15 Let

[9] Moreover, he confirmeth their minds both by ſending back Epaphroditus unto them, whoſe fidelity towards them, and great pains in helping him, he commendeth: and alſo promiſing to ſend Timothy ſhortly unto them, by whoſe preſence they ſhall receive great commodity, and hoping alſo to come himſelf ſhortly unto them, if God will.

[q] May be confirmed in my joy of mind.

[r] The moſt part.

[s] He calleth it here the work of Chriſt, to viſit Chriſt, being poor, and in bands, in the perſon of Paul.

[1] A concluſion of thoſe things which have been before ſaid, to wit, that they go forward chearfully in the Lord.

[2] A preface to the next admonition that followeth, to take good heed and beware of falſe apoſtles, which join circumciſion with Chriſt, (that is to ſay, juſtification by works, with free juſtification by faith) and beat into men's heads the ceremonies which are aboliſhed, for true exerciſes of godlineſs and charity. And he calleth them dogs, as prophane barkers, and evil workmen, becauſe they neglected true works, and did not teach the true uſe of them. To be ſhort, he calleth them Conciſion, becauſe in urging circumciſion, they cut off themſelves and others from the church.

[a] Which you have oftentimes heard of me.

[b] He alludeth to circumciſion, of the name whereof whilſt they boaſted, they cut aſunder the church.

[3] He ſheweth that we ought to uſe true circumciſion, to wit, the circumciſion of the heart, that cutting off all wicked affections by the virtue of Chriſt, we may ſerve God in purity of life.

[c] In outward things which pertain nothing to the ſoul.

[4] He doubteth not to prefer himſelf even according to the fleſh, before thoſe perverſe hot urgers of the law, that all men may know that he doth with good judgment of mind lightly eſteem of all thoſe outward things: for ſo much he lacketh nothing, which hath Chriſt, nay, the confidence of our works cannot ſtand with the free juſtification in Chriſt by faith.

[d] Which I accounted for vantage.

[e] He ſhutteth out all works, as well thoſe that go before, as thoſe that come after faith.

[f] That in their place I might get Chriſt, and of a poor man become rich: ſo far off am I from loſing any thing.

[g] In Chriſt: for they that are found without Chriſt, are ſubject to condemnation.

[h] That is to be in Chriſt, to be found not in a man's own righteouſneſs, clothed with the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to him.

[5] This is the end of righteouſneſs by faith touching us, that by the virtue of his reſurrection we may eſcape from death.

[i] That I may feel him indeed and have a trial of him.

[6] The way to that eternal ſalvation is to follow Chriſt's ſteps, by afflictions and perſecutions, until we come to Chriſt himſelf, who is our mark whereat we ſhoot, and receive that reward whereunto God calleth us in him. And the apoſtle ſetteth theſe true exerciſes of godlineſs, againſt thoſe vain ceremonies of the law, wherein the falſe apoſtles put the ſum of godlineſs.

[k] To life everlaſting, which followeth the reſurrection of the ſaints.

[l] For we run not, but ſo far forth as we are laid hold on of Chriſt, that is, as God giveth us ſtrength, and ſheweth us the way.

A. D. 64.

15 [7] Let us therefore as many as be [m] perfect, be thus minded: and if ye be otherwiſe minded, God ſhall reveal even the ſame unto you.

16 Nevertheleſs, in that whereunto we are come, let us proceed by one rule, that we may mind one thing.

17 Brethren, be followers of me, and look on them which walk ſo, as ye have us for an enſample.

* Rom. 16. 17.

18 [8] * For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you weeping, that they are the enemies of the croſs of Chriſt:

19 Whoſe [n] end is damnation, whoſe god is their belly, and whoſe [o] glory is to their ſhame, which mind earthly things.

* 1 Cor. 1. 7. Tit. 2. 13.

20 [9] But our converſation is in heaven, from whence alſo we look for the * Saviour, even the Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

21 Who ſhall change our vile body, that it may be faſhioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able even to ſubdue all things unto himſelf.

CHAP. IV.

1 From particular exhortations, 4 he cometh to general. 10 He ſaith that he took ſuch joy in their readineſs to liberality, 12 that he will patiently bear the want.

THerefore, [1] my brethren, beloved and longed for, my joy and my [a] crown, ſo continue in the [b] Lord, ye beloved.

2 [2] I pray Euodias, and beſeech Syntyche, that they be of one accord in the Lord.

3 Yea, and I beſeech thee, faithful yoke-fellow, help thoſe women which laboured with me in the goſpel, with Clement alſo, and with other my fellow-labourers, whoſe names are in the * [c] book of life.

* Rev. 3. 5. and 10. 8. and 21. 27.

4 [3] Rejoice in the [d] Lord alway, again I ſay, Rejoice.

5 [4] Let your [e] patient mind be known unto all men. [5] The Lord is at hand.

6 [6] Be nothing careful, but in all things let your requeſts be ſhewed unto God in prayer and ſupplication, with [f] giving of thanks.

7 And the [g] peace of God which paſſeth all underſtanding, ſhall preſerve your [h] hearts and minds in Chriſt Jeſus.

8 [7] Furthermore, brethren, whatſoever things are true, whatſoever things [i] are honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things are worthy love, whatſoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, or if there be any praiſe, think of theſe things,

9 Which ye have both learned and received, and heard, and ſeen in me: thoſe things do, and the goſpel of peace ſhall be with you.

10 [8] Now I rejoice alſo in the Lord greatly, that now at the laſt your care for me ſpringeth afreſh, wherein notwithſtanding ye were careful, but yet lacked opportunity.

11 I ſpeak not becauſe of [k] want: for I have learned in whatſoever ſtate I am, therewith to be content.

12 And I can be [l] abaſed, and I can abound: every where in all things I am [m] inſtructed, both to be full, and to be hungry, and to abound, and to have want.

13 I am able to do all things through the help of Chriſt, which ſtrengtheneth me.

14 Notwithſtanding ye have well done, that ye did communicate to mine affliction.

15 [9] And ye Philippians, know alſo, that in the [n] beginning of the goſpel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me, concerning the matter of giving and receiving, but ye only.

16 For

[7] The concluſion of his exhortation ſtanding upon three members: The one is, that ſuch as have profited in the truth of this doctrine, ſhould continue in it. The ſecond is, that if there be any which are yet ignorant, and underſtand not theſe things, and doubt of the aboliſhing of the law, they ſhould cauſe no trouble, and ſhould be gently borne withal, until they alſo be inſtructed of the Lord. The third is, that they eſteem the falſe apoſtles by their fruits: wherein he doubteth not to ſet forth himſelf for an example.

[m] He ſaid before that he was not perfect. So that in this place he calleth them perfect, which have ſomewhat profited in the knowledge of Chriſt and the goſpel, whom he ſetteth againſt the rude and ignorant, as he expoundeth himſelf in the next verſe following.

[8] He painteth out the falſe apoſtles in their colours, not upon malice or ambition, but with ſorrow and tears, to wit, becauſe that being enemies of the goſpel (for that is joined with affliction) they regard nothing elſe, but the commodities of this life: that is to ſay, that flowing in peace and quietneſs, and all worldly pleaſures, they may live in great eſtimation amongſt men, whoſe miſerable end he forewarned them of.

[n] Reward.

[o] Which they hunt after at men's hands.

[9] He ſetteth againſt theſe fellows, true paſtors which neglect earthly things, and aſpire to heaven only, where they know, that even in their bodies they ſhall be cloathed with that eternal glory, by the virtue of God.

[1] A rehearſal of the concluſion: That they manfully continue until they have gotten the victory, truſting to the Lord's ſtrength.

[a] Mine honour.

[b] In that concord, whereof the Lord is the band.

[2] He alſo calleth on ſome by name, partly becauſe they needed private exhortation, and partly alſo to ſtir up others to be more prompt and ready.

[c] God is ſaid, after the manner of men, to have a book wherein the names of his elect are written, to whom he will give everlaſting life, Ezekiel calleth it the writing of the houſe of Iſrael, and the ſecret of the Lord, chap. 13. 9.

[3] He addeth particular exhortations: the firſt is, that the joy of the Philippians be not hindered by any afflictions that the wicked imagine and work againſt them.

[d] So is the joy of the Lord diſtinguiſhed from our joy.

[4] The ſecond is, that taking all things in good part, they behave themſelves moderately with all men.

[e] Your quiet and ſettled mind.

[5] The taking away an objection: We muſt not be diſquieted through impatience, ſeeing that God is at hand to give us remedy in time againſt all our miſeries.

[6] The third is, that we be not too careful for any thing, but with ſure confidence give God thanks, and crave of him whatſoever we have need of, that with a quiet conſcience we may wholly and with all our hearts ſubmit ourſelves to him.

[f] So David began very often with tears, but ended with thankſgiving.

[g] That great quietneſs of mind which God only giveth in Chriſt.

[h] He divideth the mind into the heart, that is, into that part which is the ſeat of the will and affections, and into the higher part whereby we underſtand and reaſon of matters.

[7] A general concluſion, that as they have been taught both in word and example, ſo they frame their lives to the rule of all holineſs and righteouſneſs.

[i] Whatſoever things are ſuch as do beautify and ſet you out with a holy gravity.

[8] He witneſſeth that their liberality was acceptable to him, wherewith they did help him in his extreme poverty: but yet ſo moderating his words, that he might declare himſelf void of all ſuſpicion of diſhoneſty, and that he hath a mind contented both with proſperity and adverſity, and to be ſhort, that he repoſeth himſelf in the only will of God.

[k] As though I paſſed for my want.

[l] He uſeth a general word, and yet he ſpeaketh but of one kind of croſs, which is poverty, for commonly poverty bringeth all kinds of diſcommodity with it.

[m] This is a metaphor taken from holy things, or ſacrifices, for our life is like a ſacrifice.

[9] He witneſſeth that he remembereth alſo their former benefits, and again putteth away ſiniſter ſuſpicion of immoderate deſire, in that that he received nought of any elſe.

[n] At the beginning, when I preached the goſpel amongſt you.

A. D. 64.

16 For even when I was in Theſſalonica, ye ſent once and afterward again for my neceſſity:

17 [10] Not that I deſire a gift: but I deſire the fruit which may further your reckoning:

18 Now I have received all, and have plenty: I was even filled, after that I had received of Epaphroditus that which came from you, an [o] odour that ſmelleth ſweet, a ſacrifice acceptable and pleaſant to God.

19 And my God ſhall fulfil all your neceſſities, through his riches, with glory in Jeſus Chriſt.

20 Unto God even our Father be praiſe for evermore. Amen.

21 Salute all the ſaints in Chriſt Jeſus. The brethren which are with me, greet you.

22 All the ſaints ſalute you, and moſt of all they which are of [p] Cæſar's houſhold.

23 The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

¶ Written to the Philippians from Rome, and ſent by Epaphroditus.

---

[10] He witneſſeth again, that he alloweth well of their benefit, not ſo much for his own ſake, as for theirs, becauſe they gave it not ſo much to him, as they offered it to God as a ſacrifice, whereof the Lord himſelf will not be forgetful.

[o] He alludeth to the ſweet ſmelling ſavours that were offered in the old law.

[p] Such as belong to the emperor Nero.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 64.

1 After the ſalutation, 4 he praiſeth them the more, to make them attentive unto him. 7 He reporteth the teſtimony of the doctrine which they heard of Epaphras. 13 He magnifieth God's grace towards them, 20 and ſheweth that all the parts of our ſalvation conſiſt in Chriſt alone.

PAUL an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the [a] will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2 To them which are at [b] Coloſſe, ſaints, and faithful brethren in Chriſt: Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3 [1] We give thanks to God even the [c] Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, alway praying for you.

4 Since we heard of your faith in Chriſt Jeſus, and of your love toward all ſaints.

5 For the [d] hope's ſake which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof you have heard before by the word of truth, which is the goſpel,

6 Which is come unto you, even as it is unto all the world, and is faithful, as it is alſo among you, from the day that ye heard and truly knew the grace of God,

7 As ye alſo learned of Epaphras our dear fellow ſervant, which is for you a faithful miniſter of Chriſt:

8 [2] Who hath alſo declared unto us your love in the [e] Spirit.

9 For this cauſe we alſo, ſince the day we heard of it, ceaſe not to pray for you, and to deſire that ye might be fulfilled with knowledge of [f] his will, in all wiſdom, and ſpiritual underſtanding,

10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord, and pleaſe him in all things, being fruitful in all good works, and increaſing in the knowledge of God,

11 [3] Strengthened with all might through his glorious power, unto all patience, and long ſuffering with [g] joyfulneſs,

12 [4] Giving thanks unto the [5] Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the ſaints in [h] light.

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the kingdom * of his dear Son, * Matt. 3. 17. and 17. 5. 2 Pet. 1. 17.

[b] Coloſſe is ſituated in Phrygia, not far from Hierapolis and Laodicea, on that ſide that they bend toward Lycia and Pamphylia.

[1] He commendeth the doctrine that was delivered them by Epaphras, and their readineſs in receiving it.

[c] We cannot otherwiſe conſider of God to our ſalvation, but as he is Chriſt's father, in whom we are adopted.

[d] For the glory that is hoped for.

[2] He declareth his good will towards them, telling them that they muſt not ſtill remain at one ſtay, but go on further both in the knowledge of the goſpel, and alſo in the true uſe of it.

[f] God's will.

[3] The gift of continuance is not of us, but it proceedeth from the virtue of God, which he doth freely give us.

[g] It muſt not be unwilling, and as it were drawn out of us by force, but proceed from a merry and joyful mind.

[4] Having ended the preface, he goeth to the matter itſelf, that is to ſay, to an excellent deſcription (although it be but ſhort) of whole chriſtianity, which is fitly divided into three treatiſes: for firſt of all, he expoundeth the true doctrine according to the order of the cauſes, beginning from this verſe to the twenty-firſt. And from thence he beginneth to apply the ſame to the Coloſſians, with divers exhortations to the ſixth verſe of the ſecond chapter. And laſt of all, in the third place, even to the third chapter, he refuteth the corruptions of true doctrine.

[5] The efficient cauſe of our ſalvation is the only mercy of God the Father, who maketh us meet to be partakers of eternal life, delivering us from the darkneſs wherein we were born, and bringing us to the light of the knowledge of the glory of his Son.

[h] In that glorious and heavenly kingdom.

[6] The matter itſelf of our ſalvation, is Chriſt the Son of God, who hath obtained remiſſion of ſins for us, by the offering up of himſelf.

[7] A lively deſcription of the perſon of Chriſt, whereby we underſtand, that in him only God ſheweth himſelf to be ſeen: who was begotten of the Father before any thing was made, that is, from everlaſting, by whom alſo all things that are made, were made without any exception, by whom alſo they do conſiſt, and whoſe glory they ſerve.

[i] Begotten before any thing was made: and therefore the everlaſting Son of the everlaſting Father.

[k] He ſetteth forth the angels with glorious names, that by the compariſon of moſt excellent ſpirits, we may underſtand how far paſſing the excellency of Chriſt is, in whom only we have to content ourſelves, and let go all angels.

24 Now rejoice I in my sufferings for [r] you, and fulfil the [s] rest of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church:

25 [13] Whereof I am a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given me unto you-ward, to fulfil the word of God,

4 [3] And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with [e] enticing words.

---

[8] Having gloriously declared the excellent dignity of the person of Christ, he describeth his office and function, to wit, that he is that same to the church, that the head is to the body, that is to say, the prince and governor of it, and the very beginning of true life, as who rising first from death is the author of eternal life, so that he is above all, in whom only there is most plentiful abundance of all good things, which is poured out upon the church.

[l] Who so rose again that he should die no more, and who raiseth others from death to life by his power.

[m] Most plentiful abundance of all things pertaining to God.

[9] Now he teacheth how Christ executed that office which his Father enjoined him, to wit, by suffering the death of the cross (which was joined with the curse of God) according to his decree, that by this sacrifice he might reconcile to his Father all men, as well them which believed in him to come, and were already under this hope gathered into heaven, as them which should upon the earth believe in him afterward. And thus is justification described of the apostle, which is one and the chiefest part of the benefit of Christ.

[n] The whole church.

[10] Sanctification is another work of God in us by Christ, in that that he restored us (which hated God extremely, and were wholly and willingly given to sin) to his gracious favour in such sort, that he therewithal purifieth us with his Holy Spirit, and consecrateth us to righteousness.

[o] The Son.

[p] In that fleshly body, to give us to understand that his body was not a fantastical body, but a true body.

[11] The second treatise of this part of the epistle, wherein he exhorteth the Colossians not to suffer themselves by any means to be moved from this doctrine, shewing and declaring that there is no where any other true gospel.

[q] To all men: whereby we learn that the gospel was not shut up within the corners of Judea alone.

[12] He purchaseth authority to this doctrine by his apostleship, and taketh a most sure proof thereof, of his afflictions, which he suffereth for Christ's name, to instruct the churches with these examples of patience.

[r] For your profit and commodity.

[s] The afflictions of the church are said to be Christ's afflictions, by reason of that fellowship and knitting together that the body and the head have, the one with the other: not that there is any more need to have the church redeemed, but that Christ sheweth his power in the daily weakness of his, and that for the comfort of the whole body.

[13] He bringeth another proof of his apostleship, to wit, that God is the author of it, by whom also he was appointed peculiarly apostle of the Gentiles, to the end that by this means, that the same might be fulfilled by him, which the prophets foretold by the calling of the Gentiles.

[t] Whom he chose to sanctify unto himself in Christ: moreover he saith, that the mystery of our redemption was hidden since the world began, except it were revealed unto a few, who also were taught it extraordinarily.

[u] Thus Paul bridleth the curiosity of men.

[14] He protesteth that he doth faithfully execute his apostleship in every place, bringing men unto Christ only through the Lord's plentiful blessing of his labours.

[x] Perfect and sound wisdom, which is perfect in itself, and shall in the end make them perfect that follow it.

[1] The taking away of an objection. In that that he visited not the Colossians, nor the Laodiceans, he did it not of any negligence, but is so much the more careful for them.

[a] Me present in body.

[2] He concludeth shortly the sum of the former doctrine, to wit, that the whole sum of true wisdom, and most secret knowledge of God, consisteth in Christ only, and that this is the use of it touching men, that they being knit together in love, rest themselves happily in the knowledge of so great a goodness, until they come fully to enjoy it.

[b] Whom he never saw.

[c] Of that understanding, which bringeth forth a certain and undoubted persuasion in our minds.

[d] There is no true wisdom without Christ.

[3] A passing over to the treatise following, against the corruptions of Christianity.

[e] With a framed kind of talk made to persuade.

[f] The manner of your ecclesiastical discipline.

[g] Doctrine.

[h] So then Christ hangeth not upon men's traditions.

A. D. 64. the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

8 [4] Beware lest there be any man that [i] spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, [5] through the traditions of men, [6] according to the [k] rudiments of the world, [7] and not after Christ.

9 [8] For [l] in him [m] dwelleth [n] all the fulness of the Godhead [o] bodily.

10 And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power.

11 [9] In whom also ye are circumcised with * circumcision made without hands, by putting off the [p] sinful body of the flesh through the circumcision of Christ; *Rom. 2. 29.

12 [10] In that ye are * [q] buried with [r] him through baptism, [11] in whom ye are also raised up together through the faith of the operation of [s] God, which raised him from the dead. *Rom. 6. 4. Eph. 1. 19.

13 * [12] And you which were dead in sins, [13] and in the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, forgiving you all your trespasses, *Eph. 2. 1.

14 [14] And putting out the * [t] hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, he even took it out of the way, and fastened it upon the cross, A. D. 64. * Eph. 2. 15.

15 And hath spoiled the [u] principalities and powers, and hath [x] made a shew of them openly, and hath triumphed over them in the [y] same cross.

16 [15] Let no man therefore condemn you in meat or drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days,

17 Which are but a shadow of things to come: but the [z] body is in Christ.

18 [16] Let no man at his pleasure bear rule over you by [a] humbleness of mind, and worshipping of angels, [17] advancing himself in those things which he never saw, [18] [b] rashly puft up with his fleshly mind,

19 [19] And holdeth not the [c] head, whereof all the body furnished and knit together by joints and bands, increaseth with the increasing of [d] God.

20 [20] Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the

---

[4] He bringeth all corruptions to three kinds. The first is, that which ariseth of vain and curious speculations, and yet beareth a shew of a certain subtil wisdom.

[i] This is a word of war, and it is as much as to drive or carry away a spoil or booty.

[5] The second, which is manifestly superstitious and vain, and standeth only upon custom and feigned inspirations.

[6] The third kind was of them which joined the rudiments of the world (that is to say, the ceremonies of the law) with the gospel.

[k] Principles and rules, wherewith God ruled his church, as it were under a schoolmaster.

[7] A general confutation of all corruption is this, that that must needs be a false religion, which addeth any thing to Christ.

[8] A reason: Because only Christ, God and man, is most perfect, and passeth far above all things, so that whosoever hath him, may require nothing more.

[l] By these words is shewed a distinction of the natures.

[m] This word (dwelleth) noteth out unto us the joining together of those natures, so that of God and man is one Christ.

[n] These words set down most perfect Godhead to be in Christ.

[o] The knitting together of God and man is substantial and essential.

[9] Now he dealeth precisely against the third kind, that is to say, against them which urged the Jewish religion and first of all, he denieth that we have need of the circumcision of the flesh, seeing that without it, we are circumcised within by the virtue of Christ.

[p] These many words are used to shew what the old man is, whom Paul in other places calleth the body of sin.

[q] Look Rom. 6. 4.

[10] The taking away of an objection: We need not so much as the external sign which our fathers had, seeing that our baptism is a most effectual pledge and witness of that inward restoring and renewing.

[r] So then all the force of the matter cometh not from the very deed done, that is to say, it is not the dipping of us into the water by a minister, that maketh us to be buried with Christ, as the Papists say, that even for the very act's sake we become verily Christians, but it cometh from the virtue of Christ, for the apostle addeth the resurrection of Christ, and faith.

[11] One end of baptism is the death and burial of the old man, and that by the mighty power of God only, whose virtue we lay hold on by faith, in the death and resurrection of Christ.

[s] Through faith which cometh from God.

[12] Another end of baptism is, that we which were dead in sin, might obtain free remission of sins and eternal life, through faith in Christ who died for us.

[13] A new argument which lieth in these few words, and it is thus: Uncircumcision was no hindrance to you, why you being justified in Christ should not obtain life, therefore you need not circumcision to the attainment of salvation.

[14] He speaketh now more generally against the whole service of the law, and sheweth by two reasons, that it is abolished. First, to what purpose should he that hath obtained remission of all his sins in Christ, require those helps of the law? Secondly, because, that if a man do rightly consider those rites, he shall find that they were so many testimonies of our guiltiness, whereby we manifestly witnessed as it were by our own hand-writing, that we deserved damnation. Therefore did Christ put out that hand-writing by his coming, and fastening it to the cross, triumphed over all our enemies, were they never so mighty. Therefore to what end and purpose should we now use those ceremonies, as though we were still guilty of sin, and subject to the tyranny of our enemies?

[t] Abolishing the rites and ceremonies.

[u] Satan and his angels.

[x] As a conqueror made he a shew of those captives, and put them to shame.

[y] The cross was a chariot of triumph. No conqueror could have triumphed so gloriously in his chariot, as Christ did upon the cross.

[15] The conclusion: wherein also he nameth certain kinds, as the difference of days, and meats, and proveth by a new argument, that we are not bound unto them; to wit, because those things were shadows of Christ to come, but we possess him now exhibited unto us.

[z] The body, as a thing of substance and pith, he setteth against shadows.

[16] He disputeth against the first kind of corruptions, and setteth down the worshipping of angels for an example: which kind of false religion he confuteth, first, this way: because that they which bring in such a worship, attribute that unto themselves which is proper only to God, to wit, authority to bind men's consciences with religion, although they seem to bring in these words by humbleness of mind.

[a] By foolish humbleness of mind: for otherwise humbleness is a virtue. For these angel-worshippers blamed such of pride as would go straight to God, and use no other under means beside Christ.

[17] Secondly, because they vainly trust upon them for oracles those things which they neither saw nor heard, but devised of themselves.

[18] Thirdly, because these things have no other ground whereupon they are built, but only the opinion of men, which please themselves without all measure in their own devices.

[b] Without reason.

[19] The fourth argument, which is of great weight: Because they spoil Christ of his dignity, who only is sufficient both to nourish and also to increase his whole body.

[c] Christ.

[d] With the increasing which cometh from God.

[20] Now last of all, he fighteth against the second kind of corruptions, that is to say, against mere superstitions, invented of men, which partly deceive the simplicity of some with their craftiness, and partly with very foolish superstitions, and to be laughed at: as when godliness, remission of sins, or any such like virtue, is put in some certain kind of meat, and such like things, which the inventors of such rites themselves understand not, because indeed it is not. And he useth an argument of comparison. If by the death of Christ, who established a new covenant with his blood, you be delivered from those external rites wherewith it pleased the Lord to prepare the world, as it were by certain the ordinances of the world, why, [e] as though ye lived in the world, are ye burdened with traditions?

21 [21] As touch not, taſte not, handle not,

22 [22] Which all periſh with the uſing, [23] and are after the commandments and doctrines of men:

23 [24] Which things have indeed a ſhew of [f] wiſdom, in [g] voluntary religion and humbleneſs of mind, and in [h] not ſparing the body, which are things of no value, ſith they pertain to the [i] filling of the fleſh.

CHAP. III.

1 Againſt earthly exerciſes, which the falſe apoſtles urged, 2 he ſetteth heavenly: 5 and beginneth with the mortifying of the fleſh, 8 whence he draweth particular exhortations, 18 and particular duties which depend on each man's calling.

IF [1] ye then [2] be [a] riſen with Chriſt, [3] ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God.

2 Set your affections on things which are above, and not on things which are on the [b] earth.

3 [4] For ye are dead, [5] and your life is hid with Chriſt in God.

4 When Chriſt which is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory.

5 [6] * Mortify therefore your [c] members which are on the earth, fornication, uncleanneſs, the inordinate affection, evil concupiſcence, and covetouſneſs which is idolatry:

* Eph. 5. 3.

8 But now put ye away even all theſe things, wrath, anger, maliciouſneſs, curſed ſpeaking, filthy ſpeaking, out of your mouth.

9 Lye not one to another, [7] ſeeing that ye have put off the old man with his works,

10 And have put on the new, [8] which is renewed in [e] knowledge after the image of him that created him,

11 [9] Where is neither Grecian nor Jew, circumciſion nor uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond, free: But Chriſt is all, and in all things.

12 Now therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloved, [f] put on the [g] bowels of mercies, kindneſs, humbleneſs of mind, meekneſs, long-ſuffering:

13 Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel to another: even as Chriſt forgave, even ſo do ye.

14 And above all theſe things put on love, which is the [h] bond of perfectneſs.

15 And

rudiments, to that full knowledge of true religion, why would ye be burdened with traditions, I wot not what, as though ye were citizens of this world, that is to ſay, as though ye depended upon this life, and earthly things? Now this is the cauſe why before verſe 8. he followed another order than he doth in the confutation: becauſe he ſheweth there by what degrees falſe religions came into the world, to wit, beginning firſt by curious ſpeculations of the wiſe, after which in proceſs of time ſucceeded groſs ſuperſtition; againſt which miſchiefs, the Lord ſet at length that ſervice of the law, which ſome abuſed in like ſort: but in the confutation he began with the aboliſhing of the law ſervice, that he might ſhew by compariſon, that thoſe falſe ſervices ought much more to be taken away.

[e] As though your felicity ſtood in theſe earthly things, and the kingdom of God were not rather ſpiritual.

[21] An imitation in the perſon of theſe ſuperſtitious men, rightly expreſſing their nature and uſe of ſpeech.

[22] Another argument: The ſpiritual and inward kingdom of God cannot conſiſt in theſe outward things, and ſuch as periſh with the uſing.

[23] The third argument: Becauſe God is not the author of theſe traditions, and therefore they did not bind the conſciences.

[24] The taking away of an objection. Theſe things have a godly ſhew, becauſe men by this means ſeem to worſhip God with a good mind, and humble themſelves, and neglect the body, which the moſt part of men curiouſly pamper up and cheriſh: but yet notwithſtanding the things themſelves are of no value, forſomuch as they pertain not to the things that are ſpiritual and everlaſting, but to the nouriſhment of the fleſh.

[f] Which ſeem indeed to be ſome exquiſite thing, and ſo wiſe devices, as though they came from heaven.

[g] Hence ſprang the works of ſupererogation, as the Papiſts term them, that is to ſay, needleſs works, as though men performed more than is commanded them: which was the beginning and the very ground whereon monks merits were brought in.

[h] A lively deſcription of monkery.

[i] Seeing they ſtand in meat and drink, wherein the kingdom of God doth not ſtand.

[1] Another part of this epiſtle, wherein he taketh occaſion by reaſon of thoſe vain exerciſes, to ſhew the duty of a Chriſtian life: which is an ordinary thing with him, after he hath once ſet down the doctrine itſelf.

[2] Our renewing or new birth, which is wrought in us by being partakers of the reſurrection of Chriſt, is the fountain of all holineſs, out of which ſundry arms or rivers do afterwards flow.

[a] For if we be partakers of Chriſt, we are carried as it were into another life, where we ſhall neither need meat nor drink, for we ſhall be like unto the angels.

[3] The end and mark which all the duties of Chriſtian life ſhoot at, is to enter into the kingdom of heaven, and to give ourſelves to thoſe things which lead us thither, that is, to true godlineſs, and not to theſe outward and corporal things.

[b] So he calleth that ſhew of religion which he ſpake of in the former chapter.

[4] A reaſon taken of the efficient cauſes, and others: you are dead as touching the fleſh, that is, touching the old nature which ſeeketh after all tranſitory things; and on the other ſide, you have begun to live according to the Spirit, therefore give yourſelves to ſpiritual and heavenly, and not to carnal and earthly things.

[5] The taking away of an objection: while we are yet in his world, we are ſubject to many miſeries of this life, ſo that the life that is in us, is as it were hidden: yet notwithſtanding we have the beginnings of life and glory, the accompliſhment whereof which lieth now in Chriſt's and in God's hand, ſhall be aſſuredly and manifeſtly performed in that glorious coming of the Lord.

[6] Let not your dead nature be any more effectual in you, but let your living nature be effectual. Now the force of nature is known by the motions. Therefore let the affections of the world die in you, and let the contrary motions which are ſpiritual, live. And he reckoneth up a great long ſcroll of vices, and their contrary virtues.

[c] The motions and luſts that are in us, are in this place very properly called members, becauſe that the reaſon and will of man corrupted, doth uſe them as the body doth his members.

[d] Uſeth to come.

[7] A definition of our new birth taken of the parts thereof, which are the putting off of the old man, that is to ſay, of the wickedneſs which is in us by nature, and the reſtoring, and repairing of the new man, that is to ſay, of pureneſs, which is given us by grace: but both of them are but begun in us in this preſent life, and by certain degrees finiſhed, the one dying in us by little and little, and the other coming to the perfection of another life, by little and little.

[8] Newneſs of life conſiſteth in knowledge which tranſformeth man to the image of God his maker, that is to ſay, to the ſincerity and pureneſs of the whole ſoul.

[e] He ſpeaketh of an effectual knowledge.

[9] He telleth them again that the goſpel doth not reſpect thoſe external things, but true juſtification and ſanctification in Chriſt only, which have many fruits, as he reckoneth them up here: But commendeth two things eſpecially, to wit, godly concord and continual ſtudy of God's word.

[f] So put on, that ye never put off.

[g] Thoſe moſt tender affections of exceeding compaſſion.

[h] Which bendeth and knitteth together all the duties that paſs from man to man.

A. D. 64.

15 And let the peace of God [i] rule in your hearts, to the which ye are called in [k] one body, and be ye thankful.

[l] By pſalms he meaneth all godly ſongs which were written upon divers occaſions; and by hymns, all ſuch as contain the praiſe of God; and by ſpiritual ſongs, other more peculiar and artificious ſongs which were alſo in praiſes of God, but they were made fuller of muſic.

[m] Call upon the name of Chriſt, when you do it, or do it to Chriſt's praiſe and glory.

[10] He goeth from precepts which concern the whole civil life of man, to precepts pertaining to every man's family, and requireth of wives ſubjection in the Lord.

[n] For thoſe wives do not well, that do not ſet God in Chriſt before them in their love, but this philoſophy knoweth not.

[11] He requireth of huſbands, that they love their wives, and uſe them gently.

[12] He requireth of children, that according to God's commandment, they be obedient to their parents.

[o] In the Lord, and ſo it is expounded, Eph. 5. 19.

[13] Of parents, that they be gentle toward their children.

[14] Of ſervants, that fearing God himſelf, to whom their obedience is acceptable, they reverently, faithfully, and from the heart obey their maſters.

[p] For that, that you ſhall have duly obeyed your maſters, the time ſhall come, that you ſhall be made ſons, of ſervants, and then ſhall you know this of a ſurety, which ſhall be when you are made partakers of the heavenly inheritance.

[15] He requireth of maſters, that being mindful how that they themſelves alſo ſhall render an account before that heavenly Lord and Maſter, which will revenge wrongful doings without any reſpect of maſters or ſervants, they ſhew themſelves juſt and upright, with equity, unto their ſervants.

[1] He addeth certain general exhortations, and at length endeth his epiſtle with divers familiar and godly ſalutations.

[2] Prayers muſt be continual and earneſt.

[3] Such as miniſter the word, muſt eſpecially be commended to the prayers of the church.

[a] An open and free mouth to preach the goſpel.

[4] In all parts of our life, we ought to have good conſideration even of them which are without the church.

[b] Adviſedly and circumſpectly.

[c] Seek occaſion to win them, although you loſe of your own by it.

[5] Our ſpeech and talk muſt be applied to the profit of the hearers.

[d] Framed to the profit of your neighbour.

[e] Againſt this is ſet filthy communication, as Eph. 4. 29.

[f] Why then, Peter was not at that time at Rome.

[g] In the goſpel.

The Firſt Epiſtle of Paul to the THESSALONIANS.

A. D. 54.

CHAP. I.

1 He therefore beginneth with thankſgiving, 4 to put them in mind that whatſoever was praiſe-worthy in them, 11 it came of God's goodneſs: 8 and that they are enſamples unto others.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Theſſalonians, which is in God our Father, and in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

2 [1] We give God thanks always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers,

3 [2] Without ceaſing, remembering your effectual faith, and diligent love, and the patience of your hope in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the ſight of God, even our Father:

4 Knowing, beloved brethren, that ye are [a] elect of God.

5 [3] For our goſpel was not unto you in word only, but alſo in power, and in the Holy Ghoſt, and in [b] much aſſurance, as ye know after what manner we were among you for your ſakes.

6 [4] And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, and received the word in much affliction, with [c] joy of the Holy Ghoſt,

7 So that ye were as enſamples to all that believe in Macedonia, and in Achaia:

8 For from you ſounded out the word of the Lord, not in Macedonia and Achaia only: but your faith alſo which is toward God, ſpread abroad in all quarters, that we need not to ſpeak any thing:

9 For they [d] themſelves ſhew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, [5] and how ye turned to God from idols, to ſerve the living and true God,

10 And to look for his Son from heaven, whom he raiſed from the dead, even Jeſus which delivereth us from [e] that wrath to come.

A. D. 54.

CHAP. II.

1 He declareth how faithfully he preached the goſpel unto them, 5 ſeeking neither gain, 6 nor praiſe of men: 10 and he proveth the ſame by their own teſtimony: 14 that they did courageouſly bear perſecutions of their countrymen: 17 that he deſireth very much to ſee them.

FOR [1] ye yourſelves know, brethren, that our entrance in unto you was not in vain,

2 [2] But even after that we had ſuffered before, and were ſhamefully entreated at * Philippi (as ye know) we were bold in [a] our God, to ſpeak unto you the goſpel of God, with much ſtriving. * Acts 16. 12.

3 [3] For our exhortation was not by deceit, [b] nor by uncleanneſs, nor by guile.

4 [4] But as we were [c] allowed of God, that the goſpel ſhould be committed unto us, ſo we ſpeak, not as they that pleaſe men, but God, which [d] approveth our hearts.

5 Neither yet did we ever uſe flattering words, as ye know, nor coloured covetouſneſs, God is record.

6 [5] Neither ſought we praiſe of men, neither of you, nor of others, when we might have been [e] chargeable, as the apoſtles of Chriſt.

7 But we were [f] gentle among you, even as a nurſe cheriſheth her children.

8 [6] Thus being affectioned toward you, our good will was to have dealt unto you, not the goſpel of God only, but alſo our own ſouls, becauſe ye were dear unto us.

9 [7] For ye remember, brethren, * our labour and * Acts 20. 34. 1 Cor. 4. 12. 2 Theſſ. 3. 8.

[1] An example of right Chriſtian rejoicing, whereby alſo we learn, that ſuch as have great gifts in them, are in two ſorts bridled, to wit, if they conſider that they have received all from God, and that continuance muſt be deſired at his hands, whereunto alſo the whole epiſtle exhorteth the Theſſalonians.

[2] He commendeth them for three ſpecial gifts, effectual faith, continual love, and patient hope: to the end they might be aſhamed, being indued with ſuch excellent gifts, not to continue in God's election.

[a] Word for word, that your election is of God.

[3] Another reaſon, why they ought in no wiſe to ſtart back, but continue to the end, becauſe they cannot doubt of this doctrine which hath been ſo many ways confirmed unto them even from heaven, as they themſelves did well know.

[b] Paul ſheweth by two things that there followed very great fruit of his preaching, to wit, by theſe gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and that certain aſſurance which was throughly ſettled in their minds, as appeared by their willing bearing of the croſs.

[4] Another reaſon, becauſe even that day they embraced the goſpel with great chearfulneſs, inſomuch that they were an example to all their neighbours: ſo that it ſhould be more ſhame to them to faint in the mid-race.

[c] With joy which cometh from the Holy Ghoſt.

[d] All the believers.

[5] It is no true converſion to forſake idols, unleſs a man therewithal worſhip the true and living God, in Chriſt the only Redeemer.

[e] This word (That) is not put here without cauſe, and by (wrath) is meant that revenge and puniſhment, wherewith the Lord will judge the world at length in his terrible wrath.

[1] That which he touched before ſhortly concerning his apoſtleſhip, he handleth now more at large, and to that end and purpoſe which we ſpake of.

[2] The virtues of a true paſtor are, freely without fear to preach the goſpel, even in the midſt of dangers.

[a] Through God's gracious help.

[3] To teach pure doctrine faithfully and with a pure heart.

[b] By any wicked and naughty kind of dealing.

[4] To approve his conſcience to God, being free from all flattery and covetouſneſs.

[c] Seeing there is this difference between the judgments of God, and the judgments of men, that when men chuſe, they reſpect the qualities of thoſe things which ſtand before them, but God findeth the reaſon of his counſel only in himſelf, it followeth, that ſeeing we are not able to think a good thought, that whomſoever he firſt chuſeth to thoſe callings, he maketh them able, and doth not find them able. And therefore in that we are allowed of God, it hangeth upon his mercy.

[d] Which liketh and alloweth of them.

[5] To ſubmit himſelf even to the baſeſt, to win them, and to eſchew all pride.

[e] When I might lawfully have lived upon the expences of the church.

[f] We were not rough, but eaſy and gentle as a nurſe, that is neither ambitious nor covetous, but taketh all pains as patiently as if ſhe were a mother.

[6] To have the flock that is committed unto him in more eſtimation than his own life.

[7] To depart with his own right rather than to be chargeable to his ſheep.

A. D. 54.

and travail: for we laboured day and night, becauſe we would not be chargeable unto any of you, and preached unto you the goſpel of God.

10 [8] Ye are witneſſes, and God alſo, how holily and juſtly, and unblameably we behaved ourſelves among you that believe:

11 [9] As ye know how that we exhorted you, and comforted, and beſought every one of you, (as a father his children)

12 [10] That ye * would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

* Eph. 4. 1. Phil. 1. 27. Col. 1. 10.

13 [11] For this cauſe alſo thank we God without ceaſing, that when ye received the word of God, which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is indeed the word of God, which alſo worketh in you that believe.

14 [12] For, brethren, ye are become followers of the churches of God, which in Judea are in [g] Chriſt Jeſus, becauſe ye have alſo ſuffered the ſame things of your own [h] countrymen, even as they have of the Jews,

15 [13] Who both killed the Lord Jeſus and their own prophets, and have perſecuted us away, [14] and God they pleaſe not, and are contrary to [i] all men,

16 And forbid us to preach unto the Gentiles, that they might be ſaved, to [k] fulfil their ſins always: for the [l] wrath of God is come on them to the utmoſt.

17 [15] Foraſmuch, brethren, as we [m] were kept from you for a ſeaſon, concerning ſight, but not in the heart, we enforced the more to ſee your face with great deſire.

18 Therefore we would have come unto you (I Paul, at leaſt once or twice) but Satan hindered us.

19 For what is our hope or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even you in the preſence of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt at his coming?

20 Yes, ye are our glory and joy.

CHAP. III.

A. D. 54.

1 To ſhew his affection toward them, he ſendeth Timothy unto them: 6 he is ſo moved by the report of their proſperous ſtate, 9 that he cannot give ſufficient thanks, 11 and therefore he breaketh out into prayer.

WHerefore ſince we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to remain at Athens alone.

2 * And have ſent Timotheus our brother and miniſter of God, and our labour-fellow in the goſpel of Chriſt, to ſtabliſh you, and to comfort you touching your faith,

* Acts 16. 1.

3 That no man ſhould be moved with theſe afflictions: [1] for ye yourſelves know, that we are appointed thereunto.

4 For verily when we were with you, we told you before that we ſhould ſuffer tribulations, even as it came to paſs, and ye know it.

5 Even for this cauſe, when I could no longer forbear, I ſent him that I might know of your faith, leſt the tempter had tempted you in any ſort, and that our labour had been in vain.

6 [2] But now lately when Timotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and love, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, deſiring to ſee us, as we alſo do you,

7 Therefore, brethren, we had conſolation in you, in all our affliction and neceſſity through your faith.

8 For now are we [a] alive, if ye ſtand faſt in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we recompenſe to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we rejoice for your ſakes before our God,

10 Night and day, * praying exceedingly that we might ſee your face, and might [b] accompliſh that which is lacking in your faith.

* Rom. 1. 10. and 15. 23.

11 Now God himſelf, even our Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, guide our journey unto you.

12 [3] And the Lord increaſe you, and make you

---

[8] To excel others in example of a godly life.

[9] To exhort and comfort with a fatherly mind and affection.

[10] To exhort all men diligently and earneſtly to lead a godly life.

[11] Having approved his miniſtry, he commendeth again (to that end and purpoſe I ſpake of) the chearfulneſs of the Theſſalonians, which was anſwerable to his diligence in preaching, and their manly patience.

[12] He confirmeth them in their afflictions which they ſuffered of their own people, becauſe they were afflicted of their own countrymen: which came as well (ſaith he) to the churches of the Jews, as to them: and therefore they ought to take it in good part.

[g] Which Chriſt hath gathered together.

[h] Even of them which were of the ſame country, and the ſame town that you are of.

[13] He preventeth an offence which might be taken, for that the Jews eſpecially, above all others, perſecuted the goſpel. That is no new thing, ſaith he, ſeeing they ſlew Chriſt himſelf, and his prophets, and have baniſhed me alſo.

[14] He foretelleth the utter deſtruction of the Jews, leſt any man ſhould be moved by their rebellion.

[i] For the Jews would neither enter into the kingdom of God themſelves, nor ſuffer others to enter in.

[k] Until that wickedneſs of theirs which they have by inheritance, as it were, of their fathers, be grown ſo great, that the meaſure of their iniquity being filled, God may come forth to wrath.

[l] The judgment of God being angry, which indeed appeared ſhortly after in the deſtruction of the city of Jeruſalem, whither many reſorted even out of divers provinces when it was beſieged.

[15] He meeteth with an objection, why he came not to them ſtraightways being in ſo great miſery: I deſired oftentimes (ſaith he) and it lay not in me, but Satan hindered my endeavours, and therefore I ſent Timothy my faithful companion unto you, becauſe you are moſt dear to me.

[m] Were kept aſunder from you, and as it were orphans.

[1] The will of God, who calleth his, on this condition, to bring them to glory by affliction, is a moſt ſure remedy againſt all afflictions.

[2] Becauſe they have hitherto gone ſo well forward, he exhorteth them again to make an end of the reſt of the journey, ſeeing that therein alſo they ſhall do him, their apoſtle, a great pleaſure.

[a] For now you cannot otherwiſe think me ſafe and in good caſe, unleſs you go forward in religion and faith.

[b] Paul was conſtrained, through the importunate dealing of the enemies, to leave the building which he had ſcarce begun: and for that cauſe he had left Silas and Timotheus in Macedonia, and when Timothy came to Athens to him, he ſent him back again ſtraightway. So that he deſireth to ſee the Theſſalonians, that he may thoroughly accompliſh their faith and religion, that was as yet imperfect.

[3] Another part of the epiſtle, wherein he ſpeaketh of the duties of a Chriſtian life. And he ſheweth that the perfection of a Chriſtian life conſiſteth in two things, to wit, in charity toward all men, and inward purity of the heart, the accompliſhment whereof notwithſtanding is deferred to the next coming of Chriſt, who will then perfect his work by the ſame grace wherewith he began it in us.

A. D. 54.

you abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you,

* Ch. 5. 23. 1 Cor. 1. 8.

13 * To make your hearts ſtable and unblameable in holineſs before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt with all his ſaints.

CHAP. IV.

1 He exhorteth them 3 to holineſs, 9 and brotherly love. 13 He forbiddeth them to ſorrow after the manner of infidels. 15 He ſetteth out the hiſtory of our reſurrection.

AND [1] furthermore we beſeech you, brethren, and exhort you in the Lord Jeſus, that ye [a] increaſe more and more, as ye have received of us, how ye ought to walk and to pleaſe God.

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jeſus.

* Rom. 12. 2. Eph. 5. 17.

3 * [2] For this is the will of God, even your [b] ſanctification, and that ye ſhould abſtain from fornication,

4 [3] That every one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſs his veſſel in holineſs and honour,

5 [4] And not in the luſt of concupiſcence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:

* 1 Cor. 6. 8.

6 * [5] That no man oppreſs or defraud his brother in any matter: for the Lord is avenger of all ſuch things, as we alſo have told you beforetime and teſtified.

* 1 Cor. 1. 2.

7 * For God hath not called uunt o uncleanneſs, but unto holineſs.

8 He therefore that [c] deſpiſeth theſe things, deſpiſeth not man, but God, who hath even given you his holy Spirit.

* John 13. 34. and 15. 12. 1 John 2. 8. and 4. 21.

9 [6] But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you: * for ye are taught of God to love one another.

10 Yea, and that thing verily ye do unto all the brethren, which are throughout all Macedonia: but we beſeech you, brethren, that ye increaſe more and more:

11 [7] And that ye ſtudy to be quiet, and to meddle with your own buſineſs; [8] and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you.

A. D. 54.

12 That ye may behave yourſelves honeſtly toward them that are without, and that nothing be lacking unto you.

13 ¶ [9] I would not, brethren, have you ignorant [10] concerning them [11] which are aſleep, that ye ſorrow not even as others which have no hope.

14 [12] For if we believe that Jeſus is dead, and is riſen, even ſo them which ſleep in [d] Jeſus, will God [e] bring with him.

15 [13] For this ſay we unto you by the [f] word of the Lord, that [g] we which live, and are remaining in the coming of the Lord, ſhall not prevent them which ſleep:

* 1 Cor. 15. 52.

16 For the Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from heaven with a [h] ſhout, and with the voice of the archangel, and * with the trumpet of God: and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt:

17 Then ſhall we which live and remain, be [i] caught up with them alſo in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore, comfort yourſelves one another with theſe words.

CHAP. V.

1 Condemning the curious ſearching for the ſeaſons of Chriſt coming, 6 he warneth them to be ready daily to receive him: 11 And ſo giveth them ſundry good leſſons.

BUT [1] of the times and [a] ſeaſons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you:

2 For ye yourſelves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord ſhall come, even as a thief in the night.

3 For when they ſhall ſay, Peace and ſafety, then ſhall come upon them ſudden deſtruction, as the travail upon a woman with child, and they ſhall not eſcape.

4 [2] But ye, brethren, are not in darkneſs, that

---

[1] Divers exhortations, the ground whereof is this, to be mindful of thoſe things which they have heard of the apoſtle.

[a] That ye labour to excel more and more, and daily paſs yourſelves.

[2] This is the ſum of thoſe things which he delivered them, to dedicate themſelves wholly to God. And he condemneth plainly all filthineſs through luſt, becauſe it is altogether contrary to the will of God.

[b] Look John 17. 17.

[3] Another reaſon, becauſe it defileth the body.

[4] The third, becauſe the ſaints are diſcerned from them which know not God by honeſty and purity.

[5] Secondly, he reprehendeth all violent oppreſſion, and immoderate deſire; and ſheweth moſt ſeverely, as the prophet of God, that God will revenge ſuch wickedneſs.

[c] The e commandments which I gave you.

[6] Thirdly, he requireth a ready mind to all manner of loving kindneſs, and exhorteth them to profit more and more in that virtue.

[7] He condemneth unquiet brains, and ſuch as are curious in matters which appertain not unto them.

[8] He rebuketh idleneſs and ſlothfulneſs, which vices whoſoever are given unto, fall into other wickedneſs, to the great offence of the church.

[9] The third part of the epiſtle, which is interlaced among the former exhortations (which he returneth unto afterward) wherein he ſpeaketh of the mourning for the dead, and of the manner of the reſurrection, and of the latter day.

[10] We muſt take heed that we do not immoderately bewail the dead, that is, as they uſe to do which think that they are utterly periſhed.

[11] A confirmation: for death is but a ſleep of the body (for he ſpeaketh of the faithful) until the Lord cometh.

[12] A reaſon of the confirmation: for ſeeing that the head is riſen, the members alſo ſhall riſe, and that by the virtue of God.

[d] They die in Chriſt, which continue in faith whereby they are grafted into Chriſt, even to the laſt gaſp.

[e] Will call their bodies out of their graves, and join their ſouls to them again.

[13] The manner of the reſurrection ſhall be thus: The bodies of the dead ſhall be as it were raiſed out of ſleep at the ſound of the trumpet of God: Chriſt himſelf ſhall deſcend from heaven. The ſaints (for he ſpeaketh properly of them) which ſhall then be found alive, together with the dead which ſhall riſe, ſhall be taken up into the clouds to meet the Lord, and ſhall be in perpetual glory with him.

[f] In the name of the Lord, as though he himſelf ſpake unto you.

[g] He ſpeaketh of theſe things, as though he ſhould be one of them whom the Lord ſhall find alive at his coming, becauſe that time is uncertain; and therefore every one of us ought to be in ſuch a readineſs, as if the Lord were coming at every moment.

[h] The word which the apoſtle uſeth here, ſignifieth properly that encouragement which mariners uſe one to another, when they altogether with one ſhout put forth their oars and row together.

[i] Suddenly, and in the twinkling of an eye.

[1] The day that God hath appointed for this judgment, we know not: but this is ſure, that it ſhall come upon men when they look for nothing leſs.

[a] Look Acts 1. 7.

[2] Returning to exhortations, he warneth us which are lightened with the knowledge of God, that it is our duty not to live ſecurely in delicious ſneſs, leſt we be ſuddenly taken in a dead ſleep in pleaſures: but contrariwiſe to have an eye to the Lord, and not ſuffer ourſelves to be oppreſſed with the cares of this world, for that is meet for the darkneſs of the night, and this for the light.

I

that day ſhall come on you, as it were a thief.

5 Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, neither of darkneſs.

6 Therefore let us not ſleep as do others, but let us watch and be ſober.

7 For they that ſleep, ſleep in the night: and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.

8 [3] But let us which are of the day, be ſober, * putting on the breaſtplate of faith and love, and the hope of ſalvation for an helmet:

* Iſa. 59. 17. Epheſ. 6. 17.

9 [4] For God hath not appointed us unto wrath, but to obtain ſalvation by the means of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

10 [5] Which died for us, that whether we wake or ſleep, we ſhould live together with him.

11 [6] Wherefore exhort one another, and edify one another, even as ye do.

12 [7] Now we beſeech you, brethren, that ye [b] acknowledge them which labour among you, and are over you in the [c] Lord, and admoniſh you,

13 That ye have them in ſingular love for [d] their works ſake. [8] Be at peace among yourſelves.

14 [9] We deſire you, brethren, admoniſh them that are [e] out of order: comfort the feeble-minded: bear with the weak: be patient toward all men.

15 [10] * See that none recompenſe evil for evil unto any man: but ever follow that which is good, both toward yourſelves, and toward all men.

A. D. 64.

* Prov. 17. 13. and 20. 22. Mat. 5. 39. Rom. 12. 17. 1 Pet. 3. 9.

16 [11] Rejoice evermore.

17 * Pray continually.

* Luke 18. 1.

18 In all things, give thanks: for this is the [f] will of God in Chriſt Jeſus toward you.

19 [12] Quench not the Spirit.

20 Deſpiſe not [g] propheſying.

21 Try all things, and keep that which is good.

22 [13] Abſtain from all [h] appearance of evil.

23 Now the very God of peace [i] ſanctify you throughout: and I pray God that your whole ſpirit and ſoul and body may be kept blameleſs unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

24 [14] * [k] Faithful is he which calleth you, which will alſo [l] do it.

* 1 Cor. 1. 9.

25 [15] Brethren, pray for us.

26 Greet all the brethren with an holy kiſs.

27 I charge you in the Lord, that this epiſtle be read unto all the brethren the ſaints.

28 The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you. Amen.

¶ The firſt epiſtle unto the Theſſalonians, written from Athens.

---

[3] We muſt fight with faith and hope, much leſs ought we lie careleſly ſnoring.

[4] He pricketh us forwards by ſetting moſt certain hope of victory before us.

[5] The death of Chriſt is a pledge of our victory, for therefore he died, that we might be partakers of his life or virtue, yea even whilſt we live here.

[6] We muſt not only watch ourſelves, but we are alſo bound to ſtir up and confirm one another.

[7] We muſt have great conſideration of them which are appointed to the miniſtry of the word, and government of the church by God, and do their duty.

[b] That you acknowledge and take them for ſuch as they are, that is to ſay, men worthy to be greatly accounted of among you.

[c] In thoſe things which pertain to God's ſervice: ſo is the eccleſiaſtical function diſtinguiſhed from civil authority, and true ſhepherds from wolves.

[d] So then, where this cauſe ceaſeth, there muſt the honour ceaſe.

[8] The maintenance of mutual concord, is eſpecially to be looked unto.

[9] We muſt have conſideration of every man, and as the diſeaſe is, ſo muſt the remedy be uſed.

[e] That keep not their rank or ſtanding.

[10] Charity ought not to be overcome with any injuries.

[11] A quiet and appeaſed mind, is nouriſhed with continual prayers, reſpecting the will of God.

[f] An acceptable thing to God, and ſuch as he liketh well of.

[12] The ſparks of the Spirit of God that are kindled in us, are nouriſhed with daily hearing the word of God: but true doctrine muſt be diligently diſtinguiſhed from falſe.

[g] The expounding of the word of God.

[13] A general concluſion, that we waiting for the coming of Chriſt, do give ourſelves to pureneſs, both in mind, will and body, through the grace and ſtrength of the Spirit of God.

[h] Whatſoever hath but the very ſhew of evil, abſtain from it.

[i] Separate you from the world, and make you holy to himſelf through his Spirit in Chriſt, in whom only you ſhall attain unto that true peace.

[14] The good will and power of God is a ſure confirmation againſt all difficulties, whereof we have a ſure witneſs in our vocation.

[k] Always one and ever like himſelf, who performeth indeed whatſoever he promiſeth: and an effectual calling is nothing elſe but a right declaring and true ſetting forth of God's will: and therefore the ſalvation of the elect is ſafe and ſure.

[l] Who will alſo make you perfect.

A. D. 54.

* 1 Theſ. 1. 2. 3 * [1] We ought to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, becauſe that your faith [a] groweth exceedingly, and the love of every one of you toward another, aboundeth,

4 So that we ourſelves rejoice of you in the churches of God, becauſe of your patience and faith in all your perſecutions and tribulations that ye ſuffer:

* Jude 6. 5 * [2] Which is a manifeſt token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for the which ye alſo ſuffer.

6 [3] For it is a righteous thing with God, to recompenſe tribulation to them that trouble you.

7 And to you, which are troubled, reſt [4] with us, * [5] when the Lord ſhall ſhew himſelf from heaven with his mighty angels,
* 1 Theſ. 4. 16.

8 In flaming fire, rendering vengeance unto them [6] that do not know God, and which obey not unto the goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt,

9 Which ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting perdition from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power,

10 When he ſhall come to be glorified in his ſaints, and to be made marvellous in all them that believe ([7] becauſe our teſtimony toward you was believed) in that day.

11 [8] Wherefore, we alſo pray always for you, that our God may make you worthy of [b] this calling, and fulfil [c] all the good pleaſure of his goodneſs, and the [d] work of faith with power,

12 That the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God, and of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

A. D. 54.

CHAP. II.

2 He ſheweth that the day of the Lord ſhall not come, till there be a departure from the faith, 3 and that Antichriſt be revealed, 8 whoſe deſtruction he ſetteth out: 15 and thereupon exhorteth to conſtancy.

NOW [1] we beſeech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and by our [a] aſſembling unto him,

2 [2] That ye be not ſuddenly moved from your mind, nor troubled, neither by [b] ſpirit, nor by [c] word, nor by [d] letter, as it were from us, as though the day of Chriſt were at hand.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means: [3] for that day ſhall not come, except there come a departing firſt, and that [e] that man of ſin be diſcloſed, even the ſon of perdition,

4 Which is an adverſary, and [f] exalteth himſelf againſt all that is called God, or that is worſhipped: [4] ſo that he doth ſit as God in the temple of God, ſhewing himſelf that he is God.

5 [5] Remember ye not, that when I was yet with you, I told you theſe things?

6 And now ye know [g] what with-holdeth, that he might be revealed in his time.

7 [6] For the myſtery of iniquity doth already work: [7] only he which now [h] with-holdeth, ſhall let till he be taken out of the way.

8 [8] And then ſhall [i] that wicked man be revealed,

---

[1] The firſt part of the epiſtle, wherein he rejoiceth that through the grace of God, they have manfully ſuſtained all the aſſaults of their enemies, wherein he confirmeth them: moreover ſhewing with what gifts they muſt chiefly fight, to wit, with faith and charity, which muſt daily increaſe.

[a] That whereas it grew up before, it doth alſo receive ſome increaſe every day, more and more.

[2] He openeth the fountain of all true comfort, to wit, that in afflictions which we ſuffer of the wicked for righteouſneſs ſake, we may behold as it were in a glaſs the teſtimony of that judgment to come, and the end thereof moſt acceptable to us, and moſt ſharp to his enemies.

[3] A proof: God is juſt, therefore he will worthily puniſh the unjuſt, and will do away the miſeries of his people.

[4] He confirmeth them alſo by the way, by this means, that the condition both of this preſent ſtate and the ſtate to come, is common to him with them.

[5] A moſt glorious deſcription of the ſecond coming of Chriſt, to be ſet againſt all the miſeries of the godly, and the triumphs of the wicked.

[6] There is no knowledge of God unto ſalvation, without the goſpel of Chriſt.

[7] The children of God ſhall be counted by the faith which they have in the goſpel, which is preached unto them by the apoſtles.

[8] Seeing that we have the mark ſet before us, it remaineth that we go unto it. And we go to it, by certain degrees of cauſes: firſt by the free love and good pleaſure of God by virtue whereof all other inferior cauſes work: from thence proceedeth the free calling to Chriſt, and from calling, faith, whereupon followeth both the glorifying of Chriſt in us, and us in Chriſt.

[b] By (calling) he meaneth not the very act of calling, but that ſelf-ſame thing whereunto we are called, which is the glory of that heavenly kingdom.

[c] Which he determined long ſince, only upon his gracious and merciful goodneſs towards you.

[d] So then, faith is an excellent work of God in us: and we ſee here plainly that the apoſtle leaveth nothing to free-will, to make it check-mate with God's working therein, as the Papiſts dream.

[1] The ſecond part of the epiſtle, containing an excellent prophecy of the ſtate of the church, which ſhall be from the apoſtles time unto the latter day of judgment.

[a] If we think earneſtly upon that unmeaſurable glory, which we ſhall be partakers of with Chriſt, it will be an excellent remedy for us againſt wavering and impatience, ſo that neither the glittering of the world ſhall allure us, nor the dreadful ſight of the croſs diſmay us.

[2] We muſt take heed of falſe prophets, eſpecially in this matter, which go about to deceive, and that for the moſt part, after three ſorts: for either they brag of feigned prophetical revelations, or they bring conjectures and reaſons of their own, or uſe counterfeit writings.

[b] By dreams and fables, which men pretend to be ſpiritual revelations.

[c] Either by word of mouth, or by books written.

[d] Either by forged letter, or falſly gloſed upon.

[3] The apoſtle foretelleth that before the coming of the Lord, there ſhall be a throne ſet up clean contrary to Chriſt's glory, wherein that wicked man ſhall ſit, and transfer all things that appertain to God, to himſelf, and many ſhall fall away from God to him.

[e] By ſpeaking of one, he pointeth out the body of the tyrannous and perſecuting church.

[f] All men know who he is that ſaith he can ſhut up heaven and open it at his pleaſure, and took upon him to be Lord and Maſter, above all kings and princes, before whom kings and princes fall down and worſhip, honoring that Antichriſt as a god.

[4] He foretelleth that Antichriſt (that is, whoſoever he be that ſhall occupy that ſeat that falleth away from God) ſhall not reign without the church, but in the very boſom of the church.

[5] This prophecy was continually declared to the ancient church, but it was neglected of them that followed.

[g] What hindereth and ſtayeth.

[6] Even in the apoſtle's time the firſt foundations of the apoſtatic all-ſeat were laid, but yet ſo that they deceived men.

[7] He foretelleth that when the empire of Rome is taken away, the ſeat that falleth away from God ſhall ſucceed and hold his place, as the old writers, Tertullian, Chryſoſtom and Hierom, do expound it.

[h] He which is now in authority, and ruleth all, to wit, the Roman empire.

[8] That wickedneſs ſhall at length be detected by the word of the Lord, and ſhall utterly be aboliſhed by Chriſt's coming.

[i] Word for word, that lawleſs fellow, that is to ſay, he that ſhall tread God's law clean under foot.

A. D. 54. vealed, * whom the Lord ſhall [k] conſume with the [l] Spirit of his mouth, and ſhall aboliſh with the brightneſs of his coming:

* Iſa. 11.4.

9 [9] Even him whoſe coming is by the effectual working of Satan, with all power, and ſigns, and [m] lying wonders,

10 And in all deceivableneſs of unrighteouſneſs among them that periſh, becauſe they received not the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved.

11 And therefore God ſhall ſend them [n] ſtrong deluſion, that they ſhould believe lyes,

12 That all they might be damned which believed not the truth, but [o] had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs.

13 [10] But we ought to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, becauſe that God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſalvation, through [p] ſanctification of the Spirit, and the [q] faith of truth,

14 Whereunto he called you by our [r] goſpel, to obtain the glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

15 [11] Therefore, brethren, ſtand faſt, and keep the inſtructions, which ye have been taught, either by word, or by our epiſtle.

16 Now the ſame Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, and our God, even the Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlaſting conſolation and good hope through grace, 17 Comfort your hearts, and ſtabliſh you in every word and good work.

CHAP. III.

1 He deſireth them to further the preaching of the goſpel with their prayers, 6 and to withdraw themſelves from thoſe, who through idleneſs 11 and curioſity, pervert good order: whom he excludeth from the company of the faithful.

* Epheſ. 6. 19. Col. 4. 3.

FUrthermore, [1] brethren, * pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free paſſage and be glorified, even as it is with you,

2 And that we may be delivered from [a] unreaſonable and evil men: [2] for all men have not faith.

3 But the Lord is faithful, which will ſtabliſh you, and keep you from [b] evil.

4 [3] And we are perſuaded of you through the Lord, that ye both do, and will do the things which we warn you of.

5 [4] And the Lord guide your hearts to the love of God, and the waiting for of Chriſt.

6 [5] We warn you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye withdraw yourſelves from every brother that walketh inordinately, and not after the inſtruction which he received of us:

7 [6] For ye yourſelves know, * how ye ought to follow us: * for we behaved not ourſelves inordinately among you,

* 1 Cor. 11. 1. * 1 Theſ. 4. 11.

8 Neither took we bread of any man for nought: but we wrought with labour and travail night and day, becauſe we would not be chargeable to any of you.

9 Not becauſe we have not authority, but that we might make ourſelves an enſample unto you to follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, this we warned you of, that if there were any which would not work, that he ſhould [c] not eat.

11 For we hear, that there are ſome which walk among [7] you inordinately, and work not at all, [8] but are buſy bodies.

12 [9] Therefore them that are ſuch, we warn and exhort by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that they work with quietneſs, and eat their own bread.

13 [10] And ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing.

14 [11] If any man obey not this our ſaying in this

---

[k] Bring to nought.

[l] With his word, for the true miniſters of the word are as a mouth, whereby the Lord breatheth out that mighty and everlaſting word, which ſhall break his enemies in ſunder, as it were an iron rod.

[9] He foretelleth that Satan will beſtow all his might and power, and uſe all falſe miracles that he can to eſtabliſh that ſeat, and that with great ſucceſs, becauſe the wickedneſs of the world doth ſo deſerve it: yet ſo, that only the unfaithful ſhall periſh through his deceit.

[m] Which are partly falſe, and partly wrought to eſtabliſh a falſhood.

[n] A moſt mighty working to deceive them.

[o] They liked lyes ſo well, that they had pleaſure in them, which is the greateſt madneſs that may be.

[10] The elect ſhall ſtand ſtedfaſt and ſafe from all their miſchiefs. Now election is known by theſe teſtimonies: faith is gathered by ſanctification: faith, by that we accord unto the truth: truth, by calling, through the preaching of the goſpel: from whence we come at length to a certain hope of glorification.

[p] To ſanctify you.

[q] Faith which layeth hold not upon lyes, but upon the truth of God, which is the goſpel.

[r] By our preaching.

[11] The concluſion: It remaineth then that we continue in the doctrine which was delivered unto us by the mouth and writings of the apoſtles, through that free good will of God, which comforteth us with an invincible hope, and alſo in all godlineſs our whole life long.

[1] He addeth now conſequently according to his manner, divers admonitions: the firſt of them is, that they make prayers for the increaſe and free paſſage of the goſpel, and for the ſafety of the faithful miniſters of the ſame.

[a] Which have no care of their duty.

[2] It is no marvel that the goſpel is hated of ſo many, ſeeing that faith is a rare gift of God. Notwithſtanding the church ſhall never be deſtroyed by the multitude of the wicked, becauſe it is grounded and ſtayed upon the faithful promiſe of God.

[b] From Satan's ſnares, or from evil.

[3] The ſecond admonition is, that they follow always the doctrine of the apoſtles as a rule for their life.

[4] Thirdly, he diligently and earneſtly admoniſheth them of two things which are given us by the only grace of God, to wit, of charity, and a watchful mind to the coming of Chriſt.

[5] Fourthly, he ſaith, that idle and lazy perſons ought not to be relieved of the church, nay, that they are not to be ſuffered.

[6] Leſt he might ſeem to deal hardly with them, he ſetteth forth himſelf for an example, who beſides his travail in preaching, laboured with his hands, which he ſaith he was not ſimply bound to do.

[c] What ſhall we do then with thoſe idle bellied monks, and ſacrificing prieſts? A monk (ſaith Socrates, book 8. of the Tripartite hiſtory) which worketh not with his hands, is like a thief.

[7] How great a fault idleneſs is, he declareth by that, that God created no man in vain, or to no purpoſe, neither is there any to whom he hath not allotted, as it were, a certain ſtanding and room. Whereupon it followeth, that the order which God hath appointed, is troubled by the idle, yea broken, which is great ſin and wickedneſs.

[8] He reprehendeth a vice, which is joined with the former, whereupon follow an infinite ſort of miſchiefs: to wit, that there are none more buſy in other men's matters, than they which neglect their own.

[9] The Lord commandeth and the apoſtles pray in the name of Chriſt, firſt, that no man be idle, and next, that every man do quietly and carefully ſee to do his duty in that office and calling wherein the Lord hath placed him.

[10] We muſt take heed, that ſome men's unworthineſs cauſe us not to be ſlacker in well doing.

[11] Excommunication is a puniſhment for the obſtinate, this letter, note him, and have no [12] company with him, [13] that he may be aſhamed:

15 [14] Yet count him not as an enemy, but admoniſh him as a brother.

16 [15] Now the Lord himſelf of peace give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.

17 [16] The ſalutation of me Paul, with mine own hand, which is the token in every epiſtle: ſo I write.

18 The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

[12] We muſt have no familiarity nor fellowſhip with the excommunicate.

[13] The end of excommunication is not the deſtruction, but the ſalvation of the ſinner, that at leaſt through ſhame he may be driven to repentance.

[14] We muſt ſo eſchew familiarity with the excommunicate, that we diligently ſeek all occaſions and means that may be, to bring them again into the right way.

[15] Prayers are the ſeals of all exhortations.

[16] The apoſtle ſubſcribeth his letter with his own hand, that falſe letters might not be brought and put in place of true.

The Firſt Epiſtle of PAUL to TIMOTHY.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 65.

Setting forth a perfect pattern of a true paſtor, whoſe office eſpecially conſiſteth in teaching, 4 he warneth him that vain queſtions ſet apart, he teach thoſe things, 5 which further charity and faith: 12 and that his authority be not condemned, 14 he ſheweth what an one he is made through the grace of God.

‡ Or, ordinance.

PAUL [1] an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the ‡ commandment of God our Saviour, and of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt our hope,

2 Unto Timothy my natural ſon in the faith: Grace, [a] mercy, and peace from God our Father, and from Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.

3 [2] As I beſought thee to abide ſtill in Epheſus, when I departed into Macedonia, ſo do, that thou mayeſt warn ſome, that they teach none other doctrine,

4 [3] Neither that they give heed to fables and [b] genealogies which are endleſs, which breed queſtions rather than godly edifying which is by faith.

* Rom. 13. 10.

5 [4] For * the end of the [c] commandment is [d] love out of a pure heart, and of a good conſcience, and of faith unfeigned:

A. D. 65.

6 [5] From the which things ſome have erred, and have turned unto vain jangling.

7 [6] They would be doctors of the law, and yet underſtand not what they ſpeak, neither whereof they affirm.

8 [7] And we know, that the law is good, if a man uſe it lawfully.

9 [8] Knowing this, that the law is not given unto a [e] righteous man, but unto the lawleſs and diſobedient, to the ungodly and to [f] ſinners, to the unholy and to the prophane, to murderers of fathers and mothers, to manſlayers,

10 To whoremongers, to buggerers, to menſtealers, to lyars, to the perjured, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to wholeſome doctrine,

11 [9] Which is according to the glorious goſpel of the bleſſed God, [10] which is committed unto me.

12 [11] Therefore I thank him which hath made me [g] ſtrong, that is, Chriſt Jeſus our Lord: for he counted me faithful, and put me in his ſervice:

13 When before I was a [h] blaſphemer, and a perſecutor,

---

[1] Firſt of all, he avoucheth his own free vocation and alſo Timothy's, that the one might be confirmed by the other: and therewithal he declareth the ſum of the apoſtolical doctrine, to wit, the mercy of God in Chriſt Jeſus, apprehended by faith, the end whereof is yet hoped for.

[a] There is as much difference betwixt mercy and grace, as is betwixt the effect and the cauſe: for grace is that free good will of God, whereby he choſe us in Chriſt, and mercy is that free juſtification which followeth it.

[2] This whole epiſtle conſiſteth in admonitions, wherein all the duties of a faithful paſtor are lively ſet out: and the firſt admonition is this, that no innovation be either made in the apoſtles doctrine itſelf, or in the manner of teaching it.

[3] The doctrine is corrupted not only by falſe opinions, but alſo by vain and curious ſpeculations: the declaration and utterance whereof can nothing help our faith.

[b] He noteth out one kind of vain queſtions.

[4] The ſecond admonition is, that the right uſe and practice of the doctrine muſt be joined with the doctrine. And that conſiſteth in pure charity, and a good conſcience, and true faith.

[c] Of the law.

[d] There is neither love without a good conſcience, nor a good conſcience without faith, nor faith without the word of God.

[5] That which he ſpoke before generally of vain and curious controverſies, he applieth to them which, pretending zeal of the law, dwelled upon outward things, and never made an end of babbling of fooliſh trifles.

[6] There are none more unlearned, and more impudent in uſurping the name of holineſs, than fooliſh ſophiſtical babblers.

[7] The taking away of an objection: He condemneth not the law, but requireth the right uſe and practice of it.

[8] He indeed eſcapeth the curſe of the law, and therefore doth not abhor it, who fleeing and eſchewing thoſe things which the law condemneth, giveth himſelf with all his heart, to obſerve it: and not he that maketh a vain babbling of outward and curious matters.

[e] And ſuch a one is he, whom the Lord hath endued with true doctrine, and with the Holy Ghoſt.

[f] To ſuch as make an art, as it were, of ſinning.

[9] He ſetteth againſt fond and vain babbling, not only the law, but the goſpel alſo, which condemneth not, but greatly commendeth the wholſome doctrine contained in the commandments of God, and therefore he calleth it a glorious goſpel, and the goſpel of the bleſſed God, the virtue whereof theſe babblers knew not.

[10] A reaſon why neither any other goſpel is to be taught than he hath taught in the church, neither after any other ſort, becauſe there is no other goſpel beſide that which God committed to him.

[11] He maintaineth of neceſſity his apoſtleſhip againſt ſome that did carp at his former life, debaſing himſelf even to hell, to advance Chriſt's only mercy, wherewith he aboliſhed all thoſe his former doings.

[g] Which gave me ſtrength, not only when I had no will to do well, but alſo when I was wholly given to evil.

[h] Theſe are the preparative works which Paul braggeth of.

A. D. 65. perſecutor, and an oppreſſor: but I was received to mercy: for I did it ignorantly through unbelief.

14 But the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant [12] with faith and love, which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

15 [13] This is a [i] true ſaying, and by all means * Matt. 9. 13. Mark 2. 17. worthy to be received, that * Chriſt Jeſus came into the world to ſave ſinners, of whom I am chief.

16 Notwithſtanding for this cauſe was I received to mercy, that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould firſt ſhew on me all long ſuffering, unto the enſample of them which ſhall in time to come believe in him unto eternal life.

17 [14] Now unto the King everlaſting, immortal, inviſible, unto God [k] only wiſe, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18 [15] This commandment commit I unto thee, ſon Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before upon thee, that thou [l] by them ſhouldeſt fight a good fight.

19 Having faith [m] and a good conſcience, [16] which ſome have put away, and as concerning faith have made ſhipwreck.

20 Of whom is Hymeneus, and Alexander, * 1 Cor. 5. 5. * [17] whom I have [n] delivered unto Satan, that they might [o] learn not to blaſpheme.

CHAP. II.

1 He exhorteth them to make public prayers for all men, 4, 5 and that for two cauſes: 8 And therefore he willeth all men in all places to pray. 9 And declareth in what apparel, 11 and with what modeſty, women ought to behave themſelves in holy aſſemblies.

I [1] Exhort therefore, that firſt of all ſupplications, prayers, interceſſions, and giving of thanks be made for all men,

2 For kings, and for all that are in authority, [2] that we may lead a quiet and a peaceable life, in all godlineſs and [a] honeſty:

3 [3] For this is good and acceptable in the ſight of God our Saviour,

4 Who will that all men ſhall be ſaved, and come unto the acknowledging of the truth.

5 [4] For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and man, which is the [b] man Chriſt Jeſus,

6 Who gave himſelf a ranſom for all men, [5] to be that teſtimony in due time.

7 * Whereunto I am ordained a preacher and an apoſtle (I ſpeak the truth in Chriſt, and lye not) even a teacher of the Gentiles in [c] faith and verity. * 2 Tim. 1. 11.

8 [6] I will therefore that the men pray, every where [d] lifting up pure hands without [e] wrath, or [f] doubting.

9 * [7] Likewiſe alſo the women, that they array themſelves in comely apparel, with ſhamefacedneſs and modeſty, not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or coſtly apparel, * 1 Pet. 3. 3.

10 But (as becometh women that profeſs the fear of God) with good works.

11 Let the women learn in ſilence with all ſubjection.

12 * I permit not a woman to teach, [8] neither to uſurp authority over the man, but to be in ſilence: * 1 Cor. 14. 34.

---

[12] He proveth this change by the effects, for that, that he that was a profane man, is become a believer: and he that did moſt outrageouſly perſecute Chriſt, burneth now in love toward him.

[13] He turneth the reproach of the adverſaries upon their own head, ſhewing that this ſingular example of the goodneſs of God, redoundeth to the commodity of the whole church.

[i] Worthy to be believed.

[14] He breaketh out into an exclamation, even for very zeal of mind, for that he cannot ſatisfy himſelf in amplifying the grace of God.

[k] Look John 17. 3.

[15] The concluſion of both the former fatherly admonitions, to wit, that Timothy ſtriving manfully againſt all lets, being called to the miniſtry according to many prophecies which went before of him, ſhould both maintain the doctrine which he had received, and keep alſo a good conſcience.

[l] By the help of them.

[m] Wholſome and ſound doctrine.

[16] Whoſoever keep not a good conſcience, do loſe alſo by little and little the gift of underſtanding: which he proveth by two moſt lamentable examples.

[17] Such as fall from God and his religion, are not to be ſuffered in the church, but rather ought to be excommunicated.

[n] Caſt out of the church, and ſo delivered them to Satan.

[o] That by their ſmart they might learn what it is to blaſpheme.

[1] Having diſpatched thoſe things which pertain to doctrine, he ſpeaketh now in the ſecond place of the other part of the miniſtry of the word, to wit, of public prayers. And firſt of all, declaring this queſtion, for whom we ought to pray: he teacheth that we muſt pray for all men, and eſpecially for all manner of magiſtrates, which thing was at that time ſomewhat doubted of, ſeeing that kings, yea, and the moſt part of magiſtrates, were at that time enemies of the church.

[2] An argument taken of the end: to wit, becauſe that magiſtrates are appointed to this end, that men might peaceably and quietly live in all godlineſs and honeſty, and therefore muſt we commend them eſpecially to God, that they may faithfully execute ſo neceſſary an office.

[a] This word containeth all kind of duty, which is to be uſed amongſt men in all their affairs.

[3] Another argument, why churches or congregations ought to pray for all men, wtihout any difference of nation, kind, age, or order: to wit, becauſe the Lord by calling of all ſorts, yea ſometimes thoſe that are greateſt enemies to the goſpel, will have his church gathered together after this ſort, and therefore prayers to be made for all.

[4] God ſhould not elſe be manifeſted to be the only God of all men, unleſs he ſhould ſhew his goodneſs in ſaving of all ſorts of men: neither ſhould Chriſt be ſeen to be the only Mediator between God and all ſorts of men, by having taken upon him that nature of man which is common to all men, unleſs he had ſatisfied for all ſorts of men, and made interceſſion for all.

[b] Chriſt Jeſus which was made man.

[5] A confirmation, becauſe that even to the Gentiles is the ſecret of ſalvation now opened and made manifeſt, the apoſtle himſelf being appointed properly to this office, which he doth faithfully and ſincerely execute.

[c] Faithfully and ſincerely: and by faith, he meaneth wholſome and ſound doctrine; and by truth, an upright and ſincere handling of it.

[6] He hath ſpoken of the perſons for whom we muſt pray: and now he teacheth that the difference of places is taken away: for in times paſt, one only nation, and in one certain place, came together to public ſervice: but now churches or congregations are gathered together every where (orderly and decently), and men come together to ſerve God publicly with common prayer; neither muſt we ſtrive for the nation, or for the purification of the body, or for the place, but for the mind, to have it clean from all offence, and full of ſure truſt and confidence.

[d] He putteth the ſign for the thing itſelf, the lifting up of hands for the calling upon God.

[e] Without thoſe griefs and offences of the mind, which hinder us from calling upon God with a good conſcience.

[f] Doubting, which is againſt faith, James 1. 6.

[7] Thirdly, he appointeth women to learn in the public aſſemblies with ſilence and modeſty, being comely apparelled, without any riot or exceſs in their apparel.

[8] The firſt argument, why it is not lawful for women to teach in the congregation, becauſe by this means, they ſhould be placed above men, for they ſhould be their maſters: which is againſt God's ordinance.

A. D. 65.

13 [9] For * Adam was firſt formed, then Eve. *Gen. 1. 27. and 2. 7. 21.

14 * [10] And Adam was not [g] deceived, but the woman was deceived, and was in the tranſgreſſion. * Gen. 3. 6.

15 [11] Notwithſtanding, through bearing of children ſhe ſhall be ſaved, if they continue in faith, and love, and holineſs with modeſty.

CHAP. III.

He ſetteth out biſhops, 8 and Chriſtian deacons, with their wives, 12 children and family: 15 he calleth the church the houſe of God.

THIS [1] is a true ſaying, [2] If any man [a] deſire the office of a biſhop, he deſireth a worthy work.

2 * A biſhop therefore muſt be unreproveable, the huſband of [b] one wife, watching, temperate, modeſt, harbourous, apt to teach, * Tit. 2. 6.

3 Not [c] given to wine, no ſtriker, not given to filthy lucre, but gentle, no fighter, not covetous,

4 One that can rule his own houſe honeſtly, having children under obedience with all honeſty:

5 For if any cannot rule his own houſe, how ſhall he care for the church of God?

6 He may not be a young ſcholar, leſt he being puffed up fall into the [d] condemnation of the devil.

7 He muſt alſo be well reported of, even of them, which are without, leſt he fall into rebuke, and the ſnare of the devil.

8 [3] Likewiſe muſt [e] deacons be grave, not double tongued, not given unto much wine, neither to filthy lucre:

9 * Having the [f] myſtery of the faith in pure conſcience. A. D. 65. * Ch. 1. 19.

10 And let them firſt be proved: then let them miniſter, if they be found blameleſs.

11 [4] Likewiſe their wives muſt be honeſt, not evil ſpeakers, but ſober, and faithful in all things.

12 [5] Let the deacons be the huſbands of one wife, and ſuch as can rule their children well, and their own houſholds.

13 For they that have miniſtered well, get themſelves a good [g] degree, and [h] great liberty in the faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

14 [6] Theſe things write I unto thee, truſting to come very ſhortly unto thee.

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayeſt yet know how thou oughteſt to behave thyſelf in the [7] houſe of God, which is the church of the living God, the [i] pillar and ground of truth,

16 [8] And without controverſy, great is the myſtery of godlineſs, which is, God is manifeſted in the fleſh, [k] juſtified in the Spirit, ſeen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, and received up in glory.

CHAP. IV.

1 He condemneth as well falſe doctrines 3 of marriage and the choice of meats, 7 as alſo prophane fables: 8 and commendeth the godly exerciſe, 13 and the daily reading of the ſcripture.

NOW the [1] Spirit ſpeaketh evidently, that in the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the [a] faith, and ſhall give heed unto ſpirits of error, and doctrines of devils:

2 [2] Which ſpeak lyes through [b] hypocriſy, and have

---

[9] He proveth this ordinance of God, whereby the woman is ſubject to man, firſt by that that God made the woman after man, for man's ſake.

[10] Then, becauſe that after ſin, God enjoined the woman this puniſhment, for that the man was deceived by her.

[g] Adam was deceived, but through his wife's means, and therefore ſhe is worthily for this cauſe ſubject to her huſband, and ought to be.

[11] He addeth a comfort by the way, that their ſubjection hindereth not but that women may be ſaved as well as men, if they behave themſelves in thoſe burdens of marriage holily and modeſtly, with faith and charity.

[1] Having diſpatched the treatiſe, as well of doctrine and of the manner of handling of it, as alſo of public prayer, he now in the third place cometh to the perſons themſelves, ſpeaking firſt of paſtors, and afterward of deacons, and he uſeth a preface, that the church may know that there be certain and ſure rules.

[2] A biſhoprick, or the miniſtry of the word, is not an idle dignity, but a work, and that an excellent work, and therefore a biſhop muſt be furniſhed with many virtues both at home and abroad. Wherefore it is requiſite, before he be choſen, to examine well his learning, his gifts, and ableneſs, and his life.

[a] He ſpeaketh not here of ambitious ſeeking, than the which there cannot be a worſe fault in the church, but generally of the mind and diſpoſition of man, framed and diſpoſed to help and edify the church of God, when and whereſoever it ſhall pleaſe the Lord.

[b] Therefore he that ſhutteth out married men from the office of biſhops, only becauſe they are married, is Antichriſt.

[c] A common tippler, and one that will ſit by it.

[d] Leſt by reaſon that he is advanced to that degree, he take occaſion to be proud, which will undo him, and ſo he fall into the ſame condemnation that the devil himſelf is fallen into.

[3] Likewiſe the deacons muſt firſt be proved, that there may be a good trial of their honeſty, truth, ſobriety, mind void of covetouſneſs, that they are well inſtructed in the doctrine of faith, and, to be ſhort, of their good conſcience and integrity.

[e] Theſe are they that had to ſee to the poor.

[f] The doctrine of the goſpel, which is a myſtery indeed: for fleſh and blood do not reveal it.

[4] Regard muſt be had alſo to the paſtors and deacons wives.

[5] They that have more wives than one at one time, muſt neither be called to be miniſters, nor to be deacons.

[g] Honour and eſtimation.

[h] Bold and aſſured confidence without fear.

[6] Paul purpoſing to add many peculiar things pertaining to the daily office of a paſtor, ſpeaketh firſt a word or two concerning his coming to Timothy, that he ſhould be ſo much the more careful, leſt at his coming he might be reproved of negligence.

[7] The paſtor hath always to think, how that he is occupied in the houſe of the living God, wherein the treaſure of the truth is kept

[i] To wit, in reſpect of men: for the church reſteth upon that corner ſtone, Chriſt, and is the preſerver of the truth, but not the mother.

[8] There is nothing more excellent than this truth, whereof the church is the keeper and preſerver here among men, the miniſtry of the word being appointed to that end and purpoſe: for it teacheth us the greateſt matters that may be thought of, to wit, that God is become viſible in the perſon of Chriſt, by taking our nature upon him, whoſe majeſty, notwithſtanding in ſo great weakneſs, was manifeſted many ways, inſomuch that the ſight of it pierced the very angels, and to conclude, he being preached unto the Gentiles, was received of them, and is now placed above in glory unſpeakable.

[k] The power of the Godhead ſhewed itſelf ſo marvellouſly in that weak fleſh of Chriſt, that though he were a weak man, yet all the world knoweth he was and is God.

[1] He ſetteth againſt that true doctrine, falſe opinions, which he foretelleth, that certain which ſhall fall away from God and his religion, ſhall bring in by the ſuggeſtion of Satan, and ſo that a great number ſhall give ear to them.

[a] From the true doctrine of God.

[2] Although heretics counterfeit holineſs never ſo much, yet have they no conſcience.

[b] For they will, as it were, practiſe the art of diſguiſed perſons and players, that we may not think they will lie lurking in ſome one corner, or keep any reſemblance of ſhamefacedneſs.

have their [c] conſciences burned with an hot iron,

3 [3] Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abſtain from meats [4] which God hath created [5] to be received [6] with giving thanks of them which believe and know the truth.

4 [7] For every creature of God is good, and nothing ought to be refuſed, if it be received with thankſgiving.

5 [8] For it is [d] ſanctified by the [e] word of God, and prayer.

6 [9] If thou put the brethren in remembrance of theſe things, thou ſhalt be a good miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt, which haſt been nouriſhed up in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, which thou haſt continually [f] followed.

7 [10] But caſt away prophane and old wives fables, [11] and exerciſe thyſelf unto [g] godlineſs.

8 [12] For bodily exerciſe profiteth little: but godlineſs is profitable unto all things, which hath the promiſe of the life preſent, and of that that is to come.

9 [13] This is a true ſaying, and by all means worthy to be received.

10 For therefore we labour and are rebuked, becauſe we truſt in the living God, which is the Saviour of all men, ſpecially of thoſe that believe.

11 Theſe things warn and teach.

12 [14] Let no man deſpiſe thy youth, but be unto them that believe, an enſample, in word, in converſation, in love, in ſpirit, in faith and in pureneſs.

13 [15] Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, and to doctrine.

14 Deſpiſe not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy with the laying on of the hands of the company of the eldership.

15 Theſe things exerciſe, and give thyſelf unto them, that it may be ſeen how thou profiteſt among all men.

16 Take heed unto thyſelf, and unto learning: continue therein: for in doing this thou ſhalt both [h] ſave thyſelf, and them that hear thee.

CHAP. V.

1 Having ſet down a manner how to rebuke all degrees, 5 he intreateth of widows, who then were choſen for the ſervice of the church: 17 then he cometh to elders, 23 and ſpeaketh ſomewhat touching the health of the body.

REBUKE [1] not an elder, but exhort him as a father, and the younger men as brethren,

2 The elder women as mothers, the younger as ſiſters, with all pureneſs.

3 [2] [a] Honour widows, which are widows indeed.

4 [3] But if any widow have children, or nephews, let them learn firſt to ſhew godlineſs [4] toward their own houſe, and [5] to recompenſe their kindred: [6] for that is an honeſt thing, and acceptable before God.

5 [7] And ſhe that is a widow indeed, and left alone, truſteth in God, and continueth in ſupplications and prayers night and day.

6 [8] But ſhe that liveth in pleaſure, is dead while ſhe liveth.

7 Theſe

---

[c] Whoſe conſcience waxed ſo hard, that there grew an hard fleſhineſs over it, and ſo became to have a canker in it, and now at length required of very neceſſity to be burned with a hot iron.

[3] He ſetteth down two kinds of this falſe doctrine, to wit, the law of ſole life, and difference of meats.

[4] He proveth that he juſtly called ſuch doctrines deviliſh, firſt, becauſe the teachers of them make laws of things which are not their own: for have they created the meats?

[5] Secondly, becauſe they overthrow, with their decrees, the end whereof they were created of God, to wit, that we ſhould uſe them.

[6] Thirdly, for that by this means they rob God of his glory, who will be honoured in the uſe of them. And herewithal, the apoſtle declareth, that we muſt uſe the liberality of God, ſoberly, and with a good conſcience.

[7] He ſetteth an apoſtolical rule, for taking away the difference of meats, againſt that falſe doctrine.

[8] He uſeth God's benefits rightly, which acknowledgeth the giver of them by his word, and calleth upon him.

[d] It is ſo made pure and holy in reſpect of us, ſo that we may uſe it with a good conſcience, as received at the Lord's hands.

[e] We confeſs and acknowledge that God is the maker and giver of thoſe creatures which we uſe. Secondly, that we are of the number of thoſe, who through Chriſt's benefit have recovered that right over all creatures, which Adam loſt by his fall. Thirdly, by our prayers we crave of the Lord that we may uſe thoſe meats with a good conſcience, which we receive at his hands. Fourthly, we make an end of our eating and drinking with thankſgiving and prayer: and ſo are our meats ſanctified to us.

[9] The concluſion, with an exhortation to Timothy, to propound theſe things diligently to the churches, which he had ſucked of the apoſtle, even in a manner from the teat.

[f] Never departing from the ſide of it.

[10] He ſetteth again true doctrine, not only againſt that falſe and apoſtatical doctrine, but alſo againſt all vain and curious ſubtilties,

[11] It is not only requiſite that the miniſter of the word be ſound in doctrine, but alſo that his life be godly and religious.

[g] In the true ſerving of God.

[12] Godlineſs conſiſteth in ſpiritual exerciſe, and not in outward auſteerneſs of life, which though it be ſomething to be accounted of, if it be rightly uſed, yet it is in no wiſe comparable with godlineſs, for it profiteth not of itſelf, but through the benefit of another; but this hath the promiſe both of the life preſent, and of that that is to come.

[13] He goeth a little from his matter, and ſheweth that they which give themſelves to godlineſs, although they are afflicted and reproached, are notwithſtanding not to be accounted miſerable, as other men are, becauſe they are not afflicted for that cauſe that other men are, and the end of them both is far different one from the other. For how can God forſake his, which is bountiful, even toward his enemies? And he willeth that this doctrine be well beaten into their heads.

[14] Now he returneth to that exhortation, ſhewing which are the true virtues of a paſtor, whereby he may come to be reverenced, although he be but young, to wit, ſuch ſpeech and life as are witneſſes of charity, zeal, faith, and purity: but here is no mention made of the croſier ſtaff, ring, clock, and ſuch other fooliſh and childiſh toys.

[15] The private exerciſe of paſtors is continual reading of the ſcriptures, whereout they may draw water of wholſome doctrine and exhortation, both to themſelves and to others.

[h] Faith is by hearing, and hearing by preaching: and therefore the miniſters of the word are ſo ſaid to ſave themſelves and others, for that in them the Lord hath put the word of reconcilation.

[1] Of keeping meaſure in private reprehenſions, according to the degrees of ages and kinds.

[2] The apoſtle giveth theſe rules touching the care of widows.

[a] Have care of thoſe widows which have need of help.

[3] Widows children and nephews muſt take care for their parents according to their ability.

[4] The firſt reaſon, becauſe that that which they beſtow upon theirs, they beſtow it upon themſelves.

[5] Another, becauſe nature itſelf teacheth us to recompenſe our parents.

[6] The third: becauſe this dutifulneſs pleaſeth God.

[7] The ſecond rule. Let the church have care of ſuch as are widows indeed, that is to ſay, ſuch as are poor and deſtitute of help of their own friends, and live godly and religiouſly.

[8] The third rule: Let widows that live in pleaſure, and neglect the care of their own family, be holden and accounted as fallers away from God and his religion, and worſe than very infidels.

A. D. 65. 7 Theſe things therefore warn them of, that they may be blameleſs.

8 If there be any that provideth not for his own, and namely for them of his houſhold, he denieth the faith, and is worſe than an infidel.

9 [9] Let not a widow be taken into the number under threeſcore years old, that hath been the wife of [b] one huſband,

10 And well reported of for good works: if ſhe have nouriſhed her children, if ſhe have lodged the ſtrangers, if ſhe have [c] waſhed the ſaints feet, if ſhe have miniſtered unto them which were in adverſity, if ſhe were continually given unto every good work.

11 [10] But [d] refuſe the younger widows: for when they have begun to wax wanton againſt Chriſt, they will marry,

12 Having damnation, becauſe they have broken the firſt faith.

13 [11] And likewiſe alſo being idle, they learn to go about from houſe to houſe: yea, they are not only idle, but alſo prattlers and buſy-bodies, ſpeaking things which are not comely.

14 [12] I will therefore that the younger women marry, and bear children, and govern the houſe, and give none occaſion to the adverſary to ſpeak evil.

15 For certain are already turned back after Satan.

16 [13] If any faithful man or faithful woman have widows, let them miniſter unto them, and let not the church be charged, that there may be ſufficient for them that are widows in deed.

17 ¶ [14] The elders that rule well, let them be had in [e] double honour, [f] ſpecially they which labour in the word and doctrine.

Deut.25.4. Cor. 9. 9. 18 For the ſcripture ſaith, * Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn: and, * The labourer is worthy of his wages. A. D. 65. * Matt. 10. 10. Luke 10.7.

19 [15] Againſt an elder receive none accuſation, but under two or three witneſſes.

20 [16] Them that ſin, rebuke openly, that the reſt alſo may fear.

21 ¶ * [17] I charge thee before God and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the elect angels, that thou obſerve theſe things, without preferring one before another, and do nothing partially. * Ch. 6. 13.

22 [18] Lay hands [g] ſuddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's ſins: keep thyſelf pure.

23 [19] Drink no longer water, but uſe a little wine for thy ſtomach's ſake, and thine often infirmities.

24 [20] Some men's ſins are open beforehand, and go before unto judgment: but ſome men's follow after.

25 [21] Likewiſe alſo the good works are manifeſt beforehand, and they that are otherwiſe, cannot be hid.

CHAP. VI.

1 He ſheweth the duty of ſervants: 10 and what a miſchievous evil covetouſneſs is: 13 and having ſpoken ſomewhat of rich men, he once again forbiddeth Timothy 20 to cumber himſelf with vain babblings.

LET [1] as many ſervants as are under the yoke, count their maſters worthy of all honour, [2] that the name of God, and his doctrine, be not evil ſpoken of.

2 [3] And they which have believing maſters let them not deſpiſe them, becauſe they are brethren: but rather do ſervice, becauſe they are faithful, and beloved, and [a] partakers of the benefit. [4] Theſe things teach and exhort.

---

[9] The fourth rule; Let none under threeſcore years old, be taken into the number of widows, to ſerve the congregations or churches, and ſuch as are free from all reproach of unchaſtity, and are well reported of, for their diligence, charity, and integrity.

[b] That hath had no more huſbands, but one at one time.

[c] This is ſpoken in reſpect of the manners of thoſe countries.

[10] The firſt reaſon, why younger widows are not to be admitted to this miniſtry, to wit, becauſe for the lightneſs of their age, they will at length ſhake off the burden that Chriſt had laid upon them, and think rather upon marrying again: and ſo will forſake the miniſtry whereunto they had bound themſelves.

[d] Take them not into the college of widows.

[11] Another reaſon: becauſe they are for the moſt part prattlers and buſy-bodies, and gadders up and down, neglecting their charge and duty.

[12] The fifth rule: Let younger widows marry, and govern their houſes godly.

[13] The ſixth rule: Let the faithful help their widows at their own charges as much as they can, and let not the congregation be burdened with theſe expences.

[14] Now he giveth rules, and ſheweth how he ought to behave himſelf with the elders, that is to ſay, with the paſtors, and ſuch as have the governance in the diſcipline of the church, which is preſident of their company. The firſt rule: Let the church or congregation ſee unto this eſpecially, as God himſelf hath commanded that the elders that do their duty well, be honeſtly maintained.

[e] We muſt be more careful for them than for the reſt.

[f] There were two kinds of elders, the one attended upon the government only, and looked to the manners of the congregation, the other did beſide that attend upon preaching and prayers, to and for the congregation.

[15] The ſecond rule: Let no accuſation be admitted againſt an elder, but under two or three witneſſes.

[16] The third rule: Let the elders ſo convicted, be rebuked openly, that they may be an example to others.

[17] The fourth rule: Let ſincerity be uſed without any prejudice or reſpect of perſons in eccleſiaſtical proceedings (eſpecially againſt the elders) becauſe God himſelf is there preſent, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt with a multitude of angels.

[18] The fifth rule: Let the miniſter lay hands ſuddenly on no man. Let him not be faulty herein, either by favouring any man's folly, or perverſe affection: if aught be done otherwiſe than well of his fellows, let him keep his conſcience pure.

[g] As much as in thee lieth, do not raſhly admit any whatſoever to any eccleſiaſtical function.

[19] The ſixth rule: Let the elders have indifferent conſideration of their health, in the manner of their diet.

[20] Becauſe hypocrites ſometimes creep into the miniſtry, although there be never ſo great diligence uſed, the apoſtle willeth the paſtors not to be troubled therefore, or ſlack any whit of their diligence in trying and examining, becauſe the Lord hath appointed a time to diſcover the faults of ſuch men, and it is our parts to take heed that we offend not therein.

[21] Another comfort belonging to them, which ſometimes are ſlandered and miſreported of.

[1] He addeth alſo rules for the ſervants duty towards their maſters: whereupon no doubt there were many queſtions then moved by them, which took occaſion by the goſpel to trouble the common ſtate. And this is the firſt rule: Let ſervants that are come to the faith, and have infidels to their maſters, ſerve them notwithſtanding with great fidelity.

[2] The reaſon, leſt God ſhould ſeem by the doctrine of the goſpel to ſtir up men to rebellion and all wickedneſs.

[3] The ſecond rule: Let not ſervants that are come to the faith, and have alſo maſters of the ſame profeſſion and religion, abuſe the name of brotherhood, but let them ſo much the rather obey them.

[a] Let this be ſufficient, that as touching thoſe things which pertain to everlaſting life, they are partakers of the ſame good will and love of God, as their maſters themſelves are.

[4] A general concluſion, that theſe things ought not only to be ſimply taught, but muſt with exhortations be diligently beaten into their heads.

A. D. 65.

3 [5] If any man teach otherwiſe, and conſenteth not to the wholeſome words of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to the doctrine which is according to godlineſs,

4 He is puft up and knoweth nothing, but doteth about queſtions and [b] ſtrife of words, whereof cometh envy, ſtrife, railings, evil ſurmiſings,

5 Froward [c] diſputations of men of corrupt minds and deſtitute of the truth, which think that gain is godlineſs: from ſuch ſeparate thyſelf.

6 [6] But godlineſs is great gain, if a man be content with that he hath.

7 [7] For we brought nothing into the world, and it is certain, that we can carry nothing out.

8 Therefore when we have food and raiment, let us therewith be content.

9 [8] For they that will be rich, fall into temptation and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noiſome luſts, which drown men in perdition and deſtruction.

10 For the deſire of money is the root of all evil, which while ſome luſted after, they erred from the faith, and [d] pierced themſelves through with many ſorrows.

11 [9] But thou, O [e] man of God, flee theſe things, and follow after righteouſneſs, godlineſs, faith, love, patience, and meekneſs.

12 Fight the good fight of faith: lay hold of eternal life, whereunto thou art alſo called, and haſt profeſſed a good profeſſion before many witneſſes.

¶ The firſt epiſtle to Timothy, written from Laodicea, which is the chiefeſt city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

---

[5] He condemneth ſeverely, and excommunicateth or caſteth out of the church as proud men, ſuch as content not themſelves with Chriſt's doctrine (that is to ſay the doctrine of godlineſs) but weary both themſelves and others in vain queſtions, (for all other things are vain) becauſe they content not themſelves in Chriſt's doctrine: and as lying deceivers, becauſe they ſavour or ſound of nothing but vanity: as madmen, becauſe they trouble themſelves ſo much in matters of nothing: as miſchievous plagues, for that they cauſe great contentions, and corrupt men's minds and judgment: to be ſhort, as prophane and wicked, becauſe they abuſe the precious name of godlineſs and religion, to filthy lucre.

[b] Striving about words, and not about matter: and by words he meaneth all thoſe things which have not pith in them, and whereby we can reap no profit.

[c] Such as we ſee in thoſe ſhameleſs ſchools of popery, which are nothing elſe but vain babbling and prattling.

[6] He turneth away fitly the name of gain and lucre, confeſſing that godlineſs is great gain, but far after another ſort, to wit, becauſe it bringeth true ſufficiency.

[7] He mocketh their folly, which do ſo greedily gape after frail things, that they can in no wiſe be ſatisfied, and yet notwithſtanding they cannot enjoy that exceſs.

[8] He frayeth Timothy from covetouſneſs after another ſort, to wit, becauſe it draweth with it an infinite ſort of luſts, and thoſe very hurtful, wherewith covetous men do torment themſelves ſo far forth, that in the end they caſt away from them their faith and ſalvation.

[d] Sorrow and grief do as it were pierce through the mind of man, and are the harveſt and true fruits of covetouſneſs.

[9] A peculiar exhortation to divers virtues, wherewith it behoveth the paſtors eſpecially to be furniſhed.

[e] Whom the Spirit of God ruleth.

[10] A moſt earneſt requeſt and charge to obſerve and keep all the promiſes faithfully, with our eyes ſet upon the comming of Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe glory we have to ſet againſt the vain glittering of this world, and his power againſt all the terrors of the wicked.

[f] He heapeth many words together, to one purpoſe: whereby he voucheth the power of God, which if we ſtick faſt unto, we ſhall not be moved out of our ſtanding.

[11] He addeth for an overplus, as it were, a ſharp admonition to the rich, that they chiefly take heed of two miſchiefs, to wit, of pride, and deceitful hope, againſt which he ſetteth three excellent virtues, hope in the living God, liberality towards their neighbour, and gentle conditions.

[g] In things pertaining to this life, with whom thoſe men are compared which are rich in good works.

[h] Who only is, and that everlaſting: for he ſetteth the nature of riches againſt God.

[12] The praiſe of liberality, by the effects thereof: becauſe it is a ſure teſtimony of the Spirit of God which dwelleth in us, and therefore of the ſalvation that ſhall be given us.

[13] He rehearſeth the chiefeſt of all the former exhortations, which ought to be deeply imprinted in the minds of all miniſters of the word, to wit, that they eſchew all vain babblings of ſophiſtry, and continue in the ſimplicity of ſincere doctrine.

[i] Not only in word, but alſo in countenance and geſture: to be ſhort, whilſt their behaviour was ſuch, that even when they held their peace, they would make men believe their heads were occupied about nothing but high and weighty matters, even then they erred concerning the faith.

The Second Epiſtle of PAUL to TIMOTHY.

CHAP. I.

5 He commendeth Timothy's faith, 6 and exhorteth him to go on faithfully in the charge committed unto him: 8 and that neither for his bonds, 15 nor the revolting of others, he faint. 11 He triumpheth of his apoſtleſhip. 14 He willeth him to have care of the thing committed unto him, 16 and praiſeth Oneſiphorus.

A. D. 66.

PAUL an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, by the will of God, [a] according to the promiſe of life which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

2 To Timothy my beloved ſon: Grace, mercy and peace from God the Father, and from Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

3 [1] I thank God, * whom I ſerve from mine [b] elders with pure conſcience, that without ceaſing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day, *Acts 22. 3.

4 Deſiring to ſee thee, mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy:

5 When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt firſt in thy grandmother Lois, and in thy mother Eunice, and am aſſured that it dwelleth in thee alſo.

6 [2] Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou [c] ſtir up the gift of God which is in thee, by the putting on of mine hands.

7 For God hath not given to us the Spirit of [d] fear, but of power, and of love, and of a ſound mind.

8 [3] Be not therefore aſhamed of the teſtimony of our Lord, neither of me [e] his priſoner: but be partaker of the afflictions of the [f] goſpel, according to the [g] power of God,

9 [4] Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an * holy calling, not according to our * works, but according to his own purpoſe and grace, which was [h] given to us through Chriſt Jeſus [i] before the * world was, A. D. 66. *1 Cor. 1. 2. *Tit. 3. 5. *Rom. 16. 25. Eph. 1. 4. Col. 1. 16. Tit. 1. 2.

10 But is now made manifeſt by that appearing of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who hath aboliſhed death, and hath brought life and immortality unto [k] light through the goſpel,

11 * [5] Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and apoſtle, and a teacher of the Gentiles. *1Tim. 2. 7.

12 [6] For the which cauſe I alſo ſuffer theſe things, [7] but I am not aſhamed: for I know whom I have believed, and I am perſuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him againſt that day.

13 [8] Keep the true pattern of the wholeſome words which thou haſt heard of me, in faith and love which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

14 [9] That worthy thing, which was committed to thee, keep [10] through the Holy Ghoſt, which dwelleth in us.

15 [11] This thou knoweſt, that all they which are in Aſia, be turned from me: of which ſort are Phygellus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord give mercy unto the houſe of Oneſiphorus: for he oft refreſhed me, and was not aſhamed of my chain,

17 But when he was at Rome, he ſought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him, that he may find mercy with the Lord at that day, and in how many things he hath miniſtered unto me at Epheſus, thou knoweſt very well.

CHAP.

---

[a] Sent of God to preach that life, which he promiſed in Chriſt Jeſus.

[1] The chiefeſt mark that he ſhooteth at in this epiſtle, is to confirm Timothy to continue conſtantly, and manfully, even to the end, ſetting firſt before him, the great good will he beareth him, and then reckoning up the excellent gifts which God would as it were have to be by inheritance in Timothy, and his anceſtors, which might ſo much the more make him bound to God.

[b] From Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob: for he ſpeaketh not of Phariſaiſm, but of Chriſtianiſm.

[2] He warneth us to ſet the invincible power of the Spirit, which God hath given us, againſt thoſe ſtorms which may and do come upon us.

[c] The gift of God is as it were a certain lively flame kindled in our hearts, which the fleſh and the devil go about to put out: and therefore we, on the contrary ſide, muſt labour as much as we can to foſter and keep it burning.

[d] To pierce us through, and terrify us, as men whom the Lord will deſtroy.

[3] He proveth that the ignominy or ſhame of the croſs is not only not to be aſhamed of, but alſo that it is glorious and moſt honourable: firſt becauſe the goſpel, wherefore the godly are afflicted, is the teſtimony of Chriſt: and ſecondly, becauſe at length the great virtue and power of God appeareth in them.

[e] For his ſake.

[f] The goſpel after a ſort is ſaid to be afflicted in them that preach it.

[g] Through the power of God.

[4] He ſheweth with how great benefits God hath bound us, to maintain boldly and conſtantly his glory which is joined with our ſalvation, and reckoneth up the cauſes of our ſalvation, to wit, that free and eternal purpoſe of God, to ſave us in Chriſt, which was to come, whereby it ſhould come to paſs, that we ſhould at length be freely called of God by the preaching of the goſpel, to Chriſt the deſtroyer of death and author of immortality.

[h] He ſaith, that that grace was given us from everlaſting unto which we were predeſtinate from everlaſting. So that the doctrine of foreſeen faith and foreſeen works, is clean contrary to the doctrine which preacheth and teacheth the grace of God.

[i] Before that courſe of years which hath run on, ever ſince the beginning of the world.

[k] Hath cauſed life and immortality to appear.

[5] That is, the goſpel which the apoſtle preached.

[6] He confirmeth his apoſtleſhip by a ſtrange argument, to wit, becauſe the world could not abide it, and therefore it perſecuted him that preached it.

[7] By ſetting his own example before us, he ſheweth us how it may be that we ſhall not be aſhamed of the croſs of Chriſt, to wit, if we be ſure that God both can and will keep the ſalvation which he hath, as it were, laid up in ſtore by himſelf for us againſt that day.

[8] He ſheweth wherein he ought to be moſt conſtant, to wit, both in the doctrine itſelf, the abridgment whereof is faith and charity, and next in the manner of teaching it, a lively pattern and ſhape whereof Timothy knew in the apoſtle.

[9] An amplification taken of the dignity of ſo great a benefit committed to the miniſters.

[10] The taking away of an objection. It is an hard thing to do it, but the Spirit of God is mighty, who hath inwardly endued us with his virtue.

[11] He preventeth an offence which aroſe by the means of certain that fell from God, and the religion, and uttereth alſo their names, that they might be known of all men. But he ſetteth againſt them the ſingular faith of one man, that one only good example might counterpoiſe and weigh down all evil examples.

A. D. 66.

CHAP. II.

2 The better to ſet out perſeverance in the Chriſtian warfare, 3 he taketh ſimilitudes 4 from ſoldiers, 6 and from huſbandmen. 10 He ſheweth that his bonds are for the profit of the ſaints: 15 Then he warneth Timothy to divide the word of truth aright, 17 to beware of the examples of the wicked, 22 and to do all things modeſtly.

THOU [1] therefore, my ſon, be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus.

2 And what things thou haſt heard of me, by [a] many witneſſes, the ſame deliver to faithful men, which ſhall be able to teach others alſo.

3 [2] Thou therefore ſuffer affliction as a good ſoldier of Jeſus Chriſt.

4 No man that warreth, entangleth himſelf with the affairs of [b] this life, becauſe he would pleaſe him that hath choſen him to be a ſoldier.

5 [3] And if any man alſo ſtrive for a maſtery, he is not crowned, except he ſtrive as he ought to do.

6 [4] The huſbandman muſt labour before he receive the fruits.

7 [5] Conſider what I ſay: and the Lord give thee underſtanding in all things.

8 [6] Remember that Jeſus Chriſt, made of the ſeed of David, was raiſed again from the dead according to my goſpel,

9 [7] Wherein I ſuffer troubles as an evil doer, even unto bonds: but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I ſuffer all things for the elect's ſake, that they might alſo obtain the ſalvation which is in Chriſt Jeſus, with eternal glory.

*Rom. 6. 5. 11 [8] It is a true ſaying, For if we be * [c] dead together with him, we ſhall alſo live together with him.

12 If we ſuffer, we ſhall alſo reign together with him: * if we deny him, he alſo will deny us. *Matt. 10. 33. Mark 8. 38.

13 If * we believe not, yet abideth he faithful: he cannot deny himſelf. *Rom. 3. 3. and 9. 6.

14 Of theſe things put them in remembrance, and [d] proteſt before the Lord, that they ſtrive not about words, which is to no profit, but to the perverting of the hearers.

15 [9] Study to ſhew thyſelf approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be aſhamed, dividing the word of truth [e] aright.

16 [f] Stay prophane and vain babblings: [10] for they ſhall increaſe unto more ungodlineſs.

17 And their word ſhall fret as a canker: of which ſort is Hymeneus and Philetus,

18 Which as concerning the truth have erred from the mark, ſaying that the reſurrection is paſt already, and do deſtroy the faith of certain.

19 [11] But the foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeal, The Lord knoweth who are his: and, Let every one that [g] calleth on the name of Chriſt, depart from iniquity.

20 [12] Notwithſtanding, in a great houſe are not only veſſels of gold and of ſilver, but alſo of wood and of earth, * and ſome for honour, and ſome unto diſhonour. *Rom. 9. 21.

21 If any man therefore [h] purge himſelf from theſe, he ſhall be a veſſel unto honour, ſanctified, and meet for the Lord, and prepared unto every good work.

22 [13] Flee alſo from the luſts of youth, and follow after righteouſneſs, faith, love, and [14] peace, with them that * call on the Lord with a pure heart, *1 Cor. 1. 2.

---

[1] The concluſion of the former exhortation, which hath alſo added unto it a declaration, how that they do not keep that worthy thing that is committed unto them, which keep it to themſelves, but they rather, which do moſt freely communicate it with others, to the end that many may be partakers of it, without any man's loſs or hindrance.

[a] When many were by, which can bear witneſs of theſe things.

[2] Another admonition: That the miniſtry of the word is a ſpiritual warfare, which no man can ſo travail in, that he may pleaſe his captain, unleſs he forego and part with all hindrances which might draw him away from it.

[b] With affairs of houſhold, or other things that belong to other ordinary buſineſſes.

[3] The third admonition: The miniſtry is like to a game or juſting, wherein men ſtrive for the victory, and no man is crowned, unleſs he ſtrive according to the laws which are preſcribed, be they never ſo hard and painful.

[4] Another ſimilitude, tending to the ſame end: no man may look for the harveſt, unleſs he firſt take pains to plow and ſow his ground.

[5] All theſe things cannot be underſtood, and much leſs practiſed, unleſs we aſk of God, and he give us underſtanding.

[6] He confirmeth plainly two principles of our faith, which are always aſſaulted of heretics, the one whereof (to wit, that Chriſt is the true Meſſias, made man of the ſeed of David) is the ground of our ſalvation: and the other is the higheſt part of it, to wit, that he is riſen again from the dead.

[7] The taking away of an objection: Truth it is, that he is kept in priſon as an evil doer, yet there is no cauſe, why therefore ſome ſhould go about to derogate credit from his goſpel, ſeeing that notwithſtanding God did bleſs his miniſtry, nay rather, that example of this his captivity and patience did ſundry ways confirm the church in the hope of a better life.

[8] The fourth admonition: We ought not to contend upon words and queſtions, which are not only unprofitable, but alſo for the moſt part hurtful: but rather upon this, how we may frame ourſelves to all manner of patience, and to die alſo with Chriſt (that is to ſay, for Chriſt's name) becauſe that is the plain way to the moſt glorious life: as contrariwiſe, the falling away of men can diminiſh no part of the truth of God, although by ſuch means they procure moſt certain deſtruction to themſelves.

[c] If we be afflicted with Chriſt, and for Chriſt's ſake.

[d] Call God to witneſs, or as a judge: as Moſes, Joſhua, Samuel, and Paul himſelf did, Acts 20.

[9] The fifth admonition: A miniſter muſt not be an idle diſputer, but a faithful ſteward, in dividing aright the word of truth, inſomuch that he muſt ſtop the mouths of other vain babblers.

[e] By adding nothing to it, neither over-ſlipping any thing, neither mangling it, nor renting it in ſunder, nor wreſting of it: but marking diligently what his hearers are able to hear, and what is fit to edifying.

[f] Mark and watch, and ſee they creep not on further.

[10] He diſcovereth the ſubtilty of Satan, who beginning with theſe principles, draweth us by little and little to ungodlineſs through the means of that wicked and prophane babbling, ſtill creeping on: which he proveth by the horrible example of them that taught, that the reſurrection was already paſt.

[11] A digreſſion, wherein he ſalveth that offence that roſe by their falling away: ſhewing firſt, that the elect are out of all danger of any ſuch falling away: ſecondly, that they are known to God, and not to us: and therefore it is no marvel if we count hypocrites oftentimes for the true brethren: but we muſt take heed that we be not like them, but rather that we be indeed ſuch as we are ſaid to be.

[g] That ſerveth and worſhippeth him, and is as it were named of him, a faithful man, or Chriſtian.

[12] The taking away of an objection: It is no diſhonour to the good man of the houſe, that he hath not in a great houſe all veſſels of one ſort and for one ſervice, but we muſt look to this, that we be found veſſels prepared to honour.

[h] By theſe words is meant the execution of the matter, and not the cauſe: for in that we purge ourſelves, it is not to be attributed to any free will that is in us, but to God, who freely and wholly worketh in us a good and an effectual will.

[13] Returning to the matter from whence he digreſſed, ver. 16. he warneth him to exerciſe himſelf in weighty matters, and ſuch as pertain to godlineſs.

[14] The ſixth admonition: We muſt above all things eſchew all bitterneſs of mind, both in teaching all men, and alſo in calling them back which have gone out of the way.

A. D. 64.

*1 Tim. 1. 4. and 4. 7. Tit. 3. 9. 23 * And put away fooliſh and unlearned queſtions, knowing that they engender ſtrife.

24 But the ſervant of the Lord muſt not ſtrive, but muſt be gentle toward all men, apt to teach, [i] ſuffering the evil,

25 Inſtructing them with meekneſs that are [k] contrary minded, proving if God at any time will give them repentance, that they may acknowledge the truth,

26 And come to amendment out of the ſnare of the devil, of whom they are taken priſoners, to do his will.

CHAP. III.

1 He foretelleth the dangerous times that are to enſue, 9 but with the certain hope of victory, 10 he encourageth him to the combat, ſetting out eſpecially the trial of ſound doctrine.

*1 Tim. 4. 1. 2 Pet. 3. 3. Jude 18. THIS [1] know alſo, that in the * laſt days ſhall come perilous times:

2 For men ſhall be lovers of their ownſelves, covetous, boaſters, proud, curſed ſpeakers, diſobedient to parents, unthankful, [a] unholy,

3 Without natural affection, truce breakers, falſe accuſers, intemperate, fierce, no lovers at all of them which are good,

4 Traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleaſures more than lovers of God,

5 Having a ſhew of godlineſs, but have denied the power thereof: [2] turn away therefore from ſuch:

6 For of this ſort are they which creep into houſes, and lead captive ſimple women laden with ſins, and led with divers luſts,

7 Which women are ever learning, and are never able to come to the acknowledging of the truth.

*Exod. 7. 11. 8 * And as Jannes and Jambres withſtood Moſes, ſo do theſe alſo reſiſt the truth, men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith.

9 [3] But they ſhall prevail no longer: for their madneſs ſhall be evident unto all men, as theirs alſo was.

10 ¶ [4] But thou haſt [b] fully known my doctrine, manner of living, purpoſe, faith, longſuffering, love, patience,

11 Perſecutions, and afflictions which came unto me at [c] Antioch, at Iconium, and at Lyſtra, which perſecutions I ſuffered: but from them all the Lord delivered me: A. D. 64.

12 Yea, and all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, ſhall ſuffer perſecution.

13 But the evil men and deceivers ſhall wax [d] worſe and worſe, deceiving, and being deceived.

14 But continue thou in the things which thou haſt learned, and which are committed unto thee, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them:

15 And that thou haſt known the holy ſcriptures of a child, which are able to make thee wiſe unto ſalvation, through the faith which is in Chriſt Jeſus.

16 * [5] For the whole ſcripture is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to convince, to correct, and to inſtruct in righteouſneſs, *2 Pet. 1. 20.

17 That the [e] man of God may be abſolute, being made perfect unto all good works.

CHAP. IV.

1 He chargeth him to preach the goſpel with all diligence, 3 in that ſo miſerable a time: 6 That his death is hard at hand, 8 yet ſo, that as a conqueror, he maketh haſte to a glorious triumph. 10 He ſheweth the cauſe why he ſendeth for Timothy, 11 even by reaſon of his preſent ſtate.

I [1] charge thee therefore before God, and before the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which ſhall judge the quick and dead at that his appearing, and in his kingdom,

2 Preach the word: be inſtant, in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon: reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long ſuffering and doctrine.

3 [2] For the time will come when they will not ſuffer wholeſome doctrine: but having their ears itching, ſhall after their own luſts get them an heap of teachers,

4 And ſhall turn their ears from the truth, and ſhall be given unto [a] fables.

5 [3] But watch thou in all things: ſuffer adverſity: do the work of an evangeliſt: [b] cauſe thy miniſtry to be thoroughly liked of.

6 [4] For I am now ready to be [c] offered, and the time of my departing is at hand.

---

[i] To win them through our patient bearing with them, but not to] pleaſe them, or excuſe them in their wickedneſs.

[k] He meaneth ſuch as do not yet ſee the truth.

[1] The ſeventh admonition: We may not hope for any church in this world without corruption: but there ſhall be rather great abundance of moſt wicked men, even in the very boſom of the church, which notwithſtanding ſhall make a ſhew and countenance of great holineſs and charity.

[a] Which make no account, either of right or honeſty.

[2] We muſt not dally with ſuch men as reſiſt the truth, not of ſimple ignorance, but of a perverſe mind, (which thing appeareth by their fruits, which he painteth out here lively) but we muſt rather turn away from them.

[3] He addeth a comfort: the Lord will at length pluck off all their vizards.

[4] That we be not deceived by ſuch hypocrites, we muſt ſet before us the virtues of the holy ſervants of God, and we muſt not be afraid of perſecution, which they ſuffered willingly, and which always followeth true godlineſs. But we muſt eſpecially hold faſt the doctrine of the apoſtles, the ſum whereof is this, that we are ſaved through faith in Chriſt Jeſus.

[b] Thou knoweſt thoroughly not only what I taught and did, but alſo how I was minded and diſpoſed.

[c] Which is in Piſidia.

[d] Their wickedneſs ſhall daily increaſe.

[5] The eighth admonition, which is moſt precious: A paſtor muſt be wiſe by the word of God only: wherein we have perfectly delivered unto us whatſoever pertaineth either to diſcern, know, and eſtabliſh true opinions, and to confute falſe: and furthermore to correct evil manners, and to frame good.

[e] The prophets and expounders of God's will, are properly and peculiarly called, Men of God.

[1] The principal and chief of all admonitions being therefore propoſed with a moſt earneſt charge, is this: that the word of God be propounded with a certain holy importunity, as neceſſity requireth: but ſo, that a good and true ground of the doctrine be laid, and the vehemency be tempered with all holy meekneſs.

[2] Faithful paſtors, in times paſt, took all occaſions they could, becauſe men were very prompt and ready to return to their fables.

[a] To falſe and unprofitable doctrines which the world is now ſo bewitched withal, that it had rather the open light of the truth were utterly put out, than it would come out of darkneſs.

[3] The wickedneſs and falling away of the world ought to cauſe faithful miniſters to be ſo much the more careful.

[b] Prove and ſhew by good and ſubſtantial proof, that thou art the true miniſter of God.

[4] He foretelleth his death to be at hand, and ſetteth before them an excellent example, both of invincible conſtancy, and ſure hope.

[c] To be offered for a drink-offering: and he alludeth to the pouring out of blood or wine, which was uſed in ſacrifices.

A. D. 66.

7 I have fought a good fight, and have finiſhed my courſe: I have kept the faith.

8 For henceforth is laid up for me the crown of righteouſneſs, which the Lord the righteous Judge ſhall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them alſo that love that his appearing.

9 [5] Make ſpeed to come unto me at once:

10 For Demas hath forſaken me, and hath [d] embraced this preſent world, and is departed unto Theſſalonica, Creſcens is gone to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.

11 * Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable unto me to miniſter. *Col. 4. 10. 14.

12 And Tychicus have I ſent to Epheſus.

13 The cloke that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comeſt, bring with thee, and the books, but ſpecially the parchments.

14 Alexander the copperſmith hath done me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works:

15 Of whom be thou ware alſo: for he withſtood our preaching ſore.

16 At my firſt anſwering no man aſſiſted me, but all forſook me: I pray God, that it may not be laid to their charge.

17 Notwithſtanding the Lord aſſiſted me, and ſtrengthened me, that by me the preaching might be fully believed, and that all the Gentiles ſhould hear: and I was delivered out of the mouth of the [e] lion.

18 And the Lord will deliver me from every [f] evil work, and will preſerve me unto his [g] heavenly kingdom: to whom be praiſe for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute Priſca and Aquila, and the * houſhold of Oneſiphorus. * Ch. 1. 16.

20 Eraſtus abode at Corinth: Trophimus I left at Miletum ſick.

21 Make ſpeed to come before winter. Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.

22 The Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with thy ſpirit: Grace be with you. Amen.

¶ The ſecond epiſtle written from Rome unto Timothy, the firſt biſhop elected of the church of Epheſus, when Paul was preſented the ſecond time before the emperor Nero.

---

[5] The laſt part of the epiſtle, ſetting forth grievous complaints againſt certain, and examples of ſingular godlineſs in every place, and of a mind never wearied.

[d] Contented himſelf with this world.

[e] Of Nero.

[f] Preſerve me pure from committing any thing unworthy my apoſtleſhip.

[g] To make me partaker of his kingdom.

The Epiſtle of PAUL to TITUS.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 65.

6 He ſheweth what kind of men ought to be choſen miniſters: 12 how vain babblers mouths ſhould be ſtopped: 12 And through this occaſion he toucheth the nature of the Cretians, 14 and the Jews who put holineſs in outward things.

PAUL [1] [a] a ſervant of God, and an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, according to the faith of God's [b] elect, [2] and the acknowledging of the truth which is according unto godlineſs,

2 Unto the [c] hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lye, hath [d] promiſed before the * [e] world began: *Rom. 16. 25. Epheſ. 3. 9. Col. 1. 26. 2Tim. 1 9. 1Pet 1. 20.

3 [3] But hath made his word manifeſt in due time through the preaching which is * committed unto me, according to the commandment of God our [f] Saviour, * Gal. 1. 1.

4 [4] To Titus my natural ſon according to the common faith, [5] Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour.

5 [6] For this cauſe left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhouldeſt continue to redreſs the things that remain, and ſhouldeſt ordain elders in every city, as I appointed thee,

6 * If any be unreproveable, the huſband of one wife, having faithful children, which are not ſlandered of riot, neither are [g] diſobedient. *1Tim. 3. 2.

7 [7] For a biſhop muſt be unreproveable, as God's [h] ſteward, not [i] froward, not angry, not given to wine, no ſtriker, not given to filthy lucre,

8 But harbourous, one that loveth goodneſs, [k] wiſe, righteous, holy, temperate,

---

[1] He voucheth his apoſtleſhip (not for Titus, but for the Cretians ſake) both by the teſtimony of his outward calling, and by his conſent, wherein he agreeth with all the elect from the beginning of the world.

[a] A miniſter; as Chriſt himſelf, in that that he was a miniſter and head of the prophets, is called a ſervant, Iſa. 43. 10.

[b] Of thoſe whom God hath choſen.

[2] The faith wherein all the elect conſent, is the true and ſincere knowledge of God, tending to this end, that worſhipping God aright, they may at length obtain life everlaſting according to the promiſe of God, who is true, which promiſe was exhibited in Chriſt in due time according to his eternal purpoſe.

[c] Hope is the end of faith.

[d] Freely, and of his mere liberality.

[e] Look 2 Tim. 1. 9.

[3] This truth is no otherwhere to be ſought, but in the preaching of the apoſtles.

[f] This word (Saviour) doth not only ſignify a preſerver of life, but alſo a giver of life.

[4] The apoſtle moveth the Cretians to hear Titus, by ſetting forth his conſent and agreement with him in the faith, and therewithal ſheweth by what ſpecial note we may diſtinguiſh true miniſters from falſe.

[5] There is but one way of ſalvation, common both to the paſtor and the flock.

[6] The firſt admonition, to ordain elders in every city.

[g] This word is proper to horſes and oxen, which will not abide the yoke.

[7] The ſecond admonition: What faults paſtors (whom he comprehended afore under the word elders) ought to be void of, and what virtues they ought to have.

[h] Whom the Lord hath appointed ſteward of his gifts.

[i] Not hard conditioned, and evil to pleaſe.

[k] Circumſpect, and of a ſound judgment, and of a ſingular example of moderation.

A. D. 65. 9 [8] Holding faſt that faithful word according to doctrine, [9] that he alſo may be able to exhort with wholeſome doctrine, and convince them that ſay againſt it:

10 [10] For there are many diſobedient and vain talkers and deceivers of minds, chiefly they of the [l] circumciſion,

11 Whoſe mouths muſt be ſtopped, which ſubvert whole houſes, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's ſake.

12 [m] One of themſelves, even one of their own prophets ſaid, The Cretians are always lyars, wild beaſts, ſlow bellies.

13 This witneſs is true: wherefore convince them [n] ſharply, that they may be found in the faith,

1*Tim.1.4. 14 And not taking heed to * Jewiſh fables, and commandments of men, that turn away from the truth.

* Rom. 14. 20. 15 [11] Unto the pure * are all things pure: but unto them that are defiled, and unbelieving, is nothing pure, but even their [o] minds and conſciences are defiled.

16 They profeſs that they know God, but by works they deny him, and are abominable and diſobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

CHAP. II.

2 He ſetteth out the duties of ſundry perſons and ſtates, 6 and willeth him to inſtruct the church in manners. 11 He draweth an argument from the end of our redemption, 12 which is, that we live godly and uprightly.

BUT [1] ſpeak thou the things which become wholeſome doctrine,

2 [2] That the elder men be watchful, grave, temperate, ſound in the faith, in love, and in patience.

3 The elder women likewiſe, that they be in ſuch behaviour as becometh holineſs, not falſe accuſers, not ſubject to much wine, but teachers of honeſt things,

4 That they may inſtruct the young women to be ſober minded, that they love their huſbands, that they love their children,

A. D. 65. 5 That they be temperate, chaſte, [a] keeping at home, good and * ſubject unto their huſbands, that the word of God be not evil ſpoken of. * Ephes. 5. 23.

6 Exhort young men likewiſe, that they be ſober minded.

7 [3] In all things ſhew thyſelf an example of good works with uncorrupt doctrine, with [b] gravity, integrity,

8 And with the wholeſome word, which cannot be condemned, that he which withſtandeth, may be aſhamed, having nothing concerning you to ſpeak evil of.

9 * [4] Let ſervants be ſubject to their maſters, and pleaſe them in all [c] things, not anſwering again, *Ephes. 6.5. Col. 3. 22. 1 Pet. 2. 18.

[8] The third admonition: The paſtor muſt hold faſt that doctrine which the apoſtles delivered, and pertaineth to ſalvation, leaving all curious and vain matters.

[9] The fourth admonition: To apply the knowledge of true doctrine unto uſe, which conſiſteth in two things, to wit, in governing them which ſhew themſelves apt to learn, and confuting the obſtinate.

[10] An applying of the general propoſition to a particular. The Cretians above all other need ſharp reprehenſions: both becauſe their minds are naturally given to lyes and ſlothfulneſs, and alſo becauſe of certain covetous Jews, which under a colour of godlineſs, joined partly certain vain traditions, and partly old ceremonies with the goſpel.

[l] Of the Jews, or rather of thoſe Jews which went about to join Chriſt and the law together.

[m] Epimenides, who was counted a prophet amongſt them. Look upon Laertius, and Cicero in his firſt book of divination.

[n] Roughly and plainly, and go not about the buſh with them.

[11] He ſheweth in few words, that purity conſiſteth not in any external worſhip, and that that is according to the old law (as in difference of meats and waſhings, and other ſuch things which are aboliſhed) but in the mind and conſcience: and whoſoever teach otherwiſe, know not what is true religion indeed, and alſo are nothing leſs than that they would ſeem to be.

[o] If our minds and conſciences be unclean, what cleanneſs is there in us before regeneration?

[1] The fifth admonition: The doctrine muſt not only be generally pure, but alſo be applied to all ages and orders of men, according to the diverſity of circumſtances.

[2] What are the chiefeſt virtues for old and young, both men and women, and how they ought to be ſtirred up unto them continually.

[a] No gadders up and down.

[3] The ſixth admonition: That both the paſtor's life and doctrine muſt be ſound.

[b] Not ſuch a gravity as may drive men from coming to the miniſter, but ſuch as may cauſe them to come in moſt reverent and honeſt ſort.

[4] The ſeventh admonition, of ſervants duty toward their maſters.

[c] Which may be done without offence to God.

[5] The eighth admonition, belonging to all the godly: that ſeeing God calleth all men to the goſpel, and Chriſt hath ſo juſtified us, that he hath alſo ſanctified us, we muſt all of us give ourſelves to true godlineſs, and righteouſneſs, ſetting before us a ſure hope of that immeaſurable glory: which thing muſt in ſuch ſort be beaten into their heads, that the gainſayers alſo muſt be reproved, by the authority of the mighty God.

[d] Luſts of the fleſh, which belong to the preſent ſtate of this life and world.

[e] Chriſt is here moſt plainly called that mighty God, and his appearance and coming is called by the figure Metonymy, our hope.

[f] As it were a thing peculiarly laid up for himſelf.

[g] With all authority poſſible.

[1] He declareth particularly and ſeverally that which he ſaid before generally, noting out certain chief and principal duties, which men owe to men, and eſpecially ſubjects to their magiſtrates.

A. D. 65.

2 That they ſpeak evil of no man, that they be no fighters, but ſoft, ſhewing all meekneſs unto all men.

*1Cor.6.11. 3 [2] * For we ourſelves alſo were in times paſt unwiſe, diſobedient, deceived, ſerving the luſts and divers pleaſures, living in maliciousneſs and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

4 But when that bountifulneſs and that love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,

*2Tim.1.9. 5 * Not by the works of [a] righteouſneſs which we had done, but according to his mercy he ſaved us, by the waſhing of the new birth, and the renewing of the [b] Holy Ghoſt,

6 Which he ſhed on us abundantly through Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour,

7 That we, being juſtified by his grace, ſhould be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

8 [3] This is a true ſaying, and theſe things I will thou ſhouldeſt affirm, that they which have believed God, might be careful to ſhew forth [c] good works. Theſe things are good and profitable unto men.

*1Tim.1.4. and 4.7. 2Tim.2.23. 9 * But ſtay fooliſh queſtions, and genealogies, and contentions, and brawlings about the law: for they are unprofitable and vain.

A. D. 65.

10 [4] Reject him that is an heretic, after once or twice admonition,

11 Knowing that he that is ſuch, is perverted, and ſinneth, being damned of his ownſelf.

12 [5] When I ſhall ſend Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, be diligent to come to me unto Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter.

13 Bring Zenas the expounder of the law, and Apollos on their journey diligently, that they lack nothing.

14 And let ours alſo learn to ſhew forth good works for neceſſary uſes, that they be not unfruitful.

15 All that are with me, ſalute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ To Titus, elect the firſt biſhop of the church of the Cretians, written from Nicopolis in Macedonia.

[2] He confirmeth again the former exhortation, by propounding the free benefit of our regeneration, the pledge whereof is our baptiſm.

[a] Word for word, of works which are done in righteouſneſs: and this place doth fully refute the doctrine of merits.

[b] Which the virtue of the Holy Ghoſt worketh.

[3] Again with great earneſtneſs he beateth into our heads, how that we ought to give ourſelves to true godlineſs, and eſchew all vain queſtions, which ſerve to nothing but to move ſtrife and debate.

[c] Give themſelves earneſtly unto good works.

[4] The miniſters of the word muſt at once caſt off heretics, that is, ſuch as ſtubbornly and ſeditiouſly diſquiet the church, and will give no ear to eccleſiaſtical admonitions.

[5] Laſt of all, he writeth a word or two of private matters, and commendeth certain men.

The Epiſtle of PAUL to PHILEMON.

1 Paul handling a baſe and ſmall matter, yet according to his manner mounteth aloft unto God. 8 Sending again to Philemon his vagabond and thieviſh ſervant, he entreateth pardon for him, and very gravely preacheth of Chriſtian equity.

PAUL a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt, and our brother Timothy, unto Philemon our dear friend, and fellow helper:

2 And to our dear ſiſter Apphia, and to Archippus our fellow ſoldier, and to the church that is in thine houſe:

3 Grace be with you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

*1Theſſ.1.2. 2Theſſ.1.3. 4 I * give thanks to my God, making mention always of thee in my prayers

5 (When I hear of thy love and faith, which thou haſt toward the Lord Jeſus, and toward all ſaints),

6 That the [a] fellowſhip of thy faith may be made effectual, and that whatſoever good thing is in you through Chriſt Jeſus, may be [b] known.

7 For we have great joy and conſolation in thy love, becauſe by thee, brother, the ſaints [c] bowels are comforted.

8 Wherefore, though I be very bold in Chriſt to command thee that which is convenient,

9 [1] Yet, for love's ſake, I rather beſeech thee, though I be as I am, even Paul aged, and even now a priſoner for Jeſus Chriſt.

10 I beſeech thee for my ſon * Oneſimus, whom I have begotten in my bonds, *Col.4.9.

11 Which in times paſt was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable both to thee and to me,

12 Whom I have ſent again: thou therefore receive him, that is mine own [d] bowels:

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy ſtead he might have miniſtered unto me in the bonds of the goſpel.

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing, that thy benefit ſhould not be as it were of [e] neceſſity, but willingly.

15 It may be that he therefore [f] departed for [g] a ſeaſon, that thou ſhouldeſt receive him for ever:

16 Not

---

[a] By fellowſhip of faith, he meaneth thoſe duties of charity which are beſtowed upon the ſaints, and flow forth of an effectual faith.

[b] That by this means all men may perceive how rich you are in Chriſt, to wit, in faith, charity, and all bountifulneſs.

[c] Becauſe thou didſt ſo dutifully and chearfully refreſh the ſaints, that they conceived inwardly a marvellous joy: for by this word (bowels) is meant not only the inward feeling of wants and miſeries that men have one of another's ſtate, but alſo that joy and comfort which entereth into the very bowels, as though the heart were refreſhed and comforted.

[1] An example of a Chriſtian excuſe and commendation for another man.

[d] As mine own ſon, and as if I had begotten him of mine own body.

[e] That thou mighteſt not ſeem to have lent me thy ſervant upon conſtraint, but willingly.

[f] Thus he aſſuageth the harder kind of ſpeech, which is to ſay, he ran away.

[g] For a little time.

16 Not now as a ſervant, but above a ſervant, even as a brother beloved, eſpecially to me: how much more then unto thee, both in the [h] fleſh, and in the Lord?

17 If therefore thou count our things common, receive him as myſelf.

18 If he hath hurt thee, or oweth thee aught, that put on mine accounts.

19 I Paul have written this with mine own hand, I will recompenſe it: albeit I do not ſay to thee, that thou oweſt moreover unto me even thine own ſelf.

20 [i] Yea, brother, let me obtain this pleaſure of thee in the Lord: comfort my bowels in the Lord.

21 Truſting in thine obedience, I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt do even more than I ſay.

22 Moreover alſo prepare me lodging: for I truſt through your prayers I ſhall be freely given unto you.

23 There ſalute thee Epaphras my fellow priſoner in Chriſt Jeſus,

24 Marcus, Ariſtarchus, Demas, and Luke my fellow helpers.

25 The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with your ſpirit. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome to Philemon, and ſent by Oneſimus a ſervant.

[h] Becauſe he is thy ſervant, as other ſervants are, and becauſe he is the Lord's ſervant, ſo that thou muſt needs love him, both for the Lord's ſake, and for thine own ſake.

[i] Good brother, let me obtain this benefit at thine hand,

The Epiſtle to the HEBREWS.

The drift and end of this epiſtle is, to ſhew that Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God, both God and man, is that true, eternal and only prophet, king, and high prieſt, that was ſhadowed by the figures of the old law, and is now indeed exhibited: of whom the whole church ought to be taught, governed, and ſanctified.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 64.

1 To ſhew that the doctrine which Chriſt brought, is moſt excellent, in that it is the knitting up of all prophecies, 4 he advanceth him above the angels. 10 And proveth by divers teſtimonies of the ſcripture, that he far paſſeth all other.

AT [1] ſundry times and in divers manners God ſpake in the old time to our fathers by the prophets: in theſe [a] laſt days he hath ſpoken unto us by his [b] Son,

2 [2] Whom he hath made [c] heir of all things, by whom alſo he made the [d] worlds,

3 * Who being the [e] brightneſs of the glory, and the ingraved form of his [f] perſon, and [g] bearing up all things by his mighty word, [3] hath by himſelf purged our ſins, and [h] ſitteth at the right hand of the majeſty in the higheſt places, *Col. 1. 15.

4 [4] And is made ſo much more excellent than the angels, inaſmuch as he hath obtained a more excellent [i] name than they:

5 [5] For unto which of the angels ſaid he at any time, * Thou art my Son, [k] this day begat I thee? [6] and again, I * will be his Father, and he ſhall be my Son? *Pſ. 2. 7. Ch. 5. 5. * 2 Sam. 7. 14. 1 Chron. 22. 10.

6 [7] And [l] again, when he bringeth in his firſt begotten Son into the world, he ſaith, * And let all the angels of God worſhip him. * Pſ. 97. 7.

7 [8] And of the angels he ſaith, * He maketh the ſpirits his [m] meſſengers, and his miniſters a [n] flame of fire. *Pſ. 104. 4.

8 But unto the Son he ſaith, * O God, thy [o] throne is for ever [p] and ever: the ſcepter of thy kingdom is a [q] ſcepter of righteouſneſs. *Pſ. 45. 7.

9 Thou haſt loved righteouſneſs and [r] hated iniquity: wherefore God, even thy God, hath [s] anointed thee with the oil of gladneſs above th [t] fellows.

10 [9] And, * Thou, Lord, in the beginning haſt [u] eſtabliſhed the earth, and the heavens are the works of thine hand. *Pſ. 102. 25.

11 They

---

[1] The firſt part of the general propoſition of this epiſtle: The Son of God is indeed that prophet or teacher, which hath actually now performed that, that God after a ſort, and in ſhadows, ſignified by his prophets, and hath fully opened his Father's will to the world.

[a] So that the former declaration made by the prophets was not full, and nothing muſt be added to this later.

[b] Which one Son is God and man.

[2] The ſecond part of the ſame propoſition: The ſame Son is appointed of the Father to be our King and Lord, by whom alſo he made all things: and in whom only he ſetteth forth his glory, yea, and himſelf alſo to be beholden of us, who beareth up and ſuſtaineth all things by his will and pleaſure.

[c] Poſſeſſor and equal compartner of all things with the Father.

[d] That is, whatſoever hath been at any time, is, or ſhall be.

[e] He in whom that glory and majeſty of the Father ſhineth, who is otherwiſe infinite, and cannot be beholden.

[f] His Father's perſon.

[g] Suſtaineth, defendeth, and cheriſheth.

[3] The third part of the ſame propoſition: The ſame Son executed the office of the high prieſt in offering up himſelf, and is our only and moſt mighty Mediator in heaven.

[h] This ſheweth that the ſavour of that his ſacrifice is not only moſt acceptable to the Father, but alſo is everlaſting, and furthermore, how far this high prieſt paſſeth all the other high prieſts.

[4] Before he cometh to declare the office of Chriſt, he ſetteth forth the excellency of his perſon, and firſt of all he ſheweth him ſo to be man, that therewithal he is God alſo.

[i] Dignity and honour.

[5], [6], [7], [8], [9], [10] He proveth and confirmeth the dignity of Chriſt manifeſted in the fleſh, by theſe ſix evident teſtimonies, whereby it appeareth that he far paſſeth all angels, inſomuch that he is called both Son, and God, in verſes 5, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 13.

[k] The Father begat the Son from everlaſting, but that everlaſting generation was made manifeſt and repreſented to the world in his time, and therefore he addeth this word (To-day).

[l] The Lord was not content to have ſpoken it once, but he repeateth it in another place.

[m] Cherub, Pſalm 18. 11.

[n] Seraph, Iſa. 6. 2.

[o] The throne is proper to princes, and not to ſervants.

[p] For everlaſting, for this doubling of the word increaſeth the ſignification of it beyond all meaſure.

[q] The government of thy kingdom is righteous.

[r] This kind of rehearſing, which the Jews uſe by contraries, hath great force in it.

[s] In that, that the word became fleſh, by pouring the Holy Ghoſt upon him without meaſure.

[t] For he is the head, and we are his members.

[u] Madeſt the earth firm and ſure.

A. D. 64. 11 They ſhall periſh, but thou doſt remain: and they ſhall wax old as doth a garment,

12 And as a veſture ſhalt thou fold them up, and they ſhall be changed: but thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall not fail.

13 [10] Unto which alſo of the angels ſaid he at any time, * Sit at my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool? * Pſ. 110. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 25. Ch. 10. 12, 13.

14 Are they not all [x] miniſtering ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter, for their ſakes which ſhall be heirs of ſalvation?

CHAP. II.

1 Therefor ehe inferreth that good heed muſt be given to Chriſt's doctrine: 9 And he ſetteth him out unto us even as our brother in our fleſh, that we may with a good will yield up ourſelves wholly unto him.

WHerefore [1] we ought diligently to give heed to the things which [a] we have heard, leſt at any time we [b] run out.

2 For if the [c] word ſpoken by angels was ſtedfaſt, and every tranſgreſſion and diſobedience received a juſt recompence of reward,

3 How ſhall we eſcape, if we neglect ſo great ſalvation, [2] which at the firſt began to be preached by the Lord, and afterward was confirmed unto us by [d] them that heard him,

4 * God bearing witneſs thereto, both with [e] ſigns and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, according to his own will? * Mark 16. 20.

A. D. 64. 5 [3] For he hath not put in ſubjection unto the angels the [f] world to come, whereof we ſpeak:

6 [4] But * one in a certain place witneſſed, ſaying, [g] What is man, that thou ſhouldeſt be mindful of him? or the [h] ſon of man, that thou wouldeſt conſider him? * Pſ. 8. 6.

7 Thou [i] madeſt him a little inferior to the angels: thou crowneſt him with [k] glory and honour, and haſt ſet him above the works of thine hands.

8 * Thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feet. And in that he hath put all things in ſubjection under him, he left nothing that ſhould not be ſubject unto him. [5] But we yet ſee not all things ſubdued unto him, * 1 Cor. 15. 27.

9 [6] But we [l] ſee Jeſus crowned with glory and honour, * which was made little [m] inferior to the angels, [7] through the [n] ſuffering of death, that by God's grace he might [o] taſte death for [8] all men. * Phil. 2. 8.

10 [9] For it became [p] him, for whom are all theſe things, and by whom are all theſe things, [10] ſeeing that he brought many children unto glory, [11] that he ſhould conſecrate the [q] Prince or their ſalvation through afflictions.

11 [12] For he that [r] ſanctifieth, and they which

---

[x] By that name, by which we commonly call princes meſſengers, he here calleth the ſpirits.

[1] Now as it were pauſing with himſelf, and ſhewing to what end and purpoſe all theſe things were ſpoken, to wit, to underſtand by the excellency of Chriſt, above all creatures, that his doctrine, majeſty, and prieſthood, is moſt perfect, he uſeth an exhortation taken from a compariſon.

[a] He maketh himſelf an hearer.

[b] They are ſaid to let the word run out, which hold it not faſt when they have heard it.

[c] The law which appointed puniſhment for the offenders: and which Paul ſaith was given by angels, Gal. 3. 19. and Stephen, Acts 7. 53.

[2] If the breach and tranſgreſſion of the word ſpoken by angels was not ſuffered unpuniſhed, much leſs ſhall it be lawful for us to neglect the goſpel which the Lord of angels preached, and was confirmed by the voice of the apoſtles, and with ſo many ſigns and wonders from heaven, and eſpecially with ſo great and mighty working of the Holy Ghoſt.

[d] By the apoſtles.

[e] This is the true end of miracles. Now they are called ſigns, becauſe they appear one thing, and repreſent another: and they are called wonders, becauſe they repreſent ſome ſtrange and unaccuſtomed thing: and virtues, becauſe they give us a glimpſe of God's mighty power.

[3] If it were an heinous matter to contemn the angels which are but ſervants, much more heinous is it to contemn that moſt mighty King of the reſtored world.

[f] The world to come, whereof Chriſt is Father, Iſa. 9. 6. or the church, which, as a new world, was to be gathered together by the goſpel.

[4] He ſheweth that the uſe of this kingly dignity conſiſteth herein, that men might not only in Chriſt recover that dignity which they have loſt, but alſo might be through him advanced above all things, which dignity of men David deſcribeth moſt excellently.

[g] What is there in man that thou ſhouldeſt have ſo great regard of him, and do him that honour?

[h] He calleth all the citizens of that heavenly kingdom, as they are conſidered in themſelves, before that God giveth them the liberty of that city in Chriſt, man, and the Son of man.

[i] This is the firſt honour of the citizens of the world to come, that they are next the angels.

[k] For they ſhall be in very great honour when they ſhall be partakers of the kingdom. And he ſpeaketh of the thing that ſhall be, as though it were already, becauſe it is ſo certain.

[5] An objection: But where is this ſo great rule and dominion?

[6] The anſwer: This is already fulfilled in Jeſus Chriſt our head, who was for a time for our ſakes inferior to the angels, being made man: but now is advanced into moſt high glory.

[l] By his virtue and power, which appeareth manifeſtly in the church.

[m] Who abaſed himſelf for a ſeaſon, and took upon him the ſhape of a ſervant.

[7] He ſheweth the cauſe of this ſubjection, to wit, to taſte of death for our ſakes, that ſo doing the part of a Redeemer, he might not only be our prophet and king, but alſo our high prieſt.

[n] That he might die.

[o] Feel death.

[8] Herein conſiſteth the force of the argument: for we could not at length be glorified with him, unleſs he had been abaſed for us, even all the faithful. And by this occaſion the apoſtle cometh to the other part of the declaration of Chriſt's perſon, wherein he proveth him to be in ſuch ſort God, that he is alſo man.

[9] He proveth more by other arguments, why it behoved the Son of God, who is true God (as he proved a little before) to become man notwithſtanding, ſubject to all miſeries, ſin only except.

[p] God.

[10] Firſt of all, becauſe the Father, to whoſe glory all things are to be referred, purpoſed to bring many ſons unto glory. And how could he have men for his ſons, unleſs his only begotten Son had become brother to men?

[11] Secondly, the Father determined to bring thoſe ſons to glory, to wit, out of that ignominy wherein they lay before. Therefore the Son ſhould not have been ſeen plainly to be made man, unleſs he had been made like unto other men, that he might come to glory by the ſelf-ſame way, by the which he ſhould bring others: yea rather, it became him which was Prince of the ſalvation of others, to be conſecrated above others, through thoſe afflictions, Prophet, King, and Prieſt, which are the parts of that principality for the ſalvation of others.

[q] The chieftain, who as he is chiefeſt in dignity, ſo is he the firſt begotten from among the dead, amongſt many brethren.

[12] The ground of both the former arguments: For neither ſhould we be ſons through him, neither could he be conſecrate through afflictions, unleſs he had been made man like unto us. But becauſe his Sonhood dependeth not upon nature only, for no man is accounted the ſon of God, unleſs that, beſides that he is a ſon of man, he be alſo Chriſt's brother, (which is by ſanctification, that is, by becoming one with Chriſt, who ſanctifieth us through faith) therefore the apoſtle maketh mention of the ſanctifier, to wit, of Chriſt, and of them that are ſanctified, to wit, of all the faithful, whom therefore Chriſt vouchſafeth to call brethren.

[r] He uſeth the time that now is, to ſhew us that we are yet ſtill going on, and increaſing in this ſanctification: and

A. D. 64. are ſanctified, are all of [s] one: wherefore he is not aſhamed to call them brethren,

* Pſ. 22. 25. 12 [13] Saying, * I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midſt of the church will I ſing praiſes to thee.

* Pſ. 18. 2. 13 [14] And again, * I will put my [t] truſt in him.
* Iſa. 8. 18. And again, * [u] Behold here am I, and the children which God hath given me.

14 Foraſmuch then as the children are [x] partakers of fleſh and blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part with them, that he might deſtroy
* Hoſ. 13. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 55. * through death, him that had the [y] power of death, that is, the [z] devil,

15 And that he might deliver all them, which for fear of [a] death were all their life time ſubject to bondage:

16 [15] For he in no ſort took on him the [b] angels nature, but he took on him the [c] ſeed of Abraham.

17 [16] Wherefore in [d] all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be [e] merciful, and a [f] faithful high prieſt in things concerning God, that he might make reconciliation for the ſins of the people:

18 For in that he ſuffered, and was [g] tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted.

CHAP. III.

1 Now he ſheweth how far inferior Moſes is to Chriſt, 5, 6 even ſo much as the ſervant to the maſter: and ſo he bringeth in certain exhortations and threatenings taken out of David, 8 againſt ſuch as either ſtubbornly reſiſt, 12 or elſe are very ſlow to obey.

THerefore, [1] holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly vocation, conſider the [a] Apoſtle and High Prieſt of our [b] profeſſion, Chriſt Jeſus: A. D. 64.

2 [2] Who was faithful to him that hath [c] appointed him, [3] even as * Moſes was in all his houſe. * Num. 12. 7.

3 [4] For this man is counted worthy of more glory than Moſes, inſomuch as he which hath builded the houſe, hath more honour than the houſe.

4 For every houſe is builded of ſome man, and he that hath built all things, is God.

5 [5] Now Moſes verily was faithful in all his houſe, as a ſervant, for a witneſs of the things which ſhould be ſpoken after:

6 But Chriſt is as the Son, over his own houſe, [6] whoſe [d] houſe we are, if we hold faſt that [e] confidence and that rejoicing of that hope unto the end.

7 Wherefore, as the Holy Ghoſt ſaith, * To-day if ye [f] ſhall hear his voice, * Pſ. 95. 8. Ch. 4. 7.

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the [g] provocation, according to the day of the temptation in the wilderneſs,

9 Where your fathers tempted me, proved me, and ſaw my works forty years long.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and ſaid, They [h] err ever in their heart, neither have they known my ways.

11 Therefore I ſware in my wrath, If they ſhall enter into my reſt.

12 [7] Take heed, brethren, leſt at any time there be in any of you an evil heart, and unfaithful, to depart away from the living God.

13 But

by ſanctification he meaneth our ſeparation from the reſt of of the world, our cleanſing from ſin, and our dedication wholly unto God, all which Chriſt alone worketh in us.

[s] One, of one ſelf-ſame nature of man.

[13] That which he taught before of the incarnation of the Sanctifier, he applieth to the prophetical office.

[14] He applieth the ſame to the kingly power of Chriſt, in delivering his from the power of the devil and death.

[t] I will commit myſelf to him, and to his defence.

[u] This Iſaiah ſpeaketh of himſelf and his diſciples, but betokening thereby all miniſters, as alſo his diſciples ſignify the whole church. And therefore ſeeing Chriſt is the head of the prophets and miniſters, theſe words are more rightly verified of him, than of Iſaiah.

[x] Are made of fleſh and blood, which is a frail and brittle nature.

[y] The devil is ſaid to have the power of death, becauſe he is the author of ſin: and from ſin cometh death, and for this cauſe he eggeth us daily to ſin.

[z] He ſpeaketh of one as of the prince, joining to him ſecretly all his angels.

[a] By (death) thou muſt underſtand here, that death which is joined with the wrath of God, as it muſt needs be, if it be without Chriſt, than the which there can be nothing deviſed more miſerable.

[15] He expoundeth thoſe words of fleſh and blood, ſhewing that Chriſt is true man, and that not by turning his divine nature, but by taking of man's nature. And he nameth Abraham, reſpecting the promiſes made to Abraham in this behalf.

[b] The nature of angels.

[c] The very nature of man.

[16] He applieth the ſame to the prieſthood, for which he ſhould not have been fit, unleſs he had become man, and that like unto us in all things, ſin only except.

[d] Not only as touching nature, but qualities alſo.

[e] That he might be truly touched with the feeling of our miſeries.

[f] Doing his office ſincerely.

[g] Was tried and egged to wickedneſs by the devil.

[1] Having laid the foundation, that is to ſay, declared and proved both the natures of one ſelf-ſame Chriſt, he giveth him three offices, to wit, the office of a prophet, king, and prieſt, and as touching the office of teaching and governing, compareth him with Moſes and Joſhua, unto the fourteenth verſe of the next chapter, and with Aaron touching the prieſthood. And he propoundeth that which he purpoſed to ſpeak of, with a moſt grave exhortation, that all our faith may tend to Chriſt, as to the only everlaſting teacher, governor, and high prieſt.

[a] The ambaſſador or meſſenger, as Rom. 15. he is called the miniſter of circumciſion.

[b] Of the doctrine of the goſpel which we profeſs.

[2] He confirmeth his exhortation with two reaſons, firſt of all, becauſe Chriſt Jeſus was appointed ſuch an one of God: ſecondly, becauſe he throughly executed the offices that his Father enjoined him.

[c] Apoſtle and high prieſt.

[3] Now he cometh to the compariſon with Moſes, and he maketh them like one to the other in this, that they were both appointed rulers over God's houſe, and executed faithfully their offices: but by and by after he ſheweth that there is great unlikelineſs in that ſame ſimilitude.

[4] The firſt compariſon: The builder of the houſe is better than the houſe itſelf, therefore is Chriſt better than Moſes. The reaſon of the conſequent is this: becauſe the builder of this houſe is God, which cannot be attributed to Moſes: and therefore Moſes was not properly the builder, but a part of the houſe: but Chriſt as Lord and God made all this houſe.

[5] Another compariſon: Moſes was a faithful ſervant in this houſe, that is, in the church, ſerving the Lord that was to come, but Chriſt ruleth and governeth his houſe as Lord.

[6] He applieth the former doctrine to his end, exhorting all men by the words of David to hear the Son himſelf ſpeak, and to give full credit to his words, ſeeing that otherwiſe they cannot enter into that eternal reſt.

[d] To wit, Chriſt's.

[e] He calleth that excellent effect of faith (whereby we cry Abba, that is, Father) confidence, and to confidence he joineth hope.

[f] So that God was to ſpeak once again after Moſes.

[g] In the day that they vexed the Lord, or ſtrove with him.

[h] They are brutiſh and mad.

[7] Now weighing the words of David, he ſheweth firſt by this word, To-day, that we muſt not neglect the occaſion while we have it: for that word is not to be reſtrained to David's time, but it comprehendeth all that time wherein God calleth us.

A. D. 64. 13 But exhort one another daily, [i] while it is called to day, leſt any of you be hardened through the deceitfulneſs of ſin:

14 [8] For we are made partakers of Chriſt, if we keep ſure unto the end that [k] beginning wherewith we are upholden,

15 [l] So long as it is ſaid, To-day if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For ſome when they heard, provoked him to anger: howbeit, not all that came out of Egypt by Moſes.

17 But with whom was he diſpleaſed forty years? Was he not diſpleaſed with them that ſinned, * whoſe carcaſes fell in the wilderneſs? * Num. 14. 37.

18 And to whom ſware he that they ſhould not enter into his reſt, but unto them that obeyed not?

19 So we ſee that they could not enter in, becauſe of unbelief.

CHAP. IV.

1 He joineth exhortation with threatening, leſt they, even as their fathers were, be deprived of the reſt offered unto them, 11 but that they endeavour to enter into it. 14 And ſo he beginneth to intreat of Chriſt's prieſthood.

LET us fear therefore, leſt at any time by forſaking the promiſe of entering into his reſt, any of you ſhould ſeem to be deprived:

2 [1] For unto us was the goſpel preached as alſo unto them: but the word that they heard, profited not them, becauſe it was not [a] mixed with faith in thoſe that heard it.

3 [2] For we which have believed, do enter into the reſt, as he ſaid to the other, * As I have ſworn in my wrath, If they ſhall enter into my reſt: although the works were finiſhed from the foundation of the world. * Pſ. 95. 11.

4 For he ſpake in a certain place of the ſeventh day on this wiſe, * And God did reſt the ſeventh day from all his works. A. D. 64. * Gen. 2. 2. Deut. 5. 14.

5 And in this place again, If they ſhall enter into my reſt.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that ſome muſt enter thereinto, and they to whom it was firſt preached, entered not therein for unbelief's ſake:

7 Again he appointed in David a certain day, by To-day, after ſo long a time, ſaying, as it is ſaid, * This day, If ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts. * Ch. 3. 7.

8 For if [b] Jeſus had given them reſt, then would he not after this have ſpoken of another day.

9 There remaineth therefore a reſt to the people of God.

10 [c] For he that is entered into his reſt, hath alſo ceaſed from his own works, as God did from his.

11 [3] Let us ſtudy therefore to enter into that reſt, leſt [d] any man fall after the ſame enſample of diſobedience.

12 [4] For the [e] word of God is [f] lively, and mighty in operation, and ſharper than any two-edged ſword, and entereth through, even unto the dividing aſunder of the [g] ſoul and the [h] ſpirit, and of the joints and the marrow, and is a diſcerner of the thoughts and the intents of the heart.

13 Neither is there any creature, which is not manifeſt in [i] his ſight: but all things are naked and open unto his eyes, with whom we have to do.

14 [5] Seeing then that we have a great High Prieſt, which is entered into heaven, even Jeſus the Son of God, let us [k] hold faſt our profeſſion:

15 [6] For we have not an High Prieſt, which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all things tempted in like ſort, yet without ſin.

---

[i] While to-day laſteth, that is to ſay, ſo long as the goſpel is offered to us.

[8] Now he conſidereth theſe words, 'If you hear his voice, &c. ſhewing that they are ſpoken and meant of the hearing of faith, againſt which he ſetteth hardening through unbelief.

[k] That beginning of truſt and confidence: and after the manner of the Hebrews, he calleth that, beginning, which is chiefeſt.

[l] So long as this voice ſoundeth out.

[1] By theſe words, 'His voice,' he ſheweth that David meant the preaching of Chriſt, who was then alſo preached, for Moſes and the prophets reſpected none other.

[a] He compareth the preaching of the goſpel to drink, which being drunk, that is to ſay, heard, profiteth nothing, unleſs it be tempered with faith.

[2] Leſt any man ſhould object that thoſe words were meant of the land of Canaan, and of Moſes's doctrine, and therefore cannot be well drawn to Chriſt, and to eternal life, the apoſtle ſheweth that there are two manner of reſts ſpoken of in the ſcriptures: the one of the ſeventh day, wherein God is ſaid to have reſted from all his works: another is ſaid to be that ſame, whereunto Joſhua led the people: but this reſt is not the laſt reſt whereunto we are called: and that he proveth by two reaſons. For ſeeing that David ſo long time after, ſpeaking to the people which were then placed in the land of Canaan, uſeth theſe words, To-day, and threateneth them ſtill that they ſhall not enter into the reſt of God, which refuſed then the voice of God that ſounded in their ears, we muſt needs ſay that he meant another time than the time of Moſes, and another reſt than the reſt of the land of Canaan; and that is, that everlaſting reſt, wherein we begin to live to God, after that the race of this life ceaſeth: as God reſted the ſeventh day from thoſe his works, that is to ſay, from making the world. Moreover the apoſtle therewithal ſignifieth that the way to this reſt, which Moſes and the land of Canaan, and all that order of the law did ſhadow, is opened in the goſpel only.

[b] He ſpeaketh of Joſhua the ſon of Nun: and as the land of Canaan was a figure of our true reſt, ſo was Joſhua a figure of Chriſt.

[c] As God reſted the ſeventh day, ſo muſt we reſt from our works, that is, from ſuch as proceed from our corrupt nature.

[3] He returneth to an exhortation.

[d] Leſt any man become a like example of infidelity.

[4] An amplification taken from the nature of the word of God, the power whereof is ſuch, that it entereth even to the deepeſt and moſt inward and ſecret parts of the heart, wounding them deadly that are ſtubborn, and plainly quickening the believers.

[e] The doctrine of God which is preached both in the law and in the goſpel.

[f] He calleth the word of God lively, by reaſon of the effects it worketh in them to whom it is preached.

[g] He calleth that the ſoul which hath the affections reſident in it.

[h] By the ſpirit, he meaneth that nobleſt part which is called the mind.

[i] In God's ſight.

[5] Now he entereth into the compariſon of Chriſt's prieſthood with Aaron's, and declareth even in the very beginning the marvellous excellency of this prieſthood, calling him the Son of God, and placing him in the ſeat of God in heaven, plainly and evidently ſetting him againſt Aaron's prieſts, and the tranſitory tabernacle, which compariſons he ſetteth forth afterward more at large.

[k] And let it not go out of our hands.

[6] Leſt he might ſeem by this great glory of our High Prieſt, to ſtay and ſtop us from going unto him, he addeth ſtraightways after, that he is notwithſtanding our brother indeed, (as he proved it alſo before) and that he accounteth all our miſeries his own, to call us boldly to him.

A. D. 64.

16 Let us therefore go boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and find grace to help in the time of need.

CHAP. V.

1 Firſt he ſheweth the duty of the high prieſt: 5 Secondly, that Chriſt is appointed of God to be our high Prieſt, 7 and that he hath fulfilled all things belonging thereunto.

FOR [1] every high prieſt is taken from among men, and is ordained for men, in things pertaining to God, [2] that he may offer both [a] gifts and [b] ſacrifices for ſins,

2 Which is [c] able ſufficiently to have compaſſion [d] on them that are ignorant, and that are out of the way, becauſe that he is alſo [e] compaſſed with infirmity,

3 And for the ſame's ſake he is bound to offer for ſins, as well for his own part, as for the people's.

4 * [3] And no man taketh this honour unto himſelf, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

* 1 Chron. 13. 10. and 23. 13.

5 So likewiſe Chriſt took not to himſelf this honour, to be made the high prieſt: but he that ſaid unto him, * Thou art my Son, this day begat I thee, gave it him.

6 As he alſo in another place ſpeaketh, * Thou art a prieſt for ever, after the [f] order of Melchiſedek:

* Pſ. 2. 7. Ch. 1. 5. Pſ. 110. 4. Ch. 7. 17. * Ch. 7. 15.

7 [4] Who in the [g] days of his fleſh did offer up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears, unto him that was able to [h] ſave him from death, and was alſo heard in that which he feared.

8 And though he were the Son, yet [i] learned he obedience by the things which he ſuffered.

9 [5] And being [k] conſecrate, was made the author of eternal ſalvation unto all them that obey him:

10 And is called of God an high prieſt after the order of Melchiſedek:

11 [6] Of whom we have many things to ſay, which are hard to be uttered, becauſe ye are dull of hearing.

A. D. 64.

12 [7] For when as concerning the time ye ought to be teachers, yet have ye need again that we teach you what are the firſt principles of the word of God: and are become ſuch as have need of milk, and not of ſtrong meat.

13 For every one that uſeth milk, is inexpert in the [l] word of righteouſneſs: for he is a babe.

14 But ſtrong meat belongeth to them that are of age, which through long cuſtom have their [m] wits exerciſed to diſcern both good and evil.

CHAP. VI.

1 He briefly toucheth the childiſh ſlothfulneſs of the Hebrews, 4 and terrifieth them with ſevere threatenings: 7 He ſtirreth them up to endeavour in time to go forward: 9 He hopeth well of them: 13 He alledgeth Abraham's example, 17 and compareth faith that taketh hold on the word, 19 unto an anchor.

THerefore, leaving the doctrine of the [a] beginnings of Chriſt, let us be led forward unto perfection, [1] not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,

2 Of the doctrine of baptiſm, and laying on of hands, and of the reſurrection from the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do if God permit:

4 [2] * For it is [b] impoſſible that they which were once lightened, and have [c] taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt,

* Ch. 10. 26. Matt. 1. 45. 2 Pet. 2. 20.

5 And have taſted of the good word of God, and of the powers of the world to come,

6 If they fall away, ſhould be renewed again by repentance: ſeeing they [d] crucify again to themſelves the Son of God, and make a mock of him:

---

[1] The firſt part of the firſt compariſon of Chriſt's high prieſthood with Aaron's: Other high prieſts are taken from among men, and are called after the order of men.

[2] The firſt part of the ſecond compariſon: Others as weak are made high prieſts, to the end that feeling the ſame infirmity in themſelves which is in all the reſt of the people, they ſhould in their own and the people's name offer gifts and ſacrifices, which are witneſſes of common faith and repentance.

[a] Offering of things without life.

[b] Beaſts which were killed, but eſpecially in the ſacrifices for ſins and offences.

[c] Fit and meet.

[d] On them that are ſinful: for in the Hebrew tongue, under ignorance and error is every ſin meant, even that ſin that is voluntary.

[e] For that he himſelf beareth about with him a nature ſubject to the ſame diſcommodities and vices.

[3] The third compariſon which is whole. The others are called of God, and ſo was Chriſt, but in another order than Aaron: for Chriſt is called the Son, begotten of God, and a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedek.

[f] After the likeneſs or manner as it is afterward declared.

[4] The other part of the ſecond compariſon: Chriſt being exceedingly afflicted, and exceedingly merciful, aſked not for his ſins, for he had none, but for his fear, and obtained his requeſt, and offered himſelf for all his.

[g] While he lived here with us, in our weak and frail nature.

[h] To deliver him from death.

[i] He learned indeed what it is to have a Father, whom a man muſt obey.

[5] The other part of the firſt compariſon. But Chriſt was conſecrate of God the Father as the author of our ſalvation, and an high prieſt for ever, and therefore he is ſo a man, that notwithſtanding he is far above all men.

[k] Look chap. 2. 10.

[6] A digreſſion until he come to the beginning of the ſeventh chapter: wherein he partly holdeth the Hebrews in the diligent conſideration of thoſe things which he hath ſaid, and partly prepareth them to the underſtanding of thoſe things whereof he will ſpeak.

[7] An example of an apoſtolic chiding.

[l] In the word which teacheth righteouſneſs.

[m] All their power whereby they underſtand and judge.

[a] The firſt principles of Chriſtian religion, which we do call the catechiſm.

[1] Certain principles of a catechiſm, which comprehend the ſum of the doctrine of the goſpel, were given in few words, and briefly to the rude and ignorant, to wit, the profeſſion of repentance and faith in God: the articles of which doctrine, were demanded of them which were not as yet received members of the church, at the days appointed for baptiſm: and of the children of the faithful which were baptized in their infancy, when hands were laid upon them. And of thoſe articles, two are by name recited: the reſurrection of the fleſh, and the eternal judgment.

[2] He addeth a vehemency to his exhortation, and a moſt ſharp threatening of the certain deſtruction that ſhall come to them which fall from God and his religion.

[b] He ſpeaketh of a general backſliding, and ſuch as do altogether fall away from the faith, and not of ſins which are committed through the frailty of a man againſt the firſt and ſecond table.

[c] We muſt mark the force of this word, for it is one thing to believe as Lydia did, whoſe heart God opened, Acts 16. 13. and another thing to have ſome taſte.

[d] As men that hate Chriſt, and, as though they crucified him again, make him a mocking-ſtock to all the world, and that to their own deſtruction, as Julian the apoſtate or backſlider did.

A. D. 64.

7 [3] For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dreſſed, receiveth bleſſing of God:

8 But that which beareth thorns and briers, is reproved, and is near unto curſing, whoſe end is to be burned.

9 [4] But beloved, we have perſuaded ourſelves better things of you, and ſuch as accompany ſalvation, though we thus ſpeak:

10 [5] For God is not unrighteous that he ſhould forget your work, and labour of love, which ye ſhewed toward his name, in that ye have miniſtered unto the ſaints, and yet miniſter.

11 And we deſire that every one of you ſhew the ſame diligence, to the full aſſurance of hope unto the end:

12 [6] That ye be not ſlothful, but followers of them which through faith and patience inherit the promiſes.

13 [7] For when God made the promiſe to Abraham, becauſe he had no greater to ſwear by, he ſware by himſelf,

14 Saying, * Surely I will [e] abundantly bleſs thee, and multiply thee marvellouſly:

* Gen. 12. 2. and 17. 4. and 22. 17.

15 And ſo after that he had tarried patiently, he enjoyed the promiſe.

16 For men verily ſwear by him that is greater than themſelves, and an oath for confirmation is among them an end of all ſtrife.

17 So God, willing more [f] abundantly to ſhew unto the heirs of promiſe the ſtableneſs of his counſel, bound himſelf by an oath,

18 That by two immutable things, wherein it is impoſſible that God ſhould lye, we might have ſtrong conſolation, which have our refuge to lay hold upon that hope that is ſet before us:

19 [8] Which hope we have as an anchor of the ſoul, both ſure and ſtedfaſt, and it entereth into that which is within the vail,

20 [9] Whither the forerunner is for us entered in, even Jeſus, that is made an high prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedec.

A. D. 64.

CHAP. VII.

1 He hath hitherto ſtirred them up, to mark diligently what things are to be conſidered in Melchiſedec, 15 whereunto he is like unto Chriſt, 20 wherefore the law ſhould give place to the goſpel.

FOR this [1] Melchiſedec * was king of Salem, the prieſt of the moſt high God, who met Abraham, as he returned from the ſlaughter of the kings, and [a] bleſſed him:

* Gen. 14. 18.

2 To whom alſo Abraham gave the tithe of all things: who firſt is by interpretation king of righteouſneſs: after that he is alſo king of Salem, that is, king of peace:

3 [2] Without father, without mother, without kindred, and hath neither beginning of his days, neither end of life: but is likened unto the Son of God, and continueth a prieſt for ever.

4 [3] Now conſider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tithe of the ſpoils.

5 For verily they which are the children of Levi, which receive the office of the prieſthood, have a * commandment to take, according to the law, tithes of the people (that is, of their brethren) though they came out of the [b] loins of Abraham.

* Num. 18. 21.

6 But he whoſe kindred is not counted among them, received tithes of Abraham, and bleſſed him that had the promiſes.

7 And [c] without all contradiction the leſs is bleſſed of the greater.

8 And here men that die, receive tithes: but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witneſſed, that he liveth.

9 [4] And to ſay as the thing is, Levi alſo which receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father Abraham, when Melchiſedec met him.

11 [5] If therefore [d] perfection had been by the

---

[3] He ſetteth forth the former threatening with a ſimilitude.

[4] He mitigateth and aſſuageth all that ſharpneſs, hoping better of them to whom he writeth.

[5] He praiſeth them for their charity, thereby encouraging them to go forward, and to hold out to the end.

[6] He ſheweth what virtues chiefly they have need of to go forward conſtantly, and alſo to profit: to wit, of charity, and patience: and leſt any man ſhould object and ſay, that theſe things are impoſſible to be done, he willeth them to ſet before themſelves the examples of their anceſtors, and to follow them.

[7] Another prick, to prick them forward: Becauſe the hope of the inheritance is certain, if we continue to the end, for God hath not only promiſed it, but alſo promiſed it with an oath.

[e] I will heap up benefits moſt plentifully upon thee.

[f] More than was needful, were it not for the wickedneſs of men which believe not God, no, though he ſwear.

[8] He likeneth hope to an anchor: becauſe that even as an anchor, being caſt into the bottom of the ſea, ſtayeth the whole ſhip, ſo doth hope alſo enter even into the very ſecret places of heaven. And he maketh mention of the ſanctuary, alluding to the old tabernacle, and by this means returneth to the compariſons of the prieſthood of Chriſt with the Levitical.

[9] He repeateth David's words, wherein all thoſe compariſons, whereof he hath before made mention, are ſignified, as he declareth in all the next chapter.

[1] Declaring thoſe words, 'according to the order of Melchiſedec,' whereupon that compariſon ſtandeth of the prieſthood of Chriſt with the Levitical: firſt, Melchiſedec himſelf is conſidered as the figure of Chriſt, and theſe are the heads of that compariſon: Melchiſedec was a king and a prieſt, and ſuch an one indeed is Chriſt alone. He was a king of peace and righteouſneſs, ſuch an one indeed is Chriſt alone.

[a] With a ſolemn and prieſtly bleſſing.

[2] Another figure: Melchiſedec is ſet before us to be conſidered as one without beginning and without ending, for neither his father, nor his mother, nor his anceſtors, nor his death, are written of: and ſuch an one indeed is the Son of God, to wit, an everlaſting Prieſt: as he is God, without mother wonderfully begotten: as he is man, without father wonderfully conceived.

[3] Another figure: Melchiſedec in conſideration of his prieſthood was above Abraham: for he took tenths of him, and bleſſed him as a prieſt: ſuch a one indeed is Chriſt, upon whom dependeth even Abraham's ſanctification, and all the believers, and whom all men ought to worſhip and reverence as the author of all.

[b] Were begotten of Abraham.

[c] He ſpeaketh of the public bleſſing which the prieſts uſed.

[4] A double amplification: The firſt, that Melchiſedec took the tenths as one immortal (to wit, in reſpect that he is the figure of Chriſt, for his death is in no place made mention of, and David ſetteth him forth as an everlaſting prieſt) but the Levitical prieſts as mortal men, for they ſucceed one another: the ſecond, that Levi himſelf was tithed in Abraham by Melchiſedec. Therefore the prieſthood of Melchiſedec (that is, Chriſt's, who is pronounced to be an everlaſting prieſt according to this order) is more excellent than the Levitical.

[5] The third treatiſe of this epiſtle, wherein after he hath proved Chriſt to be a King, a Prophet and Prieſt, he now handleth diſtinctly the condition and excellency of all theſe offices, ſhewing that all theſe were but ſhadows in all others, but in Chriſt they are true and perfect. And he beginneth with the prieſthood, wherewith alſo the former treatiſe ended, that by this means all the parts and members of the diſputation may better hang together. And firſt of all he proveth that the Levitical prieſthood was imperfect, becauſe another prieſt is promiſed a long time after, and according to another order, that is to ſay, of another manner of rule and faſhion.

[d] If the prieſthood of Levi could have made any man perfect.

A. D. 64.

prieſthood of the Levites (for under it the law was eſtabliſhed to the people) what needed it furthermore that another prieſt ſhould riſe after the order of Melchiſedec, and not to be called after the order of Aaron?

12 [6] For if the prieſthood be changed, then of neceſſity muſt there be a change of the [e] law.

13 For he of whom theſe things are ſpoken, pertaineth unto another tribe, whereof no man [f] ſerved at the altar:

14 For it is evident, that our Lord ſprung out of Judah, concerning the which tribe Moſes ſpake nothing touching the prieſthood.

15 [7] And it is yet a more evident thing, becauſe that after the ſimilitude of Mechiſedec there is riſen up another prieſt,

16 [8] Which is not made prieſt after the [g] law of the carnal commandment, but after the power of the endleſs life.

* Pſ. 110. 4.
* Ch. 5. 6.

17 For he teſtifieth thus, * Thou art a prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedec.

18 [9] For the [h] commandment that went afore, is diſannulled, becauſe of the weakneſs thereof, and unprofitableneſs.

19 For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope made perfect, whereby we draw near unto God.

20 [10] And foraſmuch as it is not without an oath (for theſe are made prieſts without an oath:

* Pſ. 110. 4.

21 But this is made with an oath by him that ſaid unto him, * The Lord hath ſworn, and will not repent, Thou art a prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedec,)

22 By ſo much is Jeſus made a ſurety of a better teſtament.

23 [11] And among them many were made prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to endure, by the reaſon of death:

24 But this man, becauſe he endureth ever, hath a prieſthood which [i] cannot paſs from one to another.

A. D. 64.

25 Wherefore, he is [k] able alſo perfectly to ſave them that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.

26 [12] For ſuch an high prieſt it became us to have, which is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens:

* Lev. 16. 11.

27 Which needeth not daily, as thoſe high prieſts, to offer up ſacrifice, * firſt for his own ſins, and then for the people's: [13] for [l] that did he [m] once, when he offered up himſelf.

28 For the law maketh men high prieſts, which have infirmity: but the [n] word of the oath [14] that [o] was ſince the law, maketh the Son, who is conſecrated for evermore.

CHAP. VIII.

1 To prove more certainly that the ceremonies of the law are abrogated, 5 he ſheweth that they were appointed to ſerve the heavenly pattern: 8 he bringeth in the place of Jeremiah, 15 to prove the amendment of the old covenant.

NOW [1] of the things which we have ſpoken, this is the ſum, that we have ſuch an high prieſt, that ſitteth at the right hand of the throne of the majeſty in heavens,

2 [2] And is a miniſter of the [a] ſanctuary, [3] and of that [b] true tabernacle which the Lord pitched, and not man:

3 [4] For every high prieſt is ordained to offer both gifts and ſacrifices: wherefore it was of neceſſity that this man ſhould have ſomewhat alſo to offer:

4 [5] For he were not a prieſt, if he were on the

---

[6] He ſheweth how that by the inſtitution of the new prieſthood, not only the imperfection of the prieſthood of Levi was declared, but alſo that it was changed for this: for theſe two cannot ſtand together, becauſe that firſt appointment of the tribe of Levi did ſhut forth the tribe, of Juda, and made it alſo inferior to Levi: and this latter doth place the prieſthoood in the tribe of Juda.

[e] Of the inſtitution of Aaron.

[f] Had any thing to do about the altar.

[7] Leſt any man might object, that the prieſthood indeed was tranſlated from Levi to Juda, but yet notwithſtanding the ſame remaineth ſtill, he both weigheth and expoundeth thoſe words of David, 'for ever according to the order of Melchiſedec,' whereby alſo adiverſe inſtitution of prieſthood is well perceived.

[8] He proveth the diverſity and excellency of the inſtitution of Melchiſedec's prieſthood, by this, that the prieſthood of the law did ſtand upon an outward and bodily anointing: but the ſacrifice of Melchiſedec is ſet out to be everlaſting and more ſpiritual.

[g] Not after the ordination, which commandeth frail and tranſitory things, as was done in Aaron's conſecration, and all that whole prieſthood.

[9] Again, that no man might object that the laſt prieſthood was added to make a perfect one, by the coupling of them both together, he proveth that the firſt was abrogated by the latter, as unprofitable, and that by the nature of them both. For how could thoſe corporal and tranſitory things ſanctify us, either of themſelves, or being joined with another?

[h] The ceremonial law.

[10] Another argument, whereby he proveth that the prieſthood of Chriſt is better than the prieſthood of Levi, becauſe his was eſtabliſhed with an oath, but theirs was not ſo.

[11] Another argument tending to the ſame purpoſe. The Levitical prieſts (as mortal men) could not be everlaſting; but Chriſt, as he is everlaſting, ſo hath he alſo an everlaſting prieſthood, making moſt effectual interceſſion for them which by him come unto God.

[i] Which cannot paſs away.

[k] He is fit and meet.

[12] Another argument: There are required in an high prieſt, innocency and perfect pureneſs, which may ſeparate him from ſinners, for whom he offereth. But the Levitical high prieſts ſhall not be found to be ſuch, for they offer firſt for their own ſins: but Chriſt only is ſuch a one, and therefore the true and only high Prieſt.

[13] Another argument, which notwithſtanding he handleth afterward: The Levitical prieſts offered ſacrifice after ſacrifice, firſt for themſelves, and then for the people. But Chriſt offered not for himſelf, but for others; not ſacrifices, but himſelf; not oftentimes, but once. And this ought not to ſeem ſtrange, ſaith he, foraſmuch as they are weak, but this man is conſecrate an everlaſting prieſt, and that by an oath.

[l] That ſacrifice which he offered.

[m] It was ſo done, that it needeth not to be repeated or offered again any more.

[n] The commandment of God, which was bound with an oath.

[14] Another argument taken of the time: former things are taken away by the latter.

[o] Exhibited.

[1] He briefly repeateth that, whereunto all theſe things are to be referred, to wit, that we have a far other high prieſt than thoſe Levitical high prieſts are, even ſuch an one as ſitteth at the right hand of the moſt high God in heaven.

[2] They of Levi were high prieſts in an earthly ſanctuary, but Chriſt is in the heavenly.

[a] Of heaven.

[3] They of Levi exerciſed their prieſthood in a frail tabernacle, but Chriſt beareth about with him a far other tabernacle, to wit, his body, which God himſelf made to be everlaſting, as it ſhall afterward be declared, chap. 9. 11.

[b] Of his body.

[4] He bringeth a reaſon, why it muſt needs be that Chriſt ſhould have a body, which he calleth a Tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man) to wit, that he might have what to offer: for otherwiſe he could not be an high prieſt. And the ſelf-ſame body is both the tabernacle and the ſacrifice.

[5] He giveth a reaſon, why he ſaid that our high prieſt is in the heavenly ſanctuary, and not in the earthly: becauſe,

A. D. 64.

the earth, ſeeing there are prieſts that according to the law offer gifts,

5 Who ſerve unto the pattern and ſhadow of heavenly things, as Moſes was warned by God, when he was about to finiſh the tabernacle. * See, ſaid he, that thou make all things according to the pattern ſhewed to thee in the mount.

* Exod. 25. 40. Acts 7. 44.

6 [6] But now our high prieſt hath obtained a more excellent office, inaſmuch as he is the Mediator of a better teſtament, which is eſtabliſhed upon better promiſes.

7 [7] For if that firſt teſtament had been unblameable, no place ſhould have been ſought for the ſecond.

8 For in rebuking them he ſaith, * Behold, the days will come, ſaith the Lord, when I ſhall make with the [c] houſe of Iſrael, and with the houſe of Judah, a new teſtament:

* Jer. 31. 31, 32, 33, 34. Rom. 11. 27. Ch. 10. 16.

9 Not like the teſtament that I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand, to lead them out of the land of Egypt: for they continued not in my teſtament, and I regarded them not, ſaith the Lord.

10 For this is the teſtament that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael, After thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my laws in their mind, and in their heart I will write them, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people:

11 And they ſhall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, ſaying, Know the Lord: for all ſhall know me, from the leaſt of them to the greateſt of them.

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteouſneſs, and I will remember their ſins and their iniquities no more.

13 [8] In that he ſaith, a new teſtament, he hath abrogated the old: now that which is diſannulled and waxed old, is ready to vaniſh away.

CHAP IX.

2 Comparing the form of the tabernacle, 10 and the ceremonies of the law, 11 unto the truth ſet out in Chriſt, 15 he concludeth that now there is no more need of another prieſt, 24 becauſe Chriſt himſelf hath fulfilled theſe duties under the new covenant.

THEN [1] the firſt teſtament had alſo ordinances of religion, and a [a] worldly ſanctuary.

2 For the firſt tabernacle was made, wherein was the candleſtick, and the table, and the ſhewbread, which tabernacle is called the holy places.

3 And after [b] the ſecond vail was the tabernacle, which is called the [c] holieſt of all,

4 Which had the golden cenſer, and the ark of the teſtament overlaid round about with gold, wherein the golden pot which had manna was, and * Aaron's rod that had budded, and the * tables of the teſtament.

* Num. 17. 10. * 1 Kings 8. 9. 2 Chron. 5. 10.

5 * And over the ark were the glorious cherubims, ſhadowing the [d] mercy ſeat: of which things we will not now ſpeak particularly.

* Exod. 25. 22.

6 [2] Now when theſe things were thus ordained, the prieſts went always into the firſt tabernacle, and accompliſhed the ſervice.

7 But into the ſecond went the * high prieſt alone, once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himſelf, and for the [e] ignorances of the people.

* Exod. 30. 10. Lev. 16. 2.

8 [3] Whereby the Holy Ghoſt this ſignified, that the way into the holieſt of all was not yet opened, while as yet the firſt tabernacle was ſtanding,

9 [4] Which was a figure [f] for that preſent time, wherein were offered gifts and ſacrifices that could not make holy, concerning the conſcience, him that did the ſervice,

10 [5] Which only ſtood in meats and drinks, and divers waſhings, and carnal rites, [g] which were enjoined, until the time of reformation.

11 [6] But Chriſt being come an high prieſt of good things to come, [7] by a [h] greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is not of this building, cauſe, ſaith he, if he were now on the earth, he could not miniſter in the earthly ſanctuary, ſeeing there are yet Levitical prieſts which are appointed for him, that is to ſay, to be patterns of that perfect example. And to what purpoſe ſhould the patterns ſerve, when the true original example is preſent?

[6] He entereth into the compariſon of the old and tranſitory teſtament or covenant, being but for a time, whereof the Levitical prieſts were mediators, with the new, the everlaſting mediator whereof is Chriſt, to ſhew, that this is not only better than that in all reſpects, but alſo that that was abrogated by this.

[7] He proveth by the teſtimony of Jeremiah, that there is a ſecond teſtament or covenant, and therefore that the firſt was not perfect.

[c] He calleth it an houſe, as it were one family of the whole kingdom: for whereas the kingdom of David was divided into two factions, the prophet giveth us to underſtand, that through the New Teſtament they ſhall be joined together again in one.

[8] The concluſion therefore by the latter and the new, the firſt and old is taken away, for it could not be called new, if it differed not from the old; and again, that ſame is at length taken away, which is ſubject to corruption, and therefore imperfect.

[1] A diviſion of the firſt tabernacle, which he calleth worldly, that is to ſay, tranſitory, and earthly, into two parts, to wit, into the holy places, and the holieſt of all.

[a] An earthly and a flitting.

[b] He calleth it the ſecond vail, not becauſe there were two vails, but becauſe it was behind the ſanctuary, or the firſt tabernacle.

[c] The holieſt ſanctuary.

[d] The Hebrews call the cover of the ark of the covenant, the mercy ſeat, whom both the Grecians and we follow.

[2] Now he cometh to the ſacrifices, which he divideth into thoſe daily ſacrifices, and that yearly and ſolemn ſacrifice, with the which the high prieſt only but once every year, entering into the holieſt of all with blood, offered for himſelf and the people.

[e] For the ſins, look chap. 5. 2.

[3] Of that yearly rite and the ceremony, he gathereth that the way was not by ſuch ſacrifices opened into heaven, which was ſhadowed by the holieſt of all: for why did the high prieſt alone enter in thither, ſhutting out all other, and that to offer ſacrifices there both for himſelf, and for others, and after, did ſhut the Holieſt of all again?

[4] An objection: If the way were not opened into heaven by thoſe ſacrifices (that is to ſay, if the worſhippers were not purged by them) why then were thoſe ceremonies uſed? To wit, that men might be called back to that ſpiritual example, that is to ſay, to Chriſt, who ſhould correct all thoſe things at his coming.

[f] For that time that that figure had to laſt.

[5] Another reaſon why they could not make clean the conſcience of the worſhippers, to wit, becauſe they were outward and carnal, or corporal things.

[g] For they were, as you would ſay, a burden, from which Chriſt delivered us.

[6] Now he entereth into the declaration of the figures, and firſt of all comparing the Levitical high prieſt with Chriſt, (that is to ſay, the figure with the thing itſelf) he attributeth to Chriſt the adminiſtration of good things to come; that is, everlaſting, which thoſe carnal things had reſpect unto.

[7] Another compariſon of the firſt corruptible tabernacle with the latter, (that is to ſay, with the human nature of Chriſt) which is the true incorruptible temple of God, whereinto the Son of God entered, as the Levitical high prieſts into the other, which was frail and tranſitory.

[h] By a more excellent and better.

12 [8] Neither by the blood of [i] goats and calves: but by his own blood entered he once into the holy place, and obtained eternal redemption for us.

* Lev. 16. 14. Num. 19. 4.

13 * [9] For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the aſhes of an heifer, ſprinkling them that are unclean, ſanctifieth as touching the [k] purifying of the fleſh,

* 1 Pet. 1. 19. 1 John 1. 7. Rev. 1. 5. * Luke 1. 74.

14 How much more ſhall the * blood of Chriſt, which through the eternal Spirit offered himſelf without fault to God, * purge your conſcience from [l] dead works, to ſerve the living God?

* Rom. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 3. 18.

15 [10] And for this cauſe he is the mediator of the new teſtament, that through * death which was for the redemption of the tranſgreſſions that were in the former teſtament, they which were called might receive the promiſe of eternal inheritance.

16 [11] For where a teſtament is, there muſt be the death of him that made the teſtament.

* Gal. 3. 15.

17 * For the teſtament is confirmed when men are dead: for it is yet of no force as long as he that made it, is alive.

18 [12] Wherefore, neither was the firſt ordained without blood.

19 For when Moſes had ſpoken every precept to the people, [m] according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water and purple wool and hyſſop, and [n] ſprinkled both the book, and all the people,

* Exod. 24. 8.

20 * Saying, This is the blood of the teſtament, which God hath appointed unto you.

21 Moreover, he ſprinkled likewiſe the tabernacle with blood alſo, and all the miniſtring veſſels.

22 And almoſt all things are by the law purged with blood, and without ſhedding of blood is no remiſſion.

23 It was then neceſſary, that the [o] ſimilitudes of heavenly things ſhould be purified with ſuch things: but the heavenly things themſelves are purified with better ſacrifices than are theſe:

24 [13] For Chriſt is not entered into the holy places that are made with hands, which are ſimilitudes of the true ſanctuary: but is entered into very heaven, to appear now in the ſight of God for us,

25 [14] Not that he ſhould offer himſelf often, as the high prieſt entered into the holy place every year with other blood,

26 [15] (For then muſt he have often ſuffered ſince the foundation of the world) but now in the [p] end of the world hath he been made manifeſt once, to put away [q] ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.

27 And as it is appointed unto men that they ſhall [r] once die, and after that cometh the judgment:

* Rom. 5. 8. 1 Pet. 3. 18.

28 So * Chriſt was once offered to take away the ſins of [s] many, [16] and unto them that look for him, ſhall he appear the ſecond time without ſin unto ſalvation.

CHAP.

---

[8] Another compariſon of the blood of the ſacrifices with Chriſt. The Levitical high prieſts entering by thoſe their holy places into their ſanctuary, offered corruptible blood for one year only: but Chriſt entering into that holy body of his, entered by it into heaven itſelf, offering his own moſt pure blood for an everlaſting redemption: For one ſelf ſame Chriſt anſwereth both to the high prieſt, and the tabernacle, and the ſacrifices, and the offerings themſelves, as the truth to the figures; ſo that Chriſt is both high prieſt, and tabernacle, and ſacrifice, yea, all thoſe both truly and for ever.

[i] For in this yearly ſacrifice of reconciliation, there were two kinds of ſacrifices, the one a goat, the other a heifer, or calf.

[9] If the outward ſprinkling of blood and aſhes of beaſts was a true and effectual ſign of purifying and cleanſing, how much more ſhall the thing itſelf, and the truth being preſent, which in times paſt was ſhadowed by thoſe external ſacraments, that is to ſay, his blood, which is in ſuch ſort man's blood, that it is alſo the blood of the Son of God, and therefore hath an everlaſting virtue of purifying and cleanſing, do it?

[k] He conſidereth the ſigns apart, being ſeparate from the thing itſelf.

[l] From ſins, which proceed from death, and bring forth nothing but death.

[10] The concluſion of the former argument: therefore ſeeing the blood of beaſts did not purge ſins, the New Teſtament, which was before time promiſed, whereunto thoſe outward things had reſpect, is now indeed eſtabliſhed, by the virtue whereof all tranſgreſſions might be taken away, and heaven indeed opened unto us: whereof it followeth, that Chriſt ſhed his blood alſo for the fathers, for he was ſhadowed by theſe old ceremonies; otherwiſe, unleſs they had ſerved to repreſent him, they had been nothing at all profitable. Therefore this Teſtament is called the latter, not as concerning the virtue of it, (that is to ſay, remiſſion of ſins) but in reſpect of that time, wherein the thing itſelf was finiſhed, that is to ſay, wherein Chriſt was indeed exhibited to the world, and fulfilled all things which were neceſſary to our ſalvation.

[11] A reaſon why the Teſtament muſt be eſtabliſhed by the death of the Mediator, becauſe this Teſtament hath the condition of a Teſtament or gift, which is made effectual by death; and therefore that it might be effectual, it muſt needs be that he that made the Teſtament ſhould die.

[12] There muſt be a proportion between thoſe things which purify, and thoſe which are purified: Under the law all thoſe figures were earthly: the tabernacle, the book, the veſſels, the ſacrifices, although they were the ſigns of heavenly things. Therefore it was requiſite, that all thoſe ſhould be purified with ſome matter and ceremony of the ſame nature, to wit, with the blood of beaſts, with water, wool, hyſſop. But under Chriſt all things are heavenly, an heavenly tabernacle, an heavenly ſacrifice, an heavenly people, an heavenly doctrine, and heaven itſelf is ſet open before us for an everlaſting habitation. Therefore all theſe things are ſanctified in like ſort, to wit, with that everlaſting offering of the quickening blood of Chriſt.

[m] As the Lord had commanded.

[n] He uſed to ſprinkle.

[o] The ſimilitudes of heavenly things were earthly, and therefore they were to be ſet forth with earthly things, as with the blood of beaſts, and wool, and hyſſop. But under Chriſt all things are heavenly, and therefore they could not but be ſanctified with the offering of his lively blood.

[13] Another double compariſon: The Levitical high prieſt entered into the ſanctuary, which was made indeed by the commandment of God, but yet with men's hands, that it might be a pattern of another more excellent, to wit, of the heavenly palace. But Chriſt entered into heaven itſelf. Again, he appeared before the ark, but Chriſt before God the Father himſelf.

[14] Another double compariſon: The Levitical high prieſt offered other blood, but Chriſt offered his own: He every year once iterated his offering: Chriſt offering himſelf but once, aboliſhed ſin altogether, both of the former ages, and of the ages to come.

[15] An argument to prove that Chriſt's offering ought not to be repeated: Seeing that ſins were to be purged from the beginning of the world, and it is proved that ſins cannot be purged but by the only blood of Chriſt: he muſt needs have died oftentimes, ſince the beginning of the world. But a man can die but once: therefore Chriſt's oblation, which was once done in the latter days, neither could nor can be repeated. Seeing then it is ſo, ſurely the virtue of it extendeth both to ſins that were before, and to ſins that are after his coming.

[p] In the latter days.

[q] That whole root of ſin.

[r] He ſpeaketh of the natural ſtate and condition of man: For as for Lazarus, and certain others that died twice, that was no uſual thing, but extraordinary: and as for them that ſhall be changed, their changing is a kind of death, 1 Cor. 15. 51.

[s] Thus the general promiſe is reſtrained to the elect only: and we have to ſeek the teſtimony of our election, not in the ſecret counſel of God, but in the effects that our faith worketh; and ſo we muſt climb up from the loweſt ſtep to the higheſt, there to find ſuch comfort as is moſt certain, and ſhall never be moved.

[16] Shortly by the way he ſetteth out Chriſt as a judge, partly to terrify them, which do not reſt themſelves in the only oblation of Chriſt once made, and partly to keep the faithful in their duty, that they go not back.

CHAP. X.

1 He proveth that the ſacrifices of the law were imperfect, 2 becauſe they were yearly renewed. 5 But that the ſacrifice of Chriſt is one, and perpetual, 6 he proveth by David's teſtimony: 19 Then he addeth an exhortation, 29 and ſeverely threateneth them that reject the grace of Chriſt. 36 In the end he praiſeth patience, 38 that cometh of faith.

FOR [1] the law having the ſhadow of good things to [a] come, and not the very image of the things, can never with thoſe ſacrifices, which they offer year by year continually, ſanctify the comers thereunto:

2 For would they not then have ceaſed to have been offered, becauſe that the offerers once purged, ſhould have no more conſcience of ſins?

3 But in thoſe ſacrifices there is a remembrance again of ſins every year.

4 For it is impoſſible that the blood of bulls and goats ſhould take away ſins.

5 [2] Wherefore when he [b] cometh into the world, he ſaith, * Sacrifice and offering thou wouldeſt not: but a [c] body haſt thou ordained me. * Pſ. 40. 7.

6 In burnt-offerings and ſin-offerings thou haſt had no pleaſure.

7 Then I ſaid, Lo, I come (In the beginning of the book it is written of me) that I ſhould do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he ſaid, Sacrifice and offering, and burnt-offerings, and ſin-offerings thou wouldeſt not have, neither hadſt pleaſure therein (which are offered by the law)

9 Then ſaid he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God: he taketh away the [d] firſt, that he may ſtabliſh the ſecond.

10 By the which will we are ſanctified, even by the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once made.

11 [3] And every prieſt ſtandeth [e] daily miniſtering, and oft-times offereth one manner of offering, which can never take away ſins.

12 But this man, after he had offered one ſacrifice for ſins, * ſitteth for ever at the right hand of God, * Ch. 1. 13. Pſ. 110. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 25.

13 [4] And from henceforth tarrieth, * till his enemies be made his footſtool. * Ch. 1. 13.

14 For with one offering hath he conſecrated for ever them that are ſanctified.

15 [5] For the Holy Ghoſt alſo beareth us record: for after that he had ſaid before,

16 * This is the teſtament that I will make unto them after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my laws in their heart, and in their minds I will write them, * Jer. 31. 33. Rom. 11. 27. Ch. 8. 8.

17 And their ſins and iniquities will I remember [f] no more.

18 Now where remiſſion of theſe things is, there is no more offering for [g] ſin.

19 [6] Seeing therefore, brethren, that by the blood of Jeſus we may be bold to enter into the holy place,

20 By the new and living way, which he hath prepared for us, through the vail, that is, his [h] fleſh:

21 And ſeeing we have an high prieſt, which is over the houſe of God,

22 [7] Let us draw near with a [i] true heart in aſſurance of faith, our [k] hearts being pure from an evil conſcience:

23 And waſhed in our bodies with [l] pure water, let us keep the profeſſion of our hope, without wavering, (for he is faithful that promiſed)

---

[1] He preventeth a privy objection. Why then were thoſe ſacrifices offered? The apoſtle anſwereth, firſt touching that yearly ſacrifice which was the ſolemneſt of all, wherein (ſaith he) there was made every year a remembrance again of all former ſins. Therefore that ſacrifice had no power to ſanctify: for to what purpoſe ſhould thoſe ſins which are purged be repeated again; and wherefore ſhould new ſins come to be repeated every year, if thoſe ſacrifices did aboliſh ſin?

[a] Of things which are everlaſting, which were promiſed to the fathers, and exhibited in Chriſt.

[2] A concluſion following of thoſe things that went before, and comprehending alſo the other ſacrifices. Seeing that the ſacrifices of the law could not do it, therefore Chriſt ſpeaking of himſelf as of our high prieſt, manifeſted in the fleſh, witneſſeth evidently that God reſted not in the ſacrifices, but in the obedience of his Son, our high prieſt, in whoſe obedience he offered up himſelf once to his Father for us.

[b] The Son of God is ſaid to come into the world, when he was made man.

[c] It is word for word in the Hebrew text, Thou haſt pierced mine ears through, that is, thou haſt made me obedient, and willing to hear.

[d] That is, the ſacrifices, to eſtabliſh the ſecond, that is, the will of God.

[3] A concluſion with the other part of the compariſon: The Levitical high prieſt repeateth the ſame ſacrifices daily in his ſanctuary: whereupon it followeth, that neither thoſe ſacrifices, neither thoſe offerings, neither thoſe high prieſts, could take away ſins. But Chriſt having offered one ſacrifice once for the ſins of all men, and having ſanctified his own for ever, ſitteth at the right hand of the Father, having all power in his hands.

[e] At the altar.

[4] He preventeth a privy objection, to wit, that yet notwithſtanding we are ſubject to ſin and death: whereunto the apoſtle anſwereth, that the full efficacy of Chriſt's virtue hath not yet ſhewed itſelf, but ſhall at length appear, when he will at once put to flight all his enemies, with whom as yet we ſtrive.

[5] Although there do yet remain in us reliques of ſin, yet the work of our ſanctification which is to be perfected, hangeth upon the ſelf ſame ſacrifice, which never ſhall be repeated: and that the apoſtle proveth by alledging again the teſtimony of Jeremy, thus: Sin is taken away by the New Teſtament, ſeeing the Lord ſaith, that it ſhall come to paſs, that, according to the form of it, he will no more remember our ſins: Therefore we need now no purging ſacrifice to take away that which is already taken away; but we muſt rather take pains, that we may now through faith be partakers of that ſacrifice.

[f] Why then, where is the fire of purgatory, and that Popiſh diſtinction of the fault, and the puniſhment?

[g] He ſaid well, for ſin: for there remaineth another offering, to wit, of thankſgiving.

[6] The ſum of the former treatiſe: We are not ſhut out now of the holy place, as the fathers were, but we have an entrance into the true holy place (that is, into heaven) ſeeing that we are purged with the blood, not of beaſts, but of Jeſus. Neither, as in times paſt, doth the high prieſt ſhut us out, by ſetting the vail againſt us, but through the vail, which is his fleſh, he hath brought us into heaven itſelf, being preſent with us, ſo that we have now truly an high prieſt, which is over the houſe of God.

[h] So Chriſt's fleſh ſheweth us the godhead, as it were under a vail. For otherwiſe we were not able to abide the brightneſs of it.

[7] A moſt grave exhortation, wherein he ſheweth how that ſacrifice of Chriſt may be applied to us: to wit, by faith, which alſo he deſcribeth by the conſequences, to wit, by ſanctification of the Spirit, which cauſeth us ſurely to hope in God, and to procure by all means poſſible one another's ſalvation, through the love that is in us one towards another.

[i] With no double and counterfeit heart, but with ſuch an heart as is truly and indeed given to God.

[k] This is it which the Lord ſaith, Be ye holy, for I am holy.

[l] With the grace of the Holy Ghoſt.

A. D. 64.

24 And let us conſider one another, to provoke unto love, and to good works,

25 Not forſaking the fellowſhip that we have among ourſelves, as the manner of ſome is: but let us exhort one another, [8] and that ſo much the more, becauſe ye ſee that the day draweth near.

* Ch. 6. 4.

26 * For if we ſin [m] willingly after that we have received and acknowledged that truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſins,

27 But a fearful looking for of judgment, and violent fire, which ſhall devour the [n] adverſaries.

* Deut. 19. 15. Matt. 18. 16. John 8. 17. 2 Cor. 13. 1.

28 [9] He that deſpiſeth Moſes's law, dieth without mercy * under two or three witneſſes:

29 Of how much ſorer puniſhment ſuppoſe ye ſhall he be worthy, which treadeth under foot the Son of God, and counteth the blood of the teſtament as an unholy thing, wherewith he was ſanctified, and doth deſpite the Spirit of grace?

* Deut. 32. 35. Rom. 12. 19.

30 [10] For we know him that hath ſaid, * Vengeance belongeth unto me: I will recompenſe, ſaith the Lord. And again, the Lord ſhall [o] judge his people.

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 [11] Now call to remembrance the days that are paſſed, in the which, after ye had received light, ye endured a great fight in afflictions,

33 Partly while ye were made a [p] gazing ſtock both by reproaches and afflictions, and partly while ye became [q] companions of them which were ſo toſſed to and fro.

34 For both ye ſorrowed with me for my bonds, and ſuffered with joy the ſpoiling of your goods, knowing in yourſelves how that ye have in heaven a better, and an enduring [r] ſubſtance.

35 Caſt not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promiſe.

37 For yet a very [s] little while, and he that ſhall come, will come, and will not tarry.

* Hab. 2. 4. Rom. 1. 17. Gal. 3. 11.

38 * [12] Now the juſt ſhall live by faith: but if any withdraw himſelf, my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him.

39 But we are not they which withdraw ourſelves unto perdition, but follow faith unto the conſervation of the ſoul.

CHAP. XI.

A. D. 64.

1 He declareth in the whole chapter, that the fathers, which from the beginning of the world were approved of God, attained ſalvation no other way than by faith, that the Jews may know, that by the ſame only, they are knit unto the fathers in an holy union.

NOW [1] faith is the ground of things which are hoped for, and the evidence of things which are not ſeen.

2 [2] For by it our [a] elders were well reported of.

* Gen. 1. 1. John 1. 10.

3 * [3] Through faith we underſtand that the world was ordained by the word of God, ſo that the things which we [b] ſee, are not made of things which did appear.

* Gen. 4. 4. Matt. 23. 35.

4 [4] By faith Abel * offered unto God a greater ſacrifice than Cain, by the which he obtained witneſs that he was righteous, God teſtifying of his gifts: by the which faith alſo he being dead, yet ſpeaketh.

* Gen. 5. 24.

5 [5] By faith was * Enoch tranſlated, that he ſhould not [c] ſee death: neither was he found: for God had tranſlated him: for before he was tranſlated, he was reported of, that he had pleaſed God.

6 But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him: for he that cometh to God, muſt believe that God is, and that he is a [d] rewarder of them that ſeek him.

* Gen. 6. 13.

7 [6] By faith * Noah, being warned of God of the things which were as yet not ſeen, moved with repentance, prepared the ark to the ſaving of his houſhold, through the which ark he condemned the world, and was made heir of the righteouſneſs which is by faith.

* Gen. 12. 4.

8 [7] By faith * Abraham, when he was called, obeyed God, to go out into a place which he ſhould afterward receive for inheritance: and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he abode in the land of promiſe, as in a ſtrange country, as one that dwelt in tents with Iſaac and Jacob, heirs with him of the ſame promiſe:

10 For he looked for a city having a [e] foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God.

* Gen. 17. 19. and 21. 2.

11 Through faith * Sarah alſo received ſtrength to conceive ſeed, and was delivered of a child when

[8] Having mentioned the laſt coming of Chriſt, he ſtirreth up the godly to the meditation of an holy life, and citeth the faithleſs fallers from God to the fearful judgment ſeat of the Judge, becauſe they wickedly rejected him in whom only ſalvation conſiſteth.

[m] Without any cauſe or occaſion, or ſhew of occaſion.

[n] For it is another matter to ſin through the frailty of man's nature, and another thing to proclaim war as it were to God as to an enemy.

[9] If the breach of the law of Moſes was puniſhed by death, how much more worthy death is it to fall away from Chriſt?

[10] The reaſon of all theſe things is, becauſe God is a revenger of ſuch as deſpiſe him: otherwiſe he ſhould not rightly govern his church. Now there is nothing more horrible than the wrath of the living God.

[o] Rule or govern.

[11] As he terrified the fallers away from God, ſo doth he now comfort them that are conſtant, and ſtand; ſtrongly ſetting before them the ſucceſs of their former fights, ſo ſtirring them up to a ſure hope of a full and ready victory.

[p] You were brought forth to be ſhamed.

[q] In taking their miſeries to be your miſeries.

[r] Goods and riches.

[s] He will come within this very little while.

[12] He commendeth the excellency of a ſure faith by the effect, becauſe it is the only way to life: which ſentence he ſetteth forth, and amplifieth, by ſetting the contrary againſt it.

[1] An excellent deſcription of faith by the effects, becauſe it repreſenteth things which are but yet in hope, and ſetteth, as it were, before our eyes things that are inviſible.

[2] He ſheweth that the fathers ought to be accounted of by this virtue.

[a] That is, thoſe fathers of whom we came: and whoſe authority and example ought to move us very much.

[3] He ſheweth the property of faith, by ſetting out unto us moſt picked examples of ſuch as from the beginning of the world excelled in the church.

[b] So that the world which we ſee, was not made of any matter that appeared, or was before, but of nothing.

[4] Abel.

[5] Enoch.

[c] That he ſhould not die.

[d] This reward is not referred to our merits, but to the free promiſe, as Paul teacheth in Abraham, the father of all the faithful, Rom. 4. 4.

[7] Abraham and Sarah.

Hebrews 11 Ch. V. 17

ABRAHAM's FAITH.

G. Burder sc.

A. D. 64.

when ſhe was paſt age, becauſe ſhe judged him faithful which had promiſed.

12 And therefore ſprang there of one, even of one which was [f] dead, ſo many as the ſtars of the ſky in multitude, and as the ſand of the ſea ſhore which is innumerable.

13 All theſe died in [g] faith, and received not the [h] promiſes, but ſaw them afar off, and believed them, and [i] received them thankfully, and confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and pilgrims on the earth:

14 For they that ſaw ſuch things declare plainly, that they ſeek a country.

15 And if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they had leiſure to have returned.

16 But now they deſire a better, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not aſhamed of them to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.

* Gen. 22. 10.

17 By faith * Abraham offered up Iſaac, when he was [k] tried, and he that had received the [l] promiſes, offered his only begotten ſon,

* Gen. 21. 12. Rom. 9. 7.

18 (To whom it was ſaid, * In Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called)

19 For he conſidered that God was able to raiſe him up even from the dead: from [m] whence he received him alſo after a [n] ſort.

* Gen. 27. 28, 39.

20 [8] By faith * Iſaac bleſſed Jacob and Eſau, concerning things to come.

* Gen. 48. 15. * Gen. 47. 31.

21 [9] By faith * Jacob when he was a dying, bleſſed both the ſons of Joſeph, and * leaning on the end of his ſtaff, worſhipped God.

* Gen. 50. 25.

22 [10] By faith * Joſeph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Iſrael, and gave commandment of his bones.

* Exod. 2. 2. Acts 7. 20. * Exod. 1. 16.

23 [11] * By faith, Moſes, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, becauſe they ſaw he was a proper child, neither [o] feared they the * king's commandment.

* Exod. 2. 11.

24 By faith * Moſes, when he was come to age, refuſed to be called the ſon of Pharaoh's daughter,

25 And choſe rather to ſuffer adverſity with the people of God, than to enjoy the [p] pleaſures of ſins for a ſeaſon,

26 Eſteeming the rebuke of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures of Egypt: for he had reſpect unto the recompence of the reward.

27 By faith he forſook Egypt, and feared not the fierceneſs of the king: for he endured, as he that ſaw him which is inviſible.

A. D. 64.

* Exod. 12. 22.

28 Through faith he ordained the * paſſover, and the effuſion of blood, leſt he that deſtroyed the firſt born ſhould touch them.

* Exod. 14. 22.

29 [12] By faith they * paſſed through the red ſea, as by dry land, which when the Egyptians had aſſayed to do, they were ſwallowed up.

* Joſh. 6. 20.

30 [13] By faith the * walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compaſſed about ſeven days.

* Joſh. 6. 23. * Joſh. 2. 1.

31 [14] By faith the [q] harlot * Rahab periſhed not with them which obeyed not, when * ſhe had received the ſpies [r] peaceably.

* Judg. 6. 11. * Judg. 4. 6. * Judg. 13. 24. * Judg. 11. 1. and 12. 7.

32 [15] And what ſhall I more ſay? for the time would be too ſhort for me to tell of * Gideon, of * Barac, and of * Sampſon, and of * Jepetha, alſo of David, and Samuel, and of the prophets:

33 Which through faith ſubdued kingdoms, wrought righteouſneſs, obtained the [s] promiſes, ſtopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, eſcaped the edge of the ſword, of weak were made ſtrong, waxed valiant in battle, turned to flight the armies of the aliens:

35 The [t] women received their dead raiſed to life: others alſo were [u] racked, and would not be delivered, that they might receive a better reſurrection.

36 And others have been tried by mockings and ſcourgings, yea, moreover by bonds and priſonment:

37 They were ſtoned, they were hewn aſunder, they were tempted, they were ſlain with the ſword, they wandered up and down in [x] ſheeps ſkins, and in goats ſkins, being deſtitute, afflicted, and tormented:

38 Whom the world was not worthy of: they wandered in wilderneſſes, and mountains, and dens, and caves of the earth.

39 [16] And theſe all through faith obtained good report, and received [y] not the promiſe,

40 God providing a better thing for us, that they [z] without us ſhould not be made perfect.

CHAP. XII.

1 He doth not only, by the examples of the fathers before recited, exhort them to patience and conſtancy, 3 but alſo by the example of Chriſt. 11 That the chaſtenings of God cannot be rightly judged by the outward ſenſe of our fleſh.

[f] As unlikely to bear children, as if ſhe had been ſtark dead.

[g] In faith, which they had while they lived, and followed them even to their grave.

[h] This is the figure Metonymia, for the things promiſed.

[i] For the patriarchs were wont, when they received the promiſes, to profeſs their religion, by building of altars, and calling on the name of the Lord.

[k] Tried of the Lord.

[l] Although the promiſes of life were made in that only begotten ſon Iſaac, yet he appointed him to die, and ſo againſt hope believed in hope.

[m] From which death.

[n] For there was not the true and very death of Iſaac, but as it were the death, by means whereof he ſeemed alſo as it were to have riſen again.

[8] Iſaac.

[9] Jacob.

[10] Joſeph.

[11] Moſes.

[o] They were not afraid to bring him up.

[p] Such pleaſures as he could not enjoy, but he muſt needs provoke God's wrath againſt him.

[12] The Red Sea.

[13] Jericho.

[14] Rahab.

[q] A notable example of God's goodneſs.

[r] Courteouſly and friendly, ſo that ſhe did not only not hurt them, but alſo kept them ſafe.

[15] Gideon, Barac, and other judges and prophets.

[s] The fruit of the promiſes.

[t] He ſeemeth to mean the ſtory of that woman of Sarepta, whoſe ſon Elijah raiſed again from death; and the Shunamite, whoſe ſon Eliſha reſtored to his mother.

[u] He meaneth that perſecution which Antiochus wrought.

[x] In vile and rough cloathing: ſo were the ſaints brought to extreme poverty, and conſtrained to live like beaſts in wilderneſſes.

[16] An amplification taken of the circumſtance of the time: their faith is ſo much the more to be marvelled at, by how much the promiſes of things to come were more dark, yet at length were indeed exhibited to us, ſo that their faith and ours is as one, as is alſo their conſecration and ours.

[y] But ſaw Chriſt afar off.

[z] For their ſalvation did hang upon Chriſt, who was exhibited in our days.

A. D. 64.

WHerefore, * [1] let us alſo, ſeeing that we are compaſſed with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, caſt away every thing that preſſeth down, and the ſin that [a] hangeth faſt on: let us run with patience the race that is ſet before us, * Rom. 6. 4. Col. 3. 8. Eph. 4. 24. 1 Pet. 2. 1.

2 [2] [b] Looking unto Jeſus the author and finiſher of our faith, who for the [c] joy that was ſet before him, endured the croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame, and is ſet at the right hand of the throne of God.

3 [3] Conſider therefore him that endured ſuch ſpeaking againſt of ſinners, leſt ye ſhould be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 [4] Ye have not reſiſted yet unto blood, ſtriving againſt ſin.

5 [5] And ye have forgotten the conſolation, which ſpeaketh unto you as unto children, * My ſon, deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of him. * Prov. 3. 11.

6 For whom the Lord loveth, he chaſteneth: and he ſcourgeth every ſon that he receiveth.

7 If ye endure chaſtening, God offereth himſelf unto you as unto ſons: for what ſon is it whom the father chaſteneth not?

8 If therefore ye be without correction, whereof all are partakers, then are ye baſtards, and not ſons.

9 [6] Moreover we have had the fathers of our bodies which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: ſhould we not much rather be in ſubjection unto the Father of ſpirits, that we might live?

10 [7] For they verily for a few days chaſtened us after their own pleaſure: but he chaſteneth us for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holineſs.

11 Now no chaſtening for the preſent ſeemeth to be joyous, but grievous: but afterward it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteouſneſs unto them which are thereby exerciſed.

12 [8] Wherefore lift up your hands which [d] hang down, and your weak knees,

13 And make [e] ſtraight ſteps unto your feet, leſt that which is halting be turned out of the way, but let it rather be healed. A. D. 64.

14 * [9] Follow peace with all men, and holineſs, without the which no man ſhall ſee the Lord. * Rom. 12. 18.

15 [10] Take heed that no man fall away from the grace of God: let no [f] root of bitterneſs ſpring up and trouble you, leſt thereby many be defiled.

16 [11] Let there be no fornicator, or prophane perſon as * Eſau, which for one portion of meat ſold his birth-right: * Gen. 25. 33.

17 * For ye know how that afterward alſo, when he would have inherited the bleſſing, he was rejected: for he found no [g] place to repentance, though he ſought that bleſſing with tears. * Gen. 27. 38.

18 [12] For ye are not come unto the * mount that might be [h] touched, nor unto burning fire, nor to blackneſs and darkneſs, and tempeſt, * Exod. 19. 16.

19 Neither unto the ſound of a trumpet, and the voice of words, which they that heard it, excuſed themſelves, * that the word ſhould not be ſpoken to them any more, * Exod. 20. 19.

20 (For they were not able to abide that which was commanded, * yea, though a beaſt touch the mountain, it ſhall be ſtoned, or thruſt through with a dart: * Exod. 19. 12.

21 And ſo terrible was the [i] ſight which appeared, that Moſes ſaid, I fear and quake)

22 But ye are come unto the mount Sion, and to the city of the living God, the celeſtial Jeruſalem, and to the company of innumerable angels,

23 And to the aſſembly and congregation of the firſt born which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the ſpirits of juſt and [k] perfect men,

24 And to Jeſus the Mediator of the new teſtament, and to the blood of ſprinkling, that ſpeaketh better things than that of Abel.

25 [13] See that ye deſpiſe not him that ſpeaketh: for if they eſcaped not which refuſed him that

---

[1] An applying of the former examples, whereby we ought to be ſtirred up to run the whole race, caſting away all ſtops and impediments.

[a] For ſin beſiegeth us on all ſides, ſo that we cannot eſcape out.

[2] He ſetteth before us, as the mark of this race, Jeſus himſelf our Captain, who willingly overcame all the roughneſs of the ſame way.

[b] As it were upon the mark of our faith.

[c] Whereas he had all kind of bleſſedneſs in his hand and power, yet ſuffered willingly the ignominy of the croſs.

[3] An amplification, taken of the circumſtance of the perſons and the things themſelves, which he compareth between themſelves: for how great is Jeſus in compariſon of us, and how far more grievous things did he ſuffer than we?

[4] He taketh an argument of the profit which cometh to us by God's chaſtiſements, unleſs we be in fault. Firſt of all, becauſe ſin, or that rebellious wickedneſs of our fleſh, is by this means tamed.

[5] Secondly, becauſe they are teſtimonies of his fatherly good will toward us, inſomuch that they ſhew themſelves to be baſtards, who cannot abide to be chaſtened of God.

[6] Thirdly, if all men yield this right to fathers, to whom next after God we owe this life, that they may rightfully correct their children; ſhall we not be much more ſubject to that our Father, who is the author of the ſpiritual and everlaſting life?

[7] An amplification of the ſame argument: Thoſe fathers have corrected us after their fancy, for ſome frail and tranſitory profit: but God chaſteneth and inſtructeth us for our ſingular profit, to make us partakers of his holineſs: which thing although theſe our ſenſes do not preſently perceive, yet the end of the matter proveth it.

[8] The concluſion, we muſt go forward courageouſly, and keep always a right courſe, and (as far forth as we may) without any ſtaggering or ſtumbling.

[d] The deſcription of a man that is out of heart, and clean diſcouraged.

[e] Keep a right courſe, and ſo that you ſhew example of good life for others to follow.

[9] We muſt live in peace and holineſs with all men.

[10] We muſt ſtudy to edify one another, both in doctrine and example of life.

[f] That no hereſy or backſliding be an offence.

[11] We muſt eſchew fornication, and a prophane mind, that is, ſuch a mind as giveth not to God his due honour, which wickedneſs, how ſeverely God will at length puniſh, the horrible example of Eſau teacheth us.

[g] There was no place left for his repentance: and it appeareth by the effects, what his repentance was; for when he was gone out of his father's ſight, he threatened his brother to kill him.

[12] Now he applieth the ſame exhortation to the prophetical and kingly office of Chriſt, compared with Moſes, after this ſort. If the majeſty of the law was ſo great, how great think you that the glory of Chriſt and the goſpel is? And this compariſon he declareth alſo particularly.

[h] Which might be touched with hands, which was of a groſs and earthly matter.

[i] The ſhape and form which he ſaw, which was no counterfeit and forged ſhape, but a true one.

[k] So he calleth them that are taken up into heaven, although one part of them doth ſleep in the earth.

[13] The applying of the former compariſon: if it were not lawful to contemn his word, which ſpake on the earth, how much leſs his voice which is from heaven?

A. D. 64.

that ſpake on earth: much more ſhall we not eſcape, if we turn away from him that ſpeaketh from heaven,

26 [14] Whoſe voice then ſhook the earth: and now hath declared, ſaying, * [l] Yet once more will I ſhake not the earth only, but alſo heaven. * Hag. 2. 7.

27 And this word, Yet once more, ſignifieth the removing of thoſe things which are ſhaken, as of things which are made with hands, that the things which are not ſhaken, may remain.

28 [15] Wherefore ſeeing we receive a kingdom, which cannot be ſhaken, let us have grace whereby we may ſo ſerve God, that we may pleaſe him with [m] reverence and [n] fear.

29 For * even our God is a conſuming fire. * Deut. 4. 24.

CHAP. XIII.

1 He giveth good leſſons not only for manners, 7 but alſo for doctrine.

LET * [1] brotherly love continue. * Rom. 12. 20.

2 * Be not forgetful to entertain ſtrangers: for thereby ſome have * received angels into their houſes unawares. * 1 Pet. 4. 9. * Gen. 18. 3. and 19. 3.

3 Remember them that are in bonds, as though ye were bound with them: and them that are in affliction, as [a] if ye were alſo afflicted in the body.

4 [2] Marriage is honourable among all, and the bed undefiled: but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.

5 [3] Let your converſation be without covetouſneſs, and be content with thoſe things that ye have, for [b] he hath ſaid,

6 * I will not fail thee, neither forſake thee: * Joſh. 1. 5.

7 So that we may boldly ſay, * The Lord is mine helper, neither will I fear what [c] man can do unto me. * Pſ. 118. 6.

8 [4] Remember them which have the overſight of you, which have declared unto you the word of God: whoſe faith follow, conſidering what hath been the end of their converſation,

[5] Jeſus Chriſt yeſterday, and to-day, the ſame alſo is for ever.

9 Be not carried about with divers and ſtrange doctrines: [6] for it is a good thing that the heart be eſtabliſhed with grace, and not with [d] meats; which have not profited them that have been [e] occupied therein.

10 [7] We have an [f] altar, whereof they have no authority to eat, which [g] ſerve in the tabernacle.

11 * For the bodies of thoſe beaſts whoſe blood is brought into the holy place by the high prieſt for ſin, are burnt without the camp. * Lev. 4. 11 and 6. 30. and 16. 27.

12 Therefore even Jeſus, that he might ſanctify the people with his own blood, ſuffered without the gate.

13 [8] Let us go forth to him therefore out of the camp, bearing his reproach.

14 * For here have we no continuing city: but we ſeek one to come. * Mic. 2. 10.

15 [9] Let us therefore by him offer the ſacrifice of praiſe always to God, that is, the * fruit of the lips, which confeſs his name. * Hoſ. 14. 3.

16 To do good, and to diſtribute, forget not: for with ſuch ſacrifices God is pleaſed.

17 [10] Obey them that have the overſight of you, and ſubmit yourſelves: for they watch for your ſouls, as they that muſt give accounts, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you.

18 [11] Pray for us, for we are aſſured that we have a good conſcience in all things, deſiring to live honeſtly.

19 And I deſire you ſomewhat the more earneſtly that ye ſo do, that I may be reſtored to you more quickly.

20 The God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jeſus, the great ſhepherd of the ſheep, through the blood of the everlaſting covenant,

---

[14] He compareth the ſtedfaſt majeſty of the goſpel, wherewith the whole world was ſhaken, and even the very frame of heaven was, as it were, aſtoniſhed, with the ſmall and vaniſhing ſound of the governance by the law.

[l] It appeareth evidently in this, that the prophet ſpeaketh of the calling of the Gentiles, that theſe words muſt be referred to the kingdom of God.

[15] A general exhortation to live reverently and religiouſly under the moſt happy ſubjection of ſo mighty a King, who, as he bleſſeth his moſt mghtily, ſo doth he moſt ſeverely revenge the rebellious. And this is the ſum of a chriſtian life, reſpecting the firſt table.

[m] By reverence is meant, that honeſt ſhamefacedneſs which keepeth them in their duties.

[n] Religious and godly fear.

[1] He cometh to the ſecond table; the ſum whereof is charity, eſpecially toward ſtrangers, and ſuch as are afflicted.

[a] Be ſo much touched, as if their miſery were yours.

[2] He commendeth chaſte matrimony in all ſorts of men, and threateneth utter deſtruction from God againſt whoremongers and adulterers.

[3] Covetouſneſs is condemned; againſt which is ſet a contented mind with that which the Lord hath given.

[b] Even the Lord himſelf.

[c] He ſetteth man againſt God.

[4] We have to ſet before us the example of valiant captains, whom we ought diligently to follow.

[5] He repeateth the ſum of the doctrine, to wit, the only ground of all precepts of manners, and that is this: That we ought to quiet and content ourſelves in Chriſt only: for there was yet never any man ſaved without the knowledge of him, neither is at this day ſaved, neither ſhall be ſaved hereafter.

[6] He toucheth them which mixed an external worſhip, and eſpecially the difference of meats, with the goſpel, which doctrine he plainly condemneth as clean repugnant to the benefit of Chriſt.

[d] By this one kind, which concerneth the difference of clean and unclean meats, we have to underſtand all the ceremonial worſhip.

[e] Which obſerved the difference of them ſuperſtitiouſly.

[7] He refuteth their error by an apt and fit compariſon. They which in times paſt ſerved the tabernacle, did not eat of the ſacrifices whoſe blood was brought for ſin into the holy place by the high prieſt. Moreover, theſe ſacrifices did repreſent Chriſt our offering. Therefore they cannot be partakers of him which ſerve the tabernacle, that is, ſuch as ſtand in the ſervice of the law: but let us not be aſhamed to follow him out of Jeruſalem, from whence he was caſt out, and ſuffered: for in this alſo Chriſt, who is the truth, anſwereth that figure, in that he ſuffered without the gate.

[f] By the altar, he meaneth the offerings.

[g] Whereof they cannot be partakers which ſtubbornly retain the rites of the law.

[8] He goeth on further in this compariſon, and ſheweth that this alſo is ſignified unto us, that the godly followers of Chriſt muſt, as it were, go out of the world bearing his croſs.

[9] Now that thoſe corporal ſacrifices are taken away, he teacheth us that the true ſacrifices of confeſſion remain, which conſiſt partly in giving of thanks, and partly in liberality, with which ſacrifices indeed God is now delighted.

[10] We muſt obey the warnings and admonitions of our miniſters and elders, which watch for the ſalvation of the ſouls which are committed unto them.

[11] The laſt part of this epiſtle, wherein he commendeth his miniſtry to the Hebrews, and wiſhes them continuance and increaſe of graces from the Lord: and excuſeth himſelf in that he hath uſed but few words to comfort them, having ſpent the epiſtle in diſputing, and ſaluteth certain brethren familiarly and friendly.

A. D. 64.

21 Make you [h] perfect in all good works, to do his will, [i] working in you that which is pleaſant in his ſight through Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be praiſe for ever and ever. Amen.

22 I beſeech you alſo, brethren, ſuffer the words of exhortation: for I have written unto you in few words.

23 Know that our brother Timothy is delivered, with whom (if he come ſhortly) I will ſee you.

24 Salute all them that have the overſight of you, and all the ſaints. They of Italy ſalute you.

25 Grace be with you all. Amen.

[h] Make you fit or meet.

[i] Hence cometh that ſaying of the fathers, that God crowneth his works in us.

The [a] General Epiſtle of JAMES.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 60.

4 He entreateth of patience, 6 of faith, 10 and of lowlineſs of mind in rich men. 13 That temptations come not of God for our evil, 17 becauſe he is the author of all goodneſs. 21 In what manner the word of life muſt be received.

JAMES a ſervant of God, and of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to the twelve tribes, which are [b] ſcattered abroad, ſalutation.

2 [1] My brethren, [c] count it exceeding joy, [2] when ye fall into divers temptations;

3 * [3] Knowing that the [d] trying of your faith bringeth forth patience,

* Rom. 5. 3.

4 [4] And let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing.

5 [5] If any of you lack [e] wiſdom, let him aſk of God, which giveth to all men liberally, and reproacheth no man, and it ſhall be given him.

6 * But let him aſk in faith, and [f] waver not: [6] for he that wavereth, is like a wave of the ſea, toſt of the wind, and carried away.

* Matt. 7. 7. Mark 11. 24. Luke 11. 9. John 14. 13. and 16. 23.

7 Neither let that man think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord.

A. D. 60.

8 A double minded man is unſtable in [g] all his ways.

9 [7] Let the brother of [h] low degree rejoice in that he is exalted:

10 [8] Again, he that is [i] rich, in that he is made low: [9] for as the flower of the graſs, ſhall he * vaniſh away:

* Iſa. 40. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 24.

11 For as when the ſun riſeth with heat, then the graſs withereth, and his flower falleth away, and the goodly ſhape of it periſheth: even ſo ſhall the rich man wither away in all his [k] ways.

12 [10] * Bleſſed is the man that endureth [l] temptation: for when he is tried, he ſhall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him.

* Job 5. 17.

13 [11] Let no man ſay when he is [m] tempted, I am tempted of God: [12] for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man.

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own concupiſcence, and is enticed:

15 Then

---

[a] That is, written to no one man, city, or country, but to all the Jews generally, being now diſperſed.

[b] To all the believing Jews, of what tribe ſoever they be, and are diſperſed through the whole world.

[1] The firſt place, or part touching comfort in afflictions, wherein we ought not to be caſt down and be faint hearted, but rather rejoice and be glad.

[c] Seeing their condition was miſerable in that ſcattering abroad, he doth well to begin as he doth.

[2] The firſt argument, becauſe our faith is tried through afflictions: which ought to be moſt pure, for ſo it is behovable for us.

[3] The ſecond, becauſe patience, a far paſſing and moſt excellent virtue, is by this means ingendered in us.

[d] That wherewith your faith is tried, to wit, thoſe manifold temptations.

[4] The third argument propounded in manner of an exhortation, that true and continual patience may be diſcerned from feigned, and for a time. The croſs is, as it were, the inſtrument wherewith God doth poliſh and fine us. Therefore the work and effect of afflictions, is the perfecting of us in Chriſt.

[5] An anſwer to a privy objection. It is eaſily ſaid, but it is not ſo eaſily done. He anſwereth, that we need in this caſe a far other manner of wiſdom, than the wiſdom of man, to judge thoſe things beſt for us, which are moſt contrary to the fleſh: but yet we ſhall eaſily obtain this gift of wiſdom, if we aſk it rightly, that is, with a ſure confidence of God, who is moſt bountiful and liberal.

[e] By wiſdom, he meaneth the knowledge of that doctrine whereof mention was made before, to wit, wherefore we are afflicted of God, and what fruit we have to reap of affliction.

[f] Why then, what need other mediators?

[6] A digreſſion or going aſide from his matter, againſt prayers which are conceived with a doubting mind, whereas we have a certain promiſe of God, and this is the ſecond part of the epiſtle.

[g] In all his thoughts and his deeds.

[7] He returneth to his purpoſe, repeating the propoſition, which is, that we muſt rejoice in the croſs, for it doth not preſs us down, but exalt us.

[h] Who is afflicted with poverty, or contempt, or with any kind of calamity.

[8] Before he concludeth, he giveth a doctrine contrary to the former: to wit, how we ought to uſe proſperity, which is plenty of all things: to wit, ſo that no man therefore pleaſe himſelf, but be ſo much the more void of pride.

[i] Who hath all things at his will.

[9] An argument taken of the very nature of the things themſelves, for that they are moſt vain and uncertain.

[k] Whatſoever he either purpoſeth in his mind, or doth.

[10] The concluſion: therefore we muſt patiently bear the croſs: and he addeth a fourth argument, which comprehendeth the ſum of all the former, to wit, becauſe we come by this way to the crown of life, but yet of grace according to the promiſe.

[l] Affliction, whereby the Lord trieth him.

[11] The third part of this epiſtle, wherein he deſcendeth from outward temptations, that is, from afflictions whereby God trieth us, to inward, that is, to thoſe luſts whereby we are ſtirred up to do evil. The ſum is this: Every man is the author of theſe temptations to himſelf, and not God: for we bear about in our boſoms that wicked corruption, which taketh occaſion, by what means ſoever, to ſtir up evil motions in us, whence out at length proceed wicked doings, and in concluſion followeth death, the juſt reward of them.

[m] When he is provoked to do evil.

[12] Here is a reaſon ſhewed, why God cannot be the author of evil doing in us, becauſe he deſireth not evil.

A. D. 60.

15 Then when luſt hath conceived, it bringeth forth[n] ſin: and ſin, when it is finiſhed, bringeth forth death.

16 [13] Err not, my dear brethren.

17 Every good giving, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the [o] Father of lights, with whom is no variableneſs, neither [p] ſhadow of turning.

18 [14] Of his own [q] will begat he us with the word of truth, that we ſhould be as the [r] firſt fruits of his creatures.

* Prov. 17. 27.

19 Wherefore, my dear brethren, * let every man be ſwift to hear, ſlow to ſpeak, and ſlow to wrath.

20 For the wrath of man doth not accompliſh the [s] righteouſneſs of God.

21 Wherefore lay apart all filthineſs, and ſuperfluity of maliciouſneſs, and receive with [t] meekneſs the word that is graffed in you, which is able to ſave your ſouls.

* Matt. 7. 21. Rom. 2. 13.

22 * [15] And be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, [16] deceiving your ownſelves.

23 [17] For if any hear the word, and do it not, he is like unto man that beholdeth his [u] natural face in a glaſs:

24 For when he hath conſidered himſelf, he goeth his way, and forgetteth immediately what manner of one he was.

25 But whoſo looketh in the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he not being a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, ſhall be bleſſed in his [x] deed.

26 [18] If any man among you ſeemeth religious, and refraineth not his tongue, but deceiveth his [y] own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 [19] Pure religion and undefiled before God, even the Father, is this, to [z] viſit the fatherleſs and widows in their adverſity, and to keep himſelf unſpotted of the world.

A. D. 60.

CHAP. II.

1 He ſaith, that to have reſpect of perſons is not agreeable to chriſtian faith, 14 which to profeſs in words is not enough, unleſs 15 we ſhew it alſo in deeds of mercy and charity, 21 after the example of Abraham.

* Lev. 19. 15. Deut. 1. 17. and 16. 19. Prov. 24. 23.

MY [1] brethren, have not the faith of our [a] glorious Lord Jeſus Chriſt * in reſpect of perſons.

2 For if there come into your company a man with a gold ring, and in goodly apparel, and there come in alſo a poor man in vile raiment,

3 And ye have a reſpect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and ſay unto him, Sit thou here in a [b] goodly place, and ſay unto the poor, Stand thou there, or ſit here under my footſtool,

4 Are ye not partial in [c] yourſelves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

5 [2] Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God choſen the [d] poor of this world that they ſhould be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he promiſed to them that love him?

6 But ye have deſpiſed the poor. [3] Do not the rich oppreſs you by tyranny, and do not they draw you before the judgment-ſeats?

7 Do not they blaſpheme the worthy name after which ye be [e] named?

8 [4] But if ye fulfil the [f] royal law according to the ſcripture, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf, ye do well.

9 But if ye regard the perſons, ye commit ſin, and are rebuked of the law, as tranſgreſſors.

10 For

---

[n] By ſin is meant in this place, actual ſin.

[13] Another reaſon taken of contraries: God is the author of all goodneſs, and ſo, that he is always like himſelf: how then can he be thought to be the author of evil?

[o] From him who is the fountain and author of all goodneſs.

[p] He goeth on in the metaphor: for the ſun, by his manifold and ſundry kinds of turning, maketh hours, days, months, years, light and darkneſs.

[14] The fourth part, concerning the excellency and fruit of the word of God; the ſum is this: we muſt hear the word of God moſt carefully and diligently, ſeeing it is the ſeed wherewith God of his free favour and love hath begotten us unto himſelf, picking us out of the number of his creatures. And the apoſtle condemneth two faults which do greatly trouble us in this matter, to wit, for that we ſo pleaſe ourſelves, that we had rather ſpeak ourſelves, than hear God ſpeaking: yea, we ſnuff and are angry when we are reprehended: againſt which faults he ſetteth a peaceable and quiet mind, and ſuch an one as is deſirous of purity.

[q] This is it which Paul calleth gracious favour, and good-will, which is the fountain of our ſalvation.

[r] As it were an holy kind of offering, taken out of the reſidue of men.

[s] That which God appointeth.

[t] By meekneſs, he meaneth modeſty, and whatſoever is contrary to an haughty and proud ſtomach.

[15] Another admonition: therefore is God's word heard, that we may frame our lives according to the preſcript thereof.

[16] He addeth reaſons, and thoſe moſt weighty: Firſt, becauſe they that do otherwiſe, do very much hurt themſelves.

[17] Secondly, becauſe they loſe the chiefeſt uſe of God's word, which correct not by it the faults that they know.

[u] He alludeth to that natural ſpot, to which is contrary that purity whereunto we are born again, the lively image whereof we behold in the law.

[x] Behaving himſelf ſo: for works do ſhew faith.

[18] The third admonition: the word of God preſcribeth a rule not only to do well, but alſo to ſpeak well.

[y] The fountain of all babbling and curſed ſpeaking, and ſaucineſs, is this, that men know not themſelves.

[19] The fourth: the true ſervice of God ſtandeth in charity toward our neighbours (eſpecially ſuch as need others help, as the fatherleſs and widows) and purity of life.

[z] To have a care of them, and to help them as much as we can.

[1] The fifth: charity which proceedeth from a true faith, cannot ſtand with the accepting of perſons: which he proveth plainly, by ſetting forth their example, who, with the reproach or diſdain of the poor, honour the rich.

[a] For if we knew what Chriſt's glory is, and eſteemed it as we ought to do, there would not be ſuch reſpect of perſons as there is.

[b] In a worſhipful and honorable place.

[c] Have ye not (which ye ought not to do) by this means within yourſelves judged one man to be preferred before another?

[2] He ſheweth, that they are perverſe and naughty judges, which prefer the rich before the poor; by that that God on the contrary ſide preferreth the poor, whom he hath enriched with true riches, before the rich.

[d] The needy and wretched, and (if we meaſure it after the opinion of the world) the verieſt abjects of all men.

[3] Secondly, he proveth them to be mad men: for that the rich men are rather to be holden execrable and curſed, conſidering that they perſecute the church, and blaſpheme Chriſt: for he ſpeaketh of wicked and profane rich men, ſuch as the moſt part of them have been always, againſt whom he ſetteth the poor and abject.

[e] Word for word, which is called upon of you.

[4] The concluſion: Charity which God preſcribeth cannot agree with the accepting of perſons, ſeeing that we muſt walk in the king's highway.

[f] The law is ſaid to be royal, and like the king's highway: for that it is plain, and without turnings; and that the law calleth every one our neighbour without reſpect, whom we may help by any kind of duty.

I

A. D. 60.

10 [5] For whoſoever ſhall keep the whole law, and yet faileth in one point, he is guilty of [g] all.

11 [6] For he that ſaid, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, ſaid alſo, Thou ſhalt not kill. Now though thou doeſt none adultery, yet if thou killeſt, thou art a tranſgreſſor of the law.

12 [7] So ſpeak ye, and ſo do, as they that ſhall be judged by the law of liberty.

13 For there ſhall be condemnation mercileſs to him that ſheweth not [h] mercy, and mercy rejoiceth againſt condemnation.

14 [8] What availeth it, my brethren, though a man ſaith, he hath faith, when he hath no works? can that faith ſave him?

15 [9] For if a brother or a ſiſter be naked and deſtitute of daily food,

16 And one of you ſay unto them, Depart in peace: warm yourſelves, and fill your bellies, notwithſtanding ye give them not thoſe things which are needful to the body, what helpeth it?

17 Even ſo the faith, if it have no works, is dead in itſelf.

18 But [i] ſome man might ſay, Thou haſt the faith, and I have works: ſhew me thy faith out of thy works, and I will ſhew thee my faith by my works.

19 [10] Thou believeſt that there is one God: thou doeſt well: the devils alſo believe it, and tremble.

20 [11] But wilt thou underſtand, O thou vain man, that the faith which is without works, is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father [k] juſtified through works? * when he offered Iſaac his ſon upon the altar?

* Gen. 22. 10.

22 Seeſt thou not that the faith [l] wrought with his works? and through the works was the faith made [m] perfect.

23 And the Scripture was [n] fulfilled which ſaith, * Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteouſneſs: and he was called the friend of God.

* Gen. 15. 6. Rom. 4. 3. Gal. 3. 6.

24 [12] Ye ſee then how that of works a man is [o] juſtified, and not of [p] faith only.

25 [13] Likewiſe alſo was not * Rahab the harlot juſtified through works, when ſhe had received the meſſengers, and ſent them out another way?

* Joſh. 2. 1.

26 [14] For as the body without the ſpirit is dead, even ſo the faith without works is dead.

CHAP. III.

3 To ſhew that a Chriſtian man muſt govern his tongue with the bridle of faith and charity, 6 he declareth the commodities and miſchiefs that enſue thereof: 15 and how much man's wiſdom 17 differeth from heavenly.

MY [1] brethren, be not many maſters, [2] knowing that we [a] ſhall receive the greater condemnation.

2 For in many things we ‡ ſin all. [3] If any man ſin not in word, he is a perfect man, and able to bridle all the body.

‡ Or, ſtumble.

3 [4] Behold, we put bits into the horſes mouths, that they ſhould obey us, and we turn about all their body.

4 Behold alſo the ſhips, which though they be ſo great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very ſmall rudder, whitherſoever the governor liſteth.

5 Even ſo the tongue is a little member, and boaſteth of great things: [5] behold how great a thing a little fire kindleth!

---

[5] A new argument to prove the ſame concluſion: They do not love their neighbours, which neglect ſome, and ambitiouſly honour others: for he doth not obey God, which cutteth off from the commandments of God, that that is not ſo commodious for him; nay, he is rather guilty generally of the breach of the whole law, although he obſerve the reſidue.

[g] Not that all ſins are equal, but becauſe he that breaketh one tittle of the law, offendeth the majeſty of the law giver.

[6] A proof: becauſe the law-maker is always one and the ſelf-ſame, and the body of the law cannot be divided.

[7] The concluſion of the whole treatiſe: we are upon this condition delivered from the curſe of the law by the mercy of God, that in like ſort we ſhould maintain and cheriſh charity and good-will one towards another, and whoſo doth not ſo, ſhall not taſte of the grace of God.

[h] He that is hard and curriſh againſt his neighbour, or elſe helpeth him not, he ſhall find God an hard and rough judge to himſelf-ward.

[8] The fifth place, which hangeth very well with the former treatiſe, touching a true and lively faith. And the propoſition of this place is this: Faith which bringeth not forth works, is not that faith whereby we are juſtified, but an image of faith: or elſe this; they are not juſtified by faith, which ſhew not the effects of faith.

[9] The firſt reaſon taken of a ſimilitude: If a man ſay to one that is hungry, Fill thy belly, and yet giveth him nothing, this ſhall not be true charity: ſo if a man ſay, he believeth, and bringeth forth no works of his faith, this ſhall not be a true faith, but a certain dead thing ſet out with the name of faith, whereof no man hath to brag, unleſs he will openly incur reprehenſion, ſeeing that the cauſe is underſtood by the effect.

[i] Nay, thus may every man beat down thy pride.

[10] Another reaſon taken of an abſurdity: If ſuch a faith were the true faith whereby we are juſtified, the devils ſhould be juſtified, for they have that, but yet notwithſtanding they tremble, and are not juſtified therefore, neither is that faith a true faith.

[11] The third reaſon taken from the example of Abraham, who no doubt had a true faith: but he in offering his ſon, ſhewed himſelf to have that faith which was not void of works, and therefore he received a true teſtimony, when it was ſaid, that faith was imputed to him for righteouſneſs.

[k] Was he not by his works known and found to be juſtified? for he ſpeaketh not here of the cauſes of juſtification, but by what effects we may know that a man is juſtified.

[l] Was effectual and fruitful with good works.

[m] That the faith was declared to be a true faith, and that by works.

[n] Then was the ſcripture fulfilled, when it appeared plainly, how truly it was written of Abraham.

[12] The concluſion: He is only juſtified that hath that faith which hath works following it.

[o] It is proved to be juſt.

[p] Of that dead and fruitleſs faith which you boaſt of.

[13] A fourth reaſon taken from a like example of Rahab the harlot, who alſo proved by her works that ſhe was juſtified by a true faith.

[14] The concluſion repeated again: faith which bringeth not forth fruits and works, is not faith, but a dead carcaſe.

[1] The ſixth part or place: Let no man uſurp (as moſt men ambitiouſly do) authority to judge and cenſure others rigorouſly.

[2] A reaſon, becauſe they provoke God's ſeverity againſt themſelves, which do ſo curiouſly and rigorouſly condemn others, being themſelves guilty and faulty.

[a] Unleſs we ſurceaſe from this maſterlike and proud finding fault with others.

[3] The ſeventh place, touching the bridling of the tongue joined with the former, ſo that it is manifeſt that there is no man which may not juſtly be found fault withal, ſeeing it is a rare virtue to bridle the tongue.

[4] He ſheweth by two ſimilitudes, the one taken from the bridles of horſes, the other from the rudders of ſhips, how great matters may be brought to paſs by the good moderation of the tongue.

[5] On the contrary part he ſheweth how great diſcommodities ariſe by the intemperancy of the tongue throughout the whole world, to the end that men may ſo much the more diligently give themſelves to moderate it.

A. D. 60.

6 And the tongue is a fire, yea, a [b] world of wickedneſs: ſo is the tongue ſet among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and [c] ſetteth on fire the courſe of nature, and it is ſet on fire of hell.

7 For the whole nature of beaſts, and of birds, and of creeping things, and things of the ſea is tamed, and hath been tamed of the nature of man:

8 But the tongue can no man tame. It is an unruly evil, full of deadly poiſon.

9 [6] Therewith bleſs we God, even the Father: and therewith curſe we men, which are made after the [7] ſimilitude of God.

10 [8] Out of one mouth proceedeth bleſſing and curſing: my brethren, theſe things ought not ſo to be.

11 Doth a fountain ſend forth at one place ſweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bring forth olives, either a vine figs? ſo can no fountain make both ſalt-water and ſweet.

13 [9] Who is a wiſe man, and endued with knowledge among you? let him ſhew by good converſation his works in meekneſs of wiſdom.

14 But if ye have bitter envying, and ſtrife in your hearts, rejoice not, neither be lyars againſt the truth.

15 This wiſdom deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, ſenſual and deviliſh.

16 For where envying and ſtrife is, there is ſedition, and all manner of evil works.

17 But the wiſdom that is from above, is firſt pure, then peaceable, gentle, eaſy to be intreated, full of [d] mercy and good fruits, without judging, and without hypocriſy.

18 [10] And the fruit of righteouſneſs is ſown in peace, of them that make peace.

CHAP. IV.

1 He reckoneth up the miſchiefs that proceed of the works of the fleſh. 7 He exhorteth to humility, 8 and to purge the heart 9 from pride, 10 backbiting, 14 and the forgetfulneſs of our infirmities.

A. D. 60.

FROM [1] whence are wars and contention among you? are they not hence, even of your pleaſures, that fight in your members?

2 Ye luſt, and have not: ye envy, and deſire immoderately, and cannot obtain: ye fight, and war, and get nothing, [2] becauſe ye aſk not.

3 Ye aſk, and receive not, becauſe ye aſk amiſs, that ye might lay the ſame out on your pleaſures.

4 [3] Ye adulterers and adultereſſes, know ye not that the amity of the world is the enmity of God? Whoſoever therefore will be a friend of the world, maketh himſelf the enemy of God.

5 [4] Do ye think that the ſcripture ſaith in vain, The ſpirit that dwelleth in us, luſteth after envy?

6 But the ſcripture offereth more grace, and therefore ſaith, * God reſiſteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. *Prov. 3. 34. 1 Pet. 5. 5.

7 * [5] Submit yourſelves to God: reſiſt the devil, and he will flee from you. * Epheſ. 4. 27.

8 Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you. Cleanſe your hands, ye ſinners: and purge your hearts, ye double minded.

9 [6] Suffer afflictions, and ſorrow ye, and weep: let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your joy into [a] heavineſs.

10 * Caſt down yourſelves before the Lord, and he will lift you up. *1 Pet. 5. 6.

11 [7] Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that ſpeaketh evil of his brother, or he that condemneth his brother, ſpeaketh evil of the law, and condemneth the law: and if thou condemneſt the law, thou art not an obſerver of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one Lawgiver which is able to to ſave, and to deſtroy. * Who art thou that judgeſt another man? *Rom. 14. 4.

---

[b] An heap of all miſchiefs.

[c] It is able to ſet the whole world on fire.

[6] Amongſt other faults of the tongue, the apoſtle chiefly reproveth backbiting and ſpeaking evil of our neighbours, even in them eſpecially which otherwiſe will ſeem godly and religious.

[7] He denieth by two reaſons, that God can be praiſed by that man that uſeth curſed ſpeaking, or to backbite: firſt, becauſe man is the image of God, which whoſoever reverenceth not, doth not honour God himſelf.

[8] Secondly, becauſe the order of nature which God hath ſet in things, will not ſuffer things that are ſo contrary the one to the other, to ſtand the one with the other.

[9] The eighth part, which hangeth with the former, touching meekneſs of mind, againſt which he ſetteth envy and a contentious mind. And in the beginning he ſtoppeth the mouth of the chief fountain of all theſe miſchiefs, to wit, a falſe perſuaſion of wiſdom, whereas notwithſtanding there is no true wiſdom but that is heavenly, and frameth our minds to all kind of true moderation and ſimplicity.

[d] He ſetteth mercy againſt the fierce and cruel nature of man, and ſheweth that heavenly wiſdom bringeth forth good fruits; for he that is heavenly wiſe, referreth all things to God's glory, and the profit of his neighbours.

[10] Becauſe the world perſuadeth itſelf that they are miſerable which live peaceably and ſimply: on the contrary ſide, the apoſtle pronounceth that they ſhall at the length reap the harveſt of peaceable righteouſneſs.

[1] He goeth on forward in the ſame argument, condemning certain other cauſes of wars and contentions, to wit, unbridled pleaſures and immoderate luſts, by their effects, forſomuch as the Lord doth worthily make them void, ſo that they bring nothing elſe to them in whom they are, but incurable torments.

[2] He reprehendeth them by name, which are not aſhamed to go about to make God the miniſter and helper of their luſts and pleaſures, in aſking things which either are of themſelves unlawful, or being lawful aſk them to wicked purpoſes and uſes.

[3] Another reaſon, why ſuch unbridled luſts and pleaſures are utterly to be condemned, to wit, becauſe that he that giveth himſelf to the world, divorceth himſelf from God, and breaketh the band of that holy and ſpiritual marriage.

[4] The taking away of an objection: Indeed our minds run headlong into theſe vices, but we ought ſo much the more diligently to take heed of them: which care and ſtudy ſhall not be in vain, ſeeing that God reſiſteth the ſtubborn, and giveth that grace to the modeſt and humble that ſurmounteth all thoſe vices.

[5] The concluſion: We muſt ſet the contrary virtues againſt thoſe vices, and therefore whereas we obeyed the ſuggeſtions of the devil, we muſt ſubmit our minds to God, and reſiſt the devil, with a certain and aſſured hope of victory. To be ſhort, we muſt employ ourſelves to come near unto God by purity and ſincerity of life.

[6] He goeth on in the ſame compariſon of contraries, and ſetteth againſt thoſe profane joys an earneſt ſorrow of mind, and againſt pride and arrogance holy modeſty.

[a] By this word the Grecians mean an heavineſs joined with a ſhamefacedneſs, which is to be ſeen in a caſt-down countenance, and ſettled as it were upon the ground.

[7] He reprehendeth moſt ſharply another double miſchief of pride: the one is, in that the proud and arrogant will have other men to live according to their will and pleaſure, and therefore they do moſt arrogantly condemn whatſoever pleaſeth them not: which thing cannot be done without great injury to our only Law-maker, for by this means his laws are found fault withal, as not circumſpectly enough written, and men challenge that unto themſelves which properly belongeth to God alone, in that they lay a law upon men's conſciences.

A. D. 60.

13 [8] Go to now, ye that ſay, To-day or to-morrow we will go into ſuch a city, and continue there a year, and buy and ſell, and get gain,

14 (And yet ye cannot tell what ſhall be to-morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and afterward vaniſheth away)

*1Cor.4.19. 15 For that ye ought to ſay, * If the Lord will, and, If we live, we will do this or that.

16 But now ye rejoice in your boaſtings: all ſuch rejoicing is evil.

17 [9] Therefore to him that knoweth how to do well, and doeth it not, to him it is ſin.

CHAP. V.

1 He threateneth the rich with God's ſevere judgment, for their pride, 7 that the poor hearing the miſerable end of the rich, 8 may patiently bear afflictions, 11 as Job did, 14 even in their diſtreſſes.

GO [1] to now, ye rich men: weep and howl for your miſeries that ſhall come upon you.

2 Your riches are corrupt, and your garments are moth-eaten.

3 Your gold and ſilver is cankered, and the ruſt of them ſhall be a witneſs againſt you, and ſhall eat your fleſh, as it were fire. Ye have heaped up treaſure for the laſt days.

4 Behold, the hire of the labourers, which have reaped your fields (which is of you kept back by fraud) crieth, and the cries of them which have reaped, are entered into the [a] ears of the Lord of hoſts.

5 Ye have lived in pleaſure on the earth, and in wantonneſs: ye have [b] nouriſhed your hearts, as in a [c] day of ſlaughter.

6 Ye have condemned, and have killed the Juſt, and he hath not reſiſted you.

7 [2] Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. [3] Behold, the huſbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the former and the latter rain.

A. D. 60.

8 Be ye alſo patient therefore, and ſettle your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth near.

9 [4] [d] Grudge not one againſt another, brethren, leſt ye be condemned: [5] behold, the Judge ſtandeth before the door.

10 [6] Take, my brethren, the prophets for an enſample of ſuffering adverſity, and of long patience, which have ſpoken in the name of the Lord.

11 Behold, we count them bleſſed which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have known what [e] end the Lord made. For the Lord is very pitiful and merciful.

12 [7] But before all things, my brethren, * ſwear not, neither by heaven, nor by earth, nor by any other oath: but let [f] your yea, be yea, and your nay, nay, leſt ye fall into condemnation. *Matt.5.34.

13 [8] Is any among you afflicted? Let him pray. Is any merry? Let him ſing.

14 [9] Is any ſick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray for him, and anoint him with * [g] oil in the [h] name of the Lord. *Mark6.13.

15 And the prayer of faith ſhall ſave the ſick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up: and if he have committed [i] ſins, they ſhall be forgiven him.

16 [10] Acknowledge your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed: [11] for the prayer of a righteous man availeth much, if it be fervent.

17 * Elias was a man ſubject to like paſſions as we are, and prayed earneſtly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth for three years and ſix months. *1Kings17.1. and 18.45. Luke 4.25.

18 And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.

19 Brethren,

[8] The other fault is this: That men do ſo confidently determine upon theſe and thoſe matters and buſineſſes, as though that every moment of their life did not depend of God.

[9] The concluſion of all the former treatiſe. The knowledge of the will of God doth not only nothing at all profit, unleſs the life be anſwerable unto it, but alſo maketh the ſins far more grievous.

[1] He denounceth utter deſtruction to the wicked and profane rich men, and ſuch as are drowned in their riotouſneſs, mocking at their fooliſh confidence, whenas there is nothing indeed more vain than ſuch things.

[a] The Lord, who is more mighty than ye are, hath heard them.

[b] Ye have pampered up yourſelves.

[c] The Hebrews call a day that is appointed to ſolemn banquetting, a day of ſlaughter, or feaſting.

[2] He applieth that to the poor which he ſpake againſt the rich, warning them to wait for the Lord's coming patiently, who will revenge the injuries which the rich men do them.

[3] The taking away of an objection: although his coming ſeem to linger, yet at the leaſt we muſt follow the huſbandmen, who do patiently wait for the times that are proper for the fruits of the earth. And again, God will not defer the leaſt jot of the time that he hath appointed.

[4] He commendeth chriſtian patience, for that whereas others through impatience uſe to accuſe one another, the faithful on the contrary ſide complain not, although they receive injury.

[d] By grudging he meaneth a certain inward complaining which betokeneth impatience.

[5] The concluſion: the Lord is at the door; who will defend his own, and revenge his enemies, and therefore we need not to trouble ourſelves.

[6] Becauſe moſt men are wont to object, that it is good to repel injuries by what means ſoever, he ſetteth againſt that the examples of the fathers, whoſe patience had a moſt happy end, becauſe God, as a moſt bountiful Father, never forſaketh his.

[e] What end the Lord gave.

[7] Becauſe even the beſt men ſometimes through impatience break out into oaths ſometimes leſſer, ſometimes greater, the apoſtle warneth us to deteſt ſuch wickedneſs, and to accuſtom our tongues to ſimple and true talk.

[f] That that you have to ſay or affirm, ſpeak or affirm it ſimply, and without an oath: and that that you will deny, deny it ſimply and flatly.

[8] He ſheweth the beſt remedy againſt all afflictions, to wit, prayers, which have their place both in ſorrow and joy.

[9] He ſheweth peculiarly to what phyſicians eſpecially we muſt go, when we are diſeaſed, to wit, to the prayers of the elders, which then alſo could cure the body (for ſo much as the gift of healing was then in force) and take away the chiefeſt cauſe of ſickneſſes and diſeaſes, by obtaining for the ſick, through their prayers and exhortation, remiſſion of ſins.

[g] This was a ſign of the gift of healing: and now ſeeing we have the gift no more, the ſign is no longer neceſſary.

[h] By calling on the name of the Lord.

[i] He hath reaſon in making mention of ſins, for diſeaſes are for the moſt part ſent becauſe of ſins.

[10] Becauſe God pardoneth their ſins which confeſs and acknowledge them, and not theirs which juſtify themſelves; therefore the apoſtle addeth, that we ought freely to confer one with another touching thoſe inward diſeaſes, that we may help one another with our prayers.

[11] He commendeth prayers by the effects that come of them, that all men may underſtand that there is nothing more effectual than they are, ſo that they proceed from a pure mind.

A. D. 60.

19 [12] Brethren, * if any of you hath erred from the truth, and ſome man hath [k] converted him,

* Matt. 18. 15.

20 Let him know, that he which hath converted the ſinner from going aſtray out of his way, ſhall ſave a ſoul from death, and ſhall hide a multitude of ſins.

A. D. 60.

---

[12] The taking away of an objection: All reprehenſions are not condemned, ſeeing that on the contrary part there is nothing more acceptable to God than to call into the way, a brother that was wandering out of the way.

[k] Hath called him back from his way.

The Firſt Epiſtle General of PETER.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 60.

1 He extolleth God's mercy ſhewed in Chriſt, which we lay hold on by faith, and poſſeſs through hope: 10 Whereof the prophets foretold. 13 He exhorteth 15 to renounce the world, 23 and their former life, and ſo wholly yield themſelves to God.

PETER an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, to the ſtrangers that dwell here and there throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Aſia, and Bithynia,

2 [1] Elect according to the [a] foreknowledge of God the Father unto [b] ſanctification of the Spirit, through obedience and ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus Chriſt: Grace and peace be multiplied unto you.

3 Bleſſed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a [c] lively hope by the reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt from the dead,

4 To an inheritance immortal and undefiled, and that withereth not, reſerved in heaven for us,

5 [2] Which are kept by the power of God through faith unto ſalvation, which is prepared to be ſhewed in the [d] laſt time:

6 Wherein ye rejoice, though now for a ſeaſon (if need require) ye are in heavineſs, through manifold temptations,

7 That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that periſheth (though it be tried with fire) might be found unto your praiſe, and honour and glory at the [e] appearing of Jeſus Chriſt:

A. D. 60.

8 Whom ye have not ſeen, and yet love him: in whom now, though ye ſee him not, yet do you believe, and rejoice with joy unſpeakable and glorious,

9 Receiving the ‡ end of your faith, even the ſalvation of your ſouls.

‡ Or, reward.

10 [3] Of the which ſalvation the prophets have enquired and ſearched, which propheſied of the grace that ſhould come unto you,

11 Searching when or what time the Spirit which teſtified before of Chriſt which was in them, ſhould declare the ſufferings that ſhould come unto Chriſt, and the glory that ſhould follow:

12 Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themſelves, but unto us they ſhould miniſter the things which are now ſhewed unto you by them which have preached unto you the goſpel by the Holy Ghoſt [f] ſent down from heaven, the which things the angels deſire to behold.

13 [4] Wherefore, [g] gird up the loins of your mind: be ſober, [5] and truſt [h] perfectly on that grace [6] that is brought unto you, [7] in the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt,

---

[1] Peter purpoſing to ſpeak of the duties of a Chriſtian life, reaſoneth firſt of the principles and beginnings of all Chriſtian actions, riſing far higher than nature, and carrying us alſo far above the ſame. For he ſheweth that we which are otherwiſe of nature ſinners, were, through the free mercy of God the Father, firſt choſen from everlaſting: then according to that everlaſting decree, were by a certain ſecond creation made his ſons in Chriſt, his only begotten, by whoſe Spirit we are inwardly changed, and by whoſe blood we are alſo reconciled, to the end that, as Chriſt himſelf roſe again from the dead, we alſo might be received into that ſame heavenly and everlaſting glory.

[a] Or, according to the purpoſe of God, who never altereth nor changeth the ſame.

[b] That being ſet apart from the reſt of this wicked world, through the working of the Holy Ghoſt, they ſhould be conſecrated to God, Epheſ. 1. 5.

[c] Everlaſting hope.

[2] Now he ſheweth by what way we come unto that glory, to wit, through all kind of afflictions, wherein notwithſtanding faith maketh us ſo ſecure, that we are not only not overcome with ſorrow, but alſo through the beholding of God himſelf (who otherwiſe is inviſible) with the eyes of faith, are unſpeakably joyful: becauſe all ſuch things, as they are but for a time, ſo are they not applied unto us to deſtroy us, but as it were by fire to purge us, and to make us perfect, that at the length we may obtain ſalvation.

[d] This is that time which Daniel calleth the time of the end, whenas that great reſtoring of all things ſhall be, which all creatures look for, Rom. 8. 19.

[e] He ſpeaketh of the ſecond coming of Chriſt.

[3] He putteth a difference between true faith, that is to ſay, that faith which only hath an eye to the doctrine of the prophets and apoſtles, and falſe faith: Afterward he maketh two degrees of one and the ſelf-ſame faith, according to the manner of divers revelations, whenas indeed it is but one only faith. Thirdly, he ſaith, that the preaching of the apoſtles is the fulfilling of the preaching of the prophets, although the latter end of it be as yet looked for of the very angels.

[f] He alludeth to the prophecy of Joel, which was exhibited upon the day of Pentecoſt, in the apoſtles, as it were in the firſt-fruits of the Holy Ghoſt, which this ſame our Peter declareth, Acts 2. 6.

[4] He goeth from faith to hope, which is indeed a companion that cannot be ſundered from faith: and he uſeth an argument taken of compariſon: We ought not to be wearied in looking for ſo excellent a thing, which the very angels wait for with great deſire.

[g] This is a borrowed ſpeech, taken of a common uſage amongſt them: for by reaſon that they wore long garments, they could not travel, unleſs they girded up themſelves: and hence it is that Chriſt ſaid, Let your loins be girded up.

[5] He ſetteth forth very briefly what manner of hope ours ought to be, to wit, continual, until we enjoy the thing we hope for: then, what we have to hope for, to wit, grace (that is, free ſalvation) revealed to us in the goſpel, and not that that men do raſhly and fondly promiſe to themſelves.

[h] Soundly and ſincerely.

[6] An argument to ſtir up our minds, ſeeing that God doth not wait till we ſeek him, but cauſeth ſo great a benefit to be brought even unto us.

[7] He ſetteth out the end of faith, leſt any ſhould promiſe himſelf, either ſooner or later, that full ſalvation, to wit, the latter coming of Chriſt, and therewithal warneth us, not to meaſure the dignity of the goſpel according to the preſent eſtate, ſeeing that that which we are now, is not yet revealed.

14 [8] As obedient children, not faſhioning yourſelves unto the former luſts of your ignorance:

15 But as he which hath called you is holy, ſo be ye holy in * all manner of converſation,

25 [15] But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which is preached among you.

CHAP. II.

1 He exhorteth the new born in faith, to lead their lives anſwerable to the ſame: 6 And leſt their faith ſhould ſtagger, he bringeth in that which was foretold touching Chriſt. 11 Then he willeth them to be obedient to magiſtrates, 19 and that they patiently bear adverſity, after Chriſt's example.

2 [2] As [a] new-born babes deſire that ſincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby,

3 [3] Becauſe ye ‡ have taſted that the Lord is bountiful.

‡ Or, do taſte.

4 [4] To whom coming as unto a living ſtone, diſallowed of men, but choſen of God, and precious,

5 Ye alſo as lively ſtones, be made a ſpiritual houſe, [5] an holy * prieſthood, to offer up ſpiritual ſacrifices acceptable to God by Jeſus Chriſt.

*Rev. 1. 6.

6 [6] Wherefore alſo it is contained in the ſcripture, * Behold, I put in Sion a chief corner ſtone, elect and precious: and he that believeth therein, ſhall not be aſhamed.

*Iſa. 28. 16. Rom. 9. 33.

7 [7] Unto you therefore which believe, it is precious:

---

[8] He paſſeth from faith and hope, to the fruits of them both, which are underſtood in the name of obedience: And it conſiſteth in two things, in renouncing our luſts, and living godly: which luſts have their beginning of that blindneſs wherein all men are born: but holineſs proceedeth from the grace and favour of God which adopteth us, and therefore regenerateth us, that the father and the children may be of one diſpoſition.

[9] He ſheweth that ſanctification doth neceſſarily follow adoption.

[10] As before he diſtinguiſhed true faith and hope from falſe, ſo doth he now obedience, ſetting the quick and ſharp ſight of God againſt an outward mark, and earneſt reverence againſt vain ſeverity.

[i] If you will be called the ſons of that Father.

[11] An exhortation, wherein he ſetteth forth the excellency and greatneſs of the benefit of God the Father in ſanctifying us by the death of his own Son. And he partly ſetteth the purifying of the law againſt the thing itſelf, that is, againſt the blood of Chriſt, and partly alſo men's traditions, which he condemneth as utterly vain and ſuperſtitious, be they never ſo old and ancient.

[12] The taking away of an objection: what was done to the world, before that Chriſt was ſent into the world: was there no holineſs before, and was there no church? The apoſtle anſwereth, that Chriſt was ordained and appointed to redeem and deliver mankind, before that mankind was: much leſs was there any church without him before his coming in the fleſh: yet we are happieſt above the reſt, to whom Chriſt was exhibited in deed, in this that he having ſuffered and overcome death for us, doth now moſt effectually work in us by the virtue of his Spirit, to create in us faith, hope, and charity.

[k] From everlaſting.

[13] He commendeth the practice of obedience, that is charity: earneſtly beating into their heads again, that he ſpeaketh not of any common charity, and ſuch as proceedeth from that our corrupt nature, but of that whoſe beginning is the Spirit of God: which purifieth our ſouls through the word laid hold on by faith, and ingendereth alſo in us a ſpiritual and everlaſting life, as God himſelf is moſt pure and truly living.

[14] A reaſon why we have need of this heavenly generation, to wit, becauſe that men, be their glory never ſo great, are of nature void of all true and ſound goodneſs.

[l] The word (fleſh) ſheweth the weakneſs of our nature, which is chiefly to be conſidered in the fleſh itſelf.

[15] Again, leſt any man ſhould ſeek that ſpiritual force and virtue in feigned imaginations, the apoſtle calleth us back to the word of God; teaching us furthermore, that there is no other word of the Lord to be looked for, than this which is preached, in which only we muſt reſt.

[1] Having laid for the foundation the Spirit of God, effectually working by the word, and having built thereupon three virtues which are the grounds of all chriſtian actions, to wit, faith, hope, and charity: now he proceedeth to a general exhortation, the firſt member whereof is, that we flee all ſhew, both of ſecret and alſo open malice.

[2] The ſecond is, that being newly begotten and born of the new ſeed of the uncorrupt word, drawing and ſucking greedily the ſame word as milk, we ſhould more and more as it were grow up in that ſpiritual life. And he calleth it ſincere, not only becauſe it is a moſt pure thing, but alſo that we ſhould take heed of them which corrupt it.

[a] As it becometh new men.

[3] He commendeth that ſpiritual nouriſhment for the ſweetneſs and profit of it.

[4] He goeth on forward in the ſame exhortation, but uſeth another kind of borrowed ſpeech, alluding to the temple. Therefore he ſaith, that the company of the faithful is, as it were, a certain holy and ſpiritual building, built of the lively ſtones, the foundation whereof is Chriſt, as a lively ſtone ſuſtaining all that are joined unto him with his living virtue, and knitting them together with himſelf, although this ſo great a treaſure be neglected of men.

[5] Going forward in the ſame ſimilitude, he compareth us now to prieſts, placed to this end in that ſpiritual temple, that we ſhould ſerve him with a ſpiritual worſhip, that is, with holineſs and righteouſneſs: but as the temple, ſo is the prieſthood built upon Chriſt, in whom only all our ſpiritual offerings are accepted.

[6] He proveth it by the teſtimony of the prophet Iſaiah.

[7] By ſetting the moſt bleſſed condition of the believers, and the moſt miſerable of the rebellious, one againſt the other, he pricketh forward the believers, and triumpheth over the other: and alſo preventeth an offence which ariſeth hereof, that none do more reſiſt this doctrine of the goſpel, than they which are chiefeſt amongſt the people of God, as were, at that time that Peter wrote theſe things, the prieſts, and elders, and ſcribes. Therefore he anſwereth firſt of all, that there is no cauſe why any man ſhould be aſtoniſhed at this their ſtubbornneſs, as though it were a ſtrange matter, ſeeing we have been forewarned ſo long before, that it ſhould ſo come to paſs: and moreover, that it pleaſed God to create and make certain to this ſelf-ſame purpoſe, that the Son of God might be glorified in their juſt condemnation. Thirdly, for that the glory of Chriſt is hereby ſet forth greatly, whereas notwithſtanding Chriſt remaineth the ſure head of his church, and they that ſtumble at him, caſt

15 [19] For ſo is the will of God, that by well doing ye may put to ſilence the ignorance of the fooliſh men:

16 As free, and not as having the liberty for a cloak of malicioufneſs, but as the ſervants of God.

20 For what praiſe is it, if when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye take it patiently? but and if when ye do well, ye ſuffer wrong and take it patiently, this is acceptable to God.

down and overthrow themſelves, and not Chriſt. Fourthly, although they be created to this end and purpoſe, yet their fall and decay is not to be attributed to God, but to their own obſtinate ſtubbornneſs, which cometh between God's decree and the execution thereof, or their condemnation, and is the true and proper cauſe of their deſtruction.

[8] The contrary member; to wit, he deſcribeth the ſingular excellency of the elect: and alſo leſt any man ſhould doubt whether he be choſen or not, the apoſtle calleth us back to the effectual calling, that is, to the voice of the goſpel ſounding both in our ears and minds, by the outward preaching and ſacraments, whereby we may certainly underſtand that everlaſting decree of our ſalvation, (which otherwiſe is moſt ſecret and hidden) and that through the only mercy of God, who freely chuſeth and calleth us. Therefore this only remaineth, ſaith he, that by all means poſſible we ſet forth ſo great goodneſs of the moſt mighty God.

[9] He returneth to that general exhortation.

[10] A reaſon why we ought to live holily, to wit, becauſe we are citizens of heaven, and therefore we ought to live according to the laws not of this world, which is moſt corrupt, but of the heavenly city, although we be ſtrangers in the world.

[11] Another argument: The children of God live not according to the fleſh, that is, according to that corrupt nature, but according to the Spirit. Therefore fleſhly motions ought not to bear rule in us.

[12] The third argument: For although thoſe luſts flatter us, yet they ceaſe not to fight againſt our ſalvation.

[13] The fourth argument, taken of the profit of ſo doing: for by this means alſo we provide for our good name and eſtimation, whilſt we compel them at length to change their minds, which ſpeak evil of us.

[14] The fifth argument, which alſo is of great force: Becauſe the glory of God is greatly ſet forth by that means, whilſt by example of our honeſt life, even the moſt profane men are brought unto God, and ſubmit themſelves unto him.

[b] When God ſhall have mercy on them.

[15] That which he ſpake generally, he now expoundeth by parts, deſcribing ſeverally every man's duty. And firſt of all he ſpeaketh of obedience, which is due both to the laws, and alſo to the magiſtrates both higher and lower.

[c] By ordinance, is meant the framing and ordering of civil government, which he calleth ordinance of man, not becauſe man invented it, but becauſe it is proper to men.

[16] The firſt argument: Becauſe the Lord is the author and revenger of this policy of men, that is, which is ſet amongſt men: and therefore the true ſervants of the Lord muſt above all others be diligent obſervers of this order.

[17] He preventeth a cavil which is made by ſome, that ſay they will obey kings and the higher magiſtrates, and yet contemn their miniſters: as though their miniſters were not armed with their authority which ſent them.

[18] The ſecond argument taken of the end of this order, which is not only moſt profitable, but alſo very neceſſary: ſeeing that by this means virtue is rewarded, and vice puniſhed: wherein the quietneſs and happineſs of this life conſiſteth.

[19] He declareth the firſt argument more amply, ſhewing that Chriſtian liberty doth amongſt all things leaſt, or not at all, conſiſt herein, to wit, to caſt off the bridle of laws, (as at that time ſome altogether unſkilful in the kingdom of God reported) but rather in this, that living holily according to the will of God, we ſhould make manifeſt to all men, that the goſpel is not a cloak for ſin and wickedneſs, ſeeing we are in ſuch ſort free, that yet we are ſtill the ſervants of God, and not of ſin.

[20] He divideth the civil life of man, by occaſion of thoſe things which he ſpake, into two general parts, to wit, into thoſe duties which private men owe to private men, and eſpecially the faithful to the faithful, and into that ſubjection whereby inferiors are bound to their ſuperiors: but ſo, that kings be not made equal to God: ſeeing that fear is due to God, and honour to kings.

[d] Be charitable and dutiful towards all men.

[e] The aſſembly and fellowſhip of the brethren, as Zech. 11. 12.

[21] He goeth to the duty of ſervants towards their maſters, which he deſcribeth with theſe bounds, that ſervants ſubmit themſelves willingly, and not by conſtraint, not only to the good and courteous, but alſo to the froward and ſharp maſters.

[22] The taking away of an objection. Indeed the condition of ſervants is hard, eſpecially if they have froward maſters: but this their ſubjection ſhall be ſo much the more acceptable to God, if his will prevail more with ſervants, than the maſter's injuries.

[f] Becauſe he maketh a conſcience of it, to offend God, by whoſe good will and appointment he knoweth this burden is laid upon him.

[23] He mitigateth the grievouſneſs of ſervitude, while he ſheweth plainly that Chriſt died alſo for ſervants, that they ſhould bear ſo much the more patiently this inequality betwixt men which are of one ſelf-ſame nature: moreover ſetting before them Chriſt that Lord of lords for an enſample, he ſignifieth that they cannot but ſeem too delicate, which ſhew themſelves more grieved in bearing of injuries, than Chriſt himſelf, who was moſt juſt, and moſt ſharply of all afflicted, yet was moſt patient.

[g] A borrowed kind of ſpeech, taken of painters and ſchoolmaſters.

[24] He ſheweth them a remedy againſt injuries, to wit, that they commend their cauſe to God, by the example of Chriſt.

[25] He ſeemeth now to turn his ſpeech to maſters, which have alſo themſelves a maſter and judge in heaven, who will juſtly revenge the injuries done to ſervants, without any reſpect of perſons.

---

[26] He calleth the ſervants back from the conſideration of the injuries which they are conſtrained to bear, to think upon the greatneſs and the end of the benefit received of Chriſt.

[1] In the third place, he ſetteth forth the wives duties to their huſbands, commanding them to be obedient.

[2] He ſpeaketh, namely, of them which had huſbands that were not Chriſtians, which ought ſo much the more be ſubject to their huſbands, that by their honeſt and chaſte converſation they may gain them to the Lord.

[3] He condemneth the riot and exceſs of women, and ſetteth forth their true apparelling, ſuch as is precious before God, to wit, the inward and incorruptible, which conſiſteth in a meek and quiet ſpirit.

[a] Who hath his ſeat faſtened in the heart: ſo that the hidden man is ſet againſt the outward decking of the body.

[b] Precious in deed, and ſo taken of God.

[4] An argument taken out of the example of women, and eſpecially of Sarah, which was the mother of all believers.

[5] Becauſe women are of nature fearful, he giveth them to underſtand, that he requireth of them that ſubjection, which is not wrung out of them either by force or fear.

[6] He teacheth huſbands alſo their duties, to wit, that the more underſtanding and wiſdom they have, the more wiſely and circumſpectly they behave themſelves.

[c] Do all the duties of wedlock.

[d] The more wiſdom the huſband hath, the more circumſpectly he muſt behave himſelf in bearing thoſe diſcommodities which through the woman's weakneſs oft-times cauſe trouble both to the huſband and the wife.

[7] The ſecond argument: becauſe the wife, notwithſtanding that ſhe is weaker by nature than the man, is an excellent inſtrument of the man, made to far more excellent uſes: whereupon it followeth, that ſhe is not therefore to be neglected, becauſe ſhe is weak, but on the contrary part ſhe ought to be ſo much the more cared for.

[e] Having an honeſt care of her.

[f] The woman is called a veſſel after the manner of the Hebrews, becauſe the huſband uſeth her as his fellow and helper, to live faithfully before God.

[8] The third argument: for that they are equal in that which is the chiefeſt (that is to ſay, in the benefit of eternal life) which otherwiſe are unequal as touching the governance and converſation at home, and therefore they are not to be deſpiſed, although they be weak.

[g] Of that gracious and free benefit whereby we have everlaſting life given us.

[9] The fourth argument: All brawlings and chidings muſt be eſchewed, becauſe they hinder prayers, and the whole ſervice of God, whereunto both the huſband and wife are equally called.

[10] He returneth to common exhortations, and commandeth concord, and whatſoever things pertain to the maintenance of peace and mutual love.

[11] We muſt not only not recompenſe injury for injury, but we muſt alſo recompenſe them with benefits.

[12] An argument taken of compariſon: Seeing that we ourſelves are called of God, whom we offend ſo often, to ſo great a benefit, (ſo far is he from revenging the injuries which we do unto him) ſhall we rather make ourſelves unworthy of ſo great bountifulneſs, than forgive one another's faults? And from this verſe to the end of the chapter there is a digreſſion or going from the matter he is in hand with, to exhort us valiantly to bear afflictions.

[13] A ſecret objection: But this our patience ſhall be nothing elſe but a fleſhing and hardening of the wicked in their wickedneſs, to make them ſet upon us more boldly, and deſtroy us. Nay, (ſaith the apoſtle by the words of David) to live without doing hurt, and to follow after peace when it flieth away, is the way to that happy and quiet peace. And if ſo be any man be afflicted for doing juſtly, the Lord marketh all things, and will in his time deliver the godly, which cry unto him, and will deſtroy the wicked.

[h] Lead a bleſſed and happy life.

[i] This word (Face) after the manner of the Hebrews, is taken for (anger.)

[14] The ſecond argument: when the wicked are provoked, they are more wayward: therefore they muſt rather be overcome with good turns. And if they cannot be gotten by that means alſo, yet notwithſtanding we ſhall be bleſſed, if we ſuffer for righteouſneſs ſake.

[15] A moſt certain counſel in afflictions: be they never ſo terrible, to be of a conſtant mind, and to ſtand faſt. But how ſhall we attain unto it? If we ſanctify God in our minds and hearts, that is to ſay, if we reſt upon him as one that is Almighty, that loveth mankind, that is good and true indeed.

[k] Be not diſmayed as they are.

[l] Give him all praiſe and glory, and hang only on him.

[16] He will have us, when we are afflicted for righteouſneſs ſake, to be careful not for redeeming of our life, either with denying or renouncing the truth, or with like violence, or any ſuch means: but rather to give an account of our faith boldly, and yet with a meek ſpirit: and full of godly reverence, that the enemies may not have any thing juſtly to object, but may rather be aſhamed of themſelves.

A. D. 60.

ry man that aſketh you a reaſon of the hope that is in you, with meekneſs and reverence.

16 Having a good conſcience, that when they ſpeak evil of you as of evil doers, they may be aſhamed, which ſlander your good converſation in Chriſt.

17 [17] For it is better (if the will of God be ſo) that ye ſuffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

* Rom. 5. 6. Heb. 9. 15.

18 * [18] For Chriſt alſo hath once ſuffered for ſins, [19] the juſt for the unjuſt, [20] that he might bring us to God: [21] and was put to death concerning the [m] fleſh, but was quickened by the Spirit.

19 [22] By [n] the which he alſo went, and preached unto the [o] ſpirits that are in priſon,

* Gen. 6. 14. Matt. 24. 38. Luke 17. 26.

20 Which were in time paſſed diſobedient, when [p] once the long ſuffering God abode in the days of * Noah, while the ark was preparing, wherein few, that is, eight [q] ſouls, were ſaved in the water.

21 [23] Whereof the baptiſm that now is, anſwering that figure (which is not a putting away of the filth of the fleſh, but a confident demanding which a good conſcience maketh to [r] God) ſaveth us alſo [24] by the reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt,

22 Which is at the right hand of God, gone into heaven, to whom the angels, and powers, and might are ſubject.

A. D. 60.

CHAP. IV.

1 He bringeth in Chriſt's example, and applieth it 6 to the mortifying of the fleſh, eſpecially commending charity: 12 And ſo entreateth of patience. 17 That it is neceſſary that correction begin at the church.

Foraſmuch [1] then as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the fleſh, arm yourſelves likewiſe with the ſame mind, which is, that he which hath ſuffered in the fleſh, hath ceaſed from ſin.

2 That he henceforward ſhould live (as much time as [a] remaineth in the fleſh) not after the luſts of men, but after the will of God.

* Epheſ. 4. 22.

3 * [2] For it is ſufficient for us that we have ſpent the time paſt of the life after the [b] luſt of the Gentiles, walking in wantonneſs, luſts, drunkenneſs, in gluttony, drinkings, and in abominable idolatries;

4 [3] Wherein it ſeemeth to them [c] ſtrange, that ye run not with them unto the ſame exceſs of riot: therefore ſpeak they of evil of you.

5 Which ſhall give accounts to him that is ready to judge quick and dead.

6 [4] For unto this purpoſe was the goſpel preached alſo unto the dead, that they might be condemned according to men in the fleſh, but might live according to God in the Spirit.

7 Now

[17] A reaſon which ſtandeth upon two general rules of Chriſtianity, which notwithſtanding all men allow not of. The one is, if we muſt needs ſuffer afflictions, it is better to ſuffer wrongfully than rightfully: the other is this, becauſe we are ſo afflicted not by hap, but by the will of our God.

[18] A proof of either of the rules, by the example of Chriſt himſelf our chief pattern, who was afflicted not for his own ſins (which were none) but for ours, and that according to his Father's decree.

[19] An argument taken of compariſon: Chriſt the juſt, ſuffered for us that are unjuſt, and ſhall it grieve us which are unjuſt to ſuffer for the Juſt's cauſe?

[20] Another argument, being partly taken of things coupled together, to wit, becauſe Chriſt bringeth us to his Father that ſame way that he went himſelf, and partly from the cauſe efficient: to wit, becauſe that Chriſt is not only ſet before us for an example to follow, but alſo he holdeth us up by his virtue in all the difficulties of this life, until he bring us to his Father.

[21] Another argument, taken of the happy end of theſe afflictions, wherein Chriſt alſo goeth before us both in example and virtue, as one who ſuffered moſt grievous torments even unto death, although but in one part only of him, to wit, in the fleſh, or man's nature: but yet became conqueror by the virtue of his divinity.

[m] As touching his manhood, for his body was dead, and his ſoul felt the ſorrows of death.

[22] A ſecret objection: Chriſt indeed might do this, but what is that to us? Yes (ſaith the apoſtle) for Chriſt hath ſhewed forth his virtue in all ages both to the preſervation of the godly, were they never ſo few and miſerable, and to revenge the rebellion of his enemies, as it appeareth by the hiſtory of the flood: for Chriſt is he which in thoſe days (when God through his patience appointed a time of repentance to the world) was preſent, not in corporal preſence, but by his divine virtue, preaching repentance, even by the mouth of Noah himſelf, who then prepared the ark, to thoſe diſobedient ſpirits which are now in priſon, waiting for the full recompence of their rebellion, and ſaved thoſe few, (that is, only eight perſons) in the water.

[n] By the virtue of which Spirit, that is to ſay, of the divinity: therefore this word, Spirit, cannot in this place be taken for the ſoul, unleſs we will ſay that Chriſt was raiſed up again, and quickened by the virtue of his ſoul.

[o] He calleth them ſpirits in reſpect of his time, not in reſpect of the time that they were in the fleſh.

[p] This word (once) ſheweth, that there was a furthermoſt day appointed, and if that were once paſt, there ſhould be no more.

[q] Men.

[23] A proportional applying of the former example to the time which followed the coming of Chriſt: for that preſervation of Noah in the waters was a figure of our baptiſm: not as though the material water of baptiſm ſaveth us, as thoſe waters which bore up the ark ſaved Noah, but becauſe Chriſt, with his inward virtue, which the outward baptiſm ſhadoweth, preſerveth us being waſhed, ſo that we may call upon God with a good conſcience.

[r] The conſcience being ſanctified, may freely call upon God.

[24] That ſelf-ſame virtue, whereby Chriſt roſe again, and now being carried up into heaven, hath received all power, doth at this day defend and preſerve us.

[1] Having ended his digreſſion, and ſliding from his matter, now he returneth to the exhortation which he brake off, taking occaſion by that which he ſaid touching the death and reſurrection of Chriſt, ſo defining our ſanctification, that to be ſanctified, is all one as to ſuffer in the fleſh, that is to ſay, to leave off from our wickedneſs and viciouſneſs: and to riſe again to God, that is to ſay, to be renewed by the virtue of the Holy Ghoſt, that we may lead the reſt of our life which remaineth after the will of God.

[a] So much of this preſent life as remaineth yet to be paſſed over.

[2] By putting us in mind of the diſhoneſty of our former life led in the filth of ſin, he calleth us to earneſt repentance.

[b] Wickedly and licentiouſly, after the manner of the Gentiles.

[3] That we be not moved with the enemies perverſe and ſlanderous judgments of us, we have to ſet againſt them that laſt judgment of God which remaineth for them: for none, whether they be then found living, or were dead before, ſhall eſcape it.

[c] They think it a new and ſtrange matter.

[4] A digreſſion: becauſe he made mention of the laſt general judgment. And he preventeth an objection, that ſeeing Chriſt came very lately, they may ſeem to be excuſable which died before. But this the apoſtle denieth: for (ſaith he) this ſelf-ſame goſpel was preached unto them alſo (for he ſpeaketh unto the Jews) and that to the ſame end that I now preach it unto you, to wit, that the fleſh being aboliſhed, and put away (that is to ſay, that wicked and naughty corruption which reigneth in men) they ſhould ſuffer themſelves to be governed by the virtue of the Spirit of God.

A. D. 60.

7 [5] Now the end of all things is at hand. Be ye therefore ſober, and watching in prayer.

8 [6] But above all things have fervent love among you: * for love ſhall cover the multitude of ſins.

* Prov. 10. 12.

9 [7] Be ye * harbourous one to another, without grudging.

* Rom. 12. 13. Heb. 13. 2.

10 [8] * Let every man as he hath received the gift, miniſter the ſame one to another, [9] as good diſpoſers of the manifold grace of God.

*Rom. 12. 6. Phil. 2. 14.

11 [10] If any man ſpeak, let him ſpeak as the words of God. If any man miniſter, let him do it as of the ability which God miniſtereth, that God in all things may be glorified through Jeſus Chriſt, to whom is praiſe and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 [11] Dearly beloved, think it not [d] ſtrange [12] concerning the fiery trial, which is among you to prove you, as though ſome ſtrange thing were come unto you.

13 [13] But rejoice, inaſmuch as ye are partakers of Chriſt's ſufferings, that when his glory ſhall appear, ye may be glad and rejoice.

14 * [14] If ye be railed upon for the name of Chriſt, bleſſed are ye: for the [e] Spirit of glory and of God reſteth upon you: which on their part is evil ſpoken of, but on your part is glorified.

*Matt. 5. 10.

15 [15] But let none of you ſuffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or an evil doer, or as a buſy-body in other men's matters.

16 But if any man ſuffer as a Chriſtian, let him not be aſhamed: but let him glorify God in this behalf:

A. D. 60.

17 [16] For the time is come, that judgment muſt begin at the houſe of God. [17] If it firſt begin at us, what ſhall the end be of them which obey not the goſpel of God?

18 * And if the righteous be ſcarcely ſaved, where ſhall the ungodly and the ſinner appear?

*Prov. 2. 31.

19 [18] Wherefore let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, commit their ſouls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

CHAP. V.

1 He warneth the elders not to uſurp authority over the church, 5 willing the younger ſort to be willing to be taught, and to be modeſt, 8 to be ſober, and watchful to reſiſt the cruel adverſary.

THE [1] elders which are among you, [2] I beſeech, which am alſo an elder, and a witneſs of the ſufferings of Chriſt, and alſo a partaker of the glory that ſhall be revealed:

2 [3] [a] Feed the [4] flock of God, which [5] dependeth upon you, [6] caring for it not by conſtraint, but willingly: not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind:

3 Not as though ye were lords over God's [b] heritage, but that ye may be enſamples to the flock:

4 [7] And when that chief Shepherd ſhall appear, ye ſhall receive an incorruptible crown of glory.

5 Like-

---

[5] He returneth to his purpoſe, uſing an argument taken from the circumſtance of the time. Becauſe the laſt end is at hand, and therefore we muſt ſo much the more diligently watch and pray with true ſobriety of mind.

[6] He commendeth charity of one towards another, becauſe it doth, as it were, bury a multitude of ſins, and therefore preſerveth and maintaineth peace and concord: for they that love one another, do eaſily forgive one another their offences.

[7] Of all the duties of charity, he commendeth one, namely, which was at that time moſt neceſſary, to wit, hoſpitality, which he will have to be voluntary, and moſt courteous and bountiful.

[8] He ſheweth the uſe of charity, to wit, that every man beſtow that gift which he hath received, to the profit of his neighbour.

[9] A reaſon: Becauſe that whatſoever gift we have, we have received it of God upon this condition, to be his diſpoſers and ſtewards.

[10] He reckoneth up two kinds of theſe gifts as chief, to wit, the office of teaching in the church, and the other eccleſiaſtical functions, wherein two things eſpecially are to be obſerved: to wit, that the pure word of God be taught, and whatſoever is done, be referred to the glory of God the Father in Chriſt, as to the proper mark.

[11] Becauſe the croſs is joined with the ſincere profeſſion of religion, the apoſtle fitly repeateth that which he touched before, warning us not to be troubled at perſecutions and afflictions, as at a new and ſtrange thing.

[d] As though ſome new thing had befallen you, which you never thought of before.

[12] The firſt reaſon: Becauſe the Lord meaneth not to conſume us with this fire (as it were) but to purge us of our droſs, and make us perfect.

[13] Another reaſon: Becauſe the afflictions of the godly and the wicked differ very much, and chiefly in three points. Firſt, becauſe the godly communicate with Chriſt in their afflictions, and therefore ſhall in their time be partakers alſo of his glory.

[14] Secondly, becauſe that although the infidels think far otherwiſe, who in afflicting the godly, blaſpheme God; yet the godly, in that they are ſo railed upon, are honoured of God with the true ſpiritual glory, and their adoption is ſealed to them by the Spirit of God.

[e] By ſpirit, he meaneth the gifts of the Spirit.

[15] The third difference: for the godly are not afflicted for their evil doings, but for righteouſneſs ſake as Chriſtians: whereby it cometh to paſs that the croſs, ſeeing it is a teſtimony unto them of faith and righteouſneſs, miniſtereth to them not an occaſion of ſorrow, but of unſpeakable joy: now the apoſtle propoundeth this third difference under the form of an exhortation.

[16] The third reaſon: becauſe the Lord of all the world being eſpecially careful for them of his houſhold, doth therefore chaſtize them firſt of all, yet ſo that he keepeth a meaſure in his greateſt ſeverity. And as he hath always uſed to do heretofore; ſo doth he now, eſpecially whenas he exhibited himſelf in perſon to his church.

[17] Leſt the godly ſhould be offended and ſtumble at that vain ſhadow of felicity of the wicked, as though God were not the governor of the world, for that the wicked are in good caſe, and the godly in evil, the apoſtle teacheth by an argument of a compariſon of them together, that God who ſpareth not his own, but nurtureth them under the croſs, will at length in his time handle the rebellious and wicked far otherwiſe, whom he hath appointed to utter deſtruction.

[18] The concluſion: Seeing the godly are not afflicted by chance, but by the will of God, they ought not to deſpair, but go forward notwithſtanding in the way of holineſs and well doing, commending themſelves to God their faithful Creator, that is to ſay, their Father.

[1] He deſcribeth peculiarly the office of the elders, that is to ſay, of them that have the care of the church.

[2] He uſeth a preface touching the circumſtance of his own perſon: to wit, that he as their companion communeth with them not of matters which he knoweth not, but wherein he is as well experienced as any, and propoundeth unto them no other condition but that which he himſelf hath ſuſtained before them, and doth ſtill take the ſame pains, and alſo hath one ſelf-ſame hope together with them.

[3] The firſt rule: He that is a ſhepherd, let him feed the flock.

[a] He ſaith not, offer for the quick and the dead, and ſing patched ſhreds in a ſtrange tongue, but (feed.)

[4] The ſecond: Let the ſhepherd conſider, that the flock is not his, but God's.

[5] The third: Let not the ſhepherds invade other men's flocks, but let them feed that which God hath committed unto them.

[6] Let the ſhepherd govern the church with the word, and example of godly and unblameable life; not by conſtraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; not as lords over God's portion and heritage, but as his miniſters.

[b] Which is the Chriſtian people.

[7] That the ſhepherds minds be not overcome with either the wickedneſs of men, or their cruelty, warneth them to caſt their eyes continually upon that chief Shepherd, and the crown which is laid up for them in heaven.

A. D. 60.

5 [8] Likewiſe, ye younger, ſubmit yourſelves unto the elders: and ſubmit yourſelves every man, one to another: * deck yourſelves inwardly in lowlineſs of mind: [9] for * God reſiſteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

---

[8] He commendeth many peculiar Chriſtian virtues, and eſpecially modeſty: which admonition all of us ſtand in need of, but eſpecially the younger ſort, by reaſon of the untowardneſs and pride of that age.

[9] Becauſe pride ſeemeth to many to be the way unto the glory of this life, the apoſtle witneſſeth on the contrary ſide, that ignominy and ſhame is the reward of pride, and glory the reward of modeſty.

[10] Becauſe thoſe proud and lofty ſpirits threaten the modeſt and humble, the apoſtle warneth us to ſet the power of God againſt the vanity of proud men, and to hang wholly upon his providence.

[11] The cruelty of Satan, who ſeeketh by all means to devour us, is overcome by watchfulneſs and faith.

[12] The perſecutions which Satan ſtirreth up, are neither new nor proper to any one man, but from old and antient time common to the whole church, and therefore we muſt ſuffer that patiently, wherein we have ſuch and ſo many fellows of our conflicts and combats.

[c] Amongſt your brethren which are diſperſed throughout the world.

[13] He ſealeth up as it were with a ſeal the former exhortation, with a ſolemn prayer, again willing them to aſk increaſe of ſtrength at his hands, of whom they had the beginning, and hope to have the accompliſhment: to wit, of God the Father in Chriſt Jeſus, in whom we are ſure of the glory of eternal life.

[14] Continuance and perſeverance in the doctrine of the apoſtles, is the only ground and foundation of Chriſtian ſtrength: now the ſum of the apoſtles doctrine, is ſalvation freely given of God.

The Second Epiſtle General of PETER.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 66.

3 Having ſpoken of the bountifulneſs of God, 5 and of the virtues of faith, 6 he exhorteth them to holineſs of life. 12 And that his counſel may be the more effectual, 14 he ſheweth that his death is at hand, 16 and that himſelf did ſee the power of Chriſt which he opened unto them.

SIMON [1] Peter, a ſervant and an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, to you which have obtained like precious faith with us by the [a] righteouſneſs of our God and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt:

2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto you, [2] through the acknowledging of God, and of Jeſus our Lord,

3 [3] According as his [b] divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto [c] life and godlineſs, through the [d] acknowledging of him that hath called us unto glory and virtue,

4 [4] Whereby moſt great and precious promiſes are given unto us, that by them ye ſhould be partakers of the [e] divine nature, in that ye flee the corruption which is in the [f] world through [g] luſt.

5 [5] Therefore give even all diligence thereunto: [h] join moreover virtue with your faith: and with virtue, knowledge:

6 [6] And with knowledge, temperance: and with temperance, patience: and with patience, godlineſs:

7 And with godlineſs, brotherly kindneſs: and with brotherly kindneſs, love.

---

[1] A ſalutation, wherein he giveth them to underſtand, that he dealeth with them as Chriſt's ambaſſador: and otherwiſe agreeth with them in one ſelf-ſame faith, which is grounded upon the righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, our God and Saviour.

[a] In that that God ſtanding to his promiſes, ſhewed himſelf faithful, and therefore juſt unto us.

[2] Faith is the acknowledging of God and Chriſt, from whence all our bleſſedneſs iſſueth and floweth.

[3] Chriſt ſetteth forth himſelf unto us plainly, in the goſpel, and that by his only power, and giveth us all things which are requiſite both to eternal life, wherein he hath appointed to glorify us, and alſo to godlineſs, in that he doth furniſh us with true virtue.

[b] He ſpeaketh of Chriſt, whom he maketh God, and the only Saviour.

[c] Unto ſalvation.

[d] This is the ſum of true religion, to be led by Chriſt to the Father, as it were by the hand.

[4] An explication of the former ſentence, declaring the cauſes of ſo great benefits, to wit, God and his free promiſe, from whence all theſe benefits proceed, I ſay, theſe moſt excellent benefits, whereby we are delivered from the corruption of the world, (that is, from the wicked luſts which we carry about us) and are made after a ſort, like unto God himſelf.

[e] By the divine nature he meaneth not the ſubſtance of the godhead, but the partaking of thoſe qualities, whereby the image of God is reſtored in us.

[f] In men.

[g] For luſt is the ſeat of corruption, and hath his place even in our very bowels, and inmoſt parts.

[5] Having laid the foundation, (that is, having declared the cauſes of our ſalvation, and eſpecially of our ſanctification) now he beginneth to exhort us to give our minds wholly to the true uſe of this grace. And he beginneth with faith, without which nothing can pleaſe God, and he warneth us to have it full fraught with virtue (that is to ſay, with good and godly manners), being joined with the knowledge of God's will, without which there is neither faith, neither any true virtue.

[h] Supply alſo, and ſupport or aid.

[6] He reckoneth up certain other principal virtues, whereof ſome pertain to the firſt table of the law, others to the laſt.

A. D. 66. 8 [7] For if theſe things be among you, and abound, they will make you that ye neither ſhall be idle, nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt:

9 For he that hath not theſe things, is blind, and [i] cannot ſee far off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old ſins.

10 [8] Wherefore, brethren, give rather diligence to make your calling and election ſure: for if ye do theſe things, ye ſhall never fall.

11 For by this means an entering ſhall be miniſtered unto you abundantly into the everlaſting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

12 [9] Wherefore, I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of theſe things, though that ye have knowledge, and be ſtabliſhed in the preſent truth,

13 For I think it meet, as long as I am in this [k] tabernacle, to ſtir you up by putting you in remembrance,

14 Seeing I know that the time is at hand that I muſt lay down this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath * ſhewed me. * John 21. 18.

15 I will endeavour therefore always, that ye alſo may be able to have remembrance of theſe things after my departing:

16 * [10] For we followed not deceivable fables when we opened unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, but with our eyes we ſaw his majeſty: * 1 Cor. 1. 17. and 2. 1.

17 For he received of God the Father honour and glory, when there came ſuch a voice to him from that excellent glory, * This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed. * Matt. 17. 5.

18 And this voice we heard when it came from heaven, being with him in the holy mount.

19 [11] We have alſo a moſt ſure word of the prophets, [12] to the which ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that ſhineth in a dark place, until the day [l] dawn, and the [m] day-ſtar ariſe in your hearts.

20 * [13] So that ye firſt know this, that no prophecy of the [n] ſcripture is of any [o] private interpretation: A. D. 66. * 2 Tim. 3. 16.

21 For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but [p] holy men of God ſpake as they were [q] moved by the Holy Ghoſt.

CHAP. II.

1 He foretelleth them of falſe teachers, 3 whoſe wicked ſleights and deſtruction he declareth. 12 He compareth them to brute beaſts, 17 and to wells without water, 20 becauſe they ſeek to withdraw men from God to their old filthineſs.

BUT [1] there were falſe prophets alſo among the [a] people, even as there ſhall be falſe teachers among you: which privily ſhall bring in damnable hereſies, even denying the Lord that hath bought them, and bring upon themſelves ſwift damnation.

2 [2] And many ſhall follow their deſtructions, by whom the way of truth ſhall be evil ſpoken of:

3 [3] And through covetouſneſs ſhall they with feigned words [b] make merchandize of you: [4] whoſe condemnation long ſince reſteth not, and their deſtruction ſlumbereth not.

4 For if God ſpared not the * angels that had ſinned, but caſt them down into [c] hell, and delivered them into [d] chains of darkneſs, to be kept unto damnation: * Job 4. 18. Jude 6.

5 Neither hath ſpared the [e] old world, but ſaved * Noah the eighth perſon, a [f] preacher of righteouſneſs, and brought in the flood upon the world of the ungodly: * Gen. 7. 1.

6 And * turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into aſhes, condemned them, and overthrew them, and made them an enſample unto them that after ſhould live ungodly: * Gen. 19. 13, 24.

7 And delivered juſt Lot, vexed with the uncleanly converſation of the wicked:

8 (For he being righteous, and dwelling among them, in [g] ſeeing and hearing, [h] vexed his

[7] As thoſe fruits do ſpring from the true knowledge of Chriſt, ſo in like ſort the knowledge itſelf is foſtered, and groweth, by bringing forth ſuch fruits, inſomuch that he that is unfruitful, did either never know the true light, or hath forgotten the gift of ſanctification, which he hath received.

[i] He that hath not an effectual knowledge of God in him, is blind as touching the kingdom of God, ſo he cannot ſee things that are afar off, that is to ſay, heavenly things.

[8] The concluſion: Therefore ſeeing our calling and election is approved by thoſe fruits, and is confirmed in us: and moreover ſeeing this is the only way to the everlaſting kingdom of Chriſt, it remaineth that we caſt our minds wholly that way.

[9] An amplifying of the concluſion joined with a modeſt excuſe, wherein he declareth his love towards them, and foretelleth them of his death, which is at hand.

[k] In this body.

[10] Another amplification, taken both of the great certainty and alſo excellency of his doctrine, as whereof our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of God, is author, whoſe glory the apoſtle himſelf both ſaw and heard.

[11] The truth of the goſpel is hereby alſo manifeſt, in that it agreeth wholly with the foretellings of the prophets.

[12] The doctrine of the apoſtles doth not ſhut out the doctrine of the prophets, for they confirm each other by each other's teſtimonies; but the prophets were as candles which gave light unto the blind, until the brightneſs of the goſpel began to ſhine.

A more full and open knowledge than was under the ſhadows of the law.

[m] That clearer doctrine of the goſpel.

[13] The prophets are to be read, but ſo, that we aſk of God the gift of interpretation: for he that is the author of the writings of the prophets, is alſo the interpreter of them.

[n] He joineth the ſcripture and prophecy together, to diſtinguiſh true prophecies from falſe.

[o] For all interpretation cometh from God.

[p] The godly interpreters and meſſengers.

[q] Inſpired of God: and theſe their motions were in very good order, and not ſuch as were the motions of the prophane ſoothſayers, and foretellers of things to come.

[1] As in times paſt there were two kinds of prophets, the one true, the other falſe, ſo Peter foretelleth them, that there ſhall be ſome true and ſome falſe teachers in the church, inſomuch that Chriſt himſelf ſhall be denied of ſome, which notwithſtanding ſhall call him Redeemer.

[a] Under the law, while the ſtate and policy of the Jews was yet ſtanding.

[2] There ſhall not only be hereſies, but alſo many followers of them.

[3] Covetouſneſs for the moſt part is a companion of hereſy, and maketh merchandiſe even of ſouls.

[b] They will abuſe you, and ſell you, as they ſell cattle in a fair.

[4] A comfort for the godly: God, who caſt the angels, that fell away from him, headlong into the darkneſs of hell, at length to be judged: and who deſtroyed the old world with the flood, and preſerved Noah, the eighth perſon: and who burned Sodom, and ſaved Lot: will deliver his elect from theſe errors, and will utterly deſtroy thoſe unrighteous.

[c] So the Grecians called the deep dungeons under the earth, which ſhould be appointed to torment the ſouls of the wicked in.

[d] Bound them with darkneſs, as it were with chains: and by darkneſs he meaneth that moſt miſerable ſtate of life, that is full of horror.

[e] Which was before the flood: not that God made a new world, but becauſe the world ſeemed new.

[f] For he ceaſed not the ſpace of an hundred and twenty years to warn the wicked, both by word and deed, what wrath of God hanged over their heads.

[g] Which way ſoever he looked, and turned his ears.

[h] He had a troubled ſoul, and being vehemently grieved, lived a painful life.

A. D. 66. his righteous ſoul from day to day with their unlawful deeds)

9 The Lord [i] knoweth to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reſerve the unjuſt unto the day of judgment under puniſhment:

10 [5] And chiefly them that walk after the fleſh, in the luſt of uncleanneſs, and deſpiſe government, which are bold, and ſtand in their own conceit, and fear not to ſpeak evil of them that are in [k] dignity.

11 Whereas the angels, which are greater both in power and might, give not railing judgment againſt them before the Lord.

12 [6] But theſe, as natural brute beaſts, led with ſenſuality, and [l] made to be taken and deſtroyed, ſpeak evil of thoſe things which they know not, and ſhall periſh through their [m] own corruption,

13 And ſhall receive the wages of unrighteouſneſs, as they which count it pleaſure daily to live deliciouſly. ‡ Spots they are and blots, delighting themſelves in their deceivings, [n] in feaſting with you, ‡ Or, little rocks.

14 [7] Having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot ceaſe to ſin, beguiling unſtable ſouls: they have hearts exerciſed with covetouſneſs, they are the children of curſe:

15 Which forſaking the right way, have gone aſtray, following the way * of Balaam, the ſon of Boſor, which loved the wages of unrighteouſneſs: * Num. 22. 23.

16 But he was rebuked for his iniquity: for the dumb beaſt, ſpeaking with man's voice, forbad the fooliſhneſs of the prophet.

17 * [8] Theſe are [o] wells without water, and clouds carried about with a tempeſt, to whom the [p] black darkneſs is reſerved for ever. * Jude 12.

18 For in ſpeaking [q] ſwelling words of vanity, they [r] beguile with wantonneſs, through the luſts of the fleſh, them that were [s] clean eſcaped from them which are wrapped in error:

19 Promiſing unto them liberty, and are themſelves the * ſervants of corruption: for of whomſoever a man is overcome, even unto the ſame is he in bondage. * John 8. 34. Rom. 6. 20.

20 [9] * For if they, after they have eſcaped from the filthineſs of the world, through the acknowledging of the Lord, and of the Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, are yet tangled again therein, and overcome, the latter end is worſe with them than the beginning. A. D. 66. * Matt. 12. 45. Heb. 6. 4.

21 For it had been better for them, not to have acknowledged the way of righteouſneſs, than after they have acknowledged it, to turn from the holy commandment given unto them.

22 But it is come unto them, according to the true proverb, * The dog is returned to his own vomit: and the ſow that was waſhed, to the wallowing in the mire. * Prov. 26. 11.

CHAP. III.

1 He ſheweth that he writeth the ſame things again, 2
becauſe they muſt often be ſtirred up, 4 becauſe dan- gers hang over their heads through certain mockers.
8 Therefore he warneth the godly that they do not,
after the judgment of the fleſh, 12 appoint the day of the Lord, 14 but that they think it always at hand: 15 in which doctrine he ſheweth that Paul agreeth with him.

THIS [1] ſecond epiſtle I now write unto you, beloved, wherewith I ſtir up and warn your pure minds,

2 To call to remembrance the words which were told before of the holy prophets, and alſo the commandment of us the apoſtles of the Lord and Saviour.

3 * [2] This firſt underſtand, that there ſhall come in the laſt days, [a] mockers, which will walk after their luſts, * 1 Tim. 4. 2 Tim. 3. Jude 18.

4 [3] And ſay, Where is the promiſe of his coming? for ſince the fathers died, all things continue alike from the beginning of the creation.

5 [4] For this they willingly know not, that the heavens were of old, and the [b] earth that was of the water and by the water, by the word of God.

6 Where-

---

[i] Hath been long practiſed in ſaving and delivering the righteous.

[5] He goeth to another ſort of corrupt men, which notwithſtanding are within the boſom of the church, which are wickedly given, and do ſeditiouſly ſpeak evil of the authority of magiſtrates (which the angels themſelves that miniſter before God, do not diſpraiſe). A true and lively deſcription of the Romiſh clergy (as they call it.)

[k] Princes and great men, be they never ſo high in authority.

[6] A lively painting out of the ſame perſons, wherein they are compared to beaſts which are made to ſnare themſelves to deſtruction, while they give themſelves to fill their bellies: for there is no greater ignorance than is in theſe men; although they moſt impudently find fault with thoſe things which they know not: and it ſhall come to paſs that they ſhall deſtroy themſelves as beaſts with thoſe pleaſures wherewith they are delighted, and diſhonour and defile the company of the godly.

[l] Made to this end to be a prey to others: So do theſe men willingly caſt themſelves into Satan's ſnares.

[m] Their own wicked manners ſhall bring them to deſtruction.

[n] When as by being amongſt the Chriſtians in the holy banquets which the church keepeth, they would ſeem by that means to be true members of the church, yet they are indeed but blots of the Church.

[7] He condemneth thoſe men, as ſhewing, even in their behaviour and countenance, an unmeaſurable luſt, as making merchandiſe of the ſouls of light perſons, as men exerciſed in all the crafts of covetouſneſs; to be ſhort, as men that ſell themſelves for money, to curſe the ſons of God after Balaam's example, whom the dumb beaſt reproved.

[8] Another note, whereby they may be well known what manner of men they are, becauſe they have inwardly nothing but either utterly vain or very hurtful, although they make a ſhew of ſome great goodneſs, but they ſhall not eſcape unpuniſhed for it, becauſe under pretence of falſe liberty, they draw men into moſt miſerable ſlavery of ſin.

[o] Which boaſt of knowledge, and have nothing in them.

[p] Moſt groſs darkneſs.

[q] They deceive men with vain and ſwelling words.

[r] They take them as fiſhes are taken with the hook.

[s] Unfeignedly and indeed, clean departed from idolatry.

[9] It were better to have never known the way of righteouſneſs, than to turn back from it to the old filthineſs: and men that do ſo are compared to dogs and ſwine.

[1] The remedy againſt thoſe wicked enemies, both of true doctrine and holineſs, is to be ſought for by the continual meditation of the writings of the prophets and apoſtles.

[2] He voucheth the ſecond coming of Chriſt againſt the Epicures by name.

[a] Monſtrous men, who would ſeem wiſe by their contempt of God, and wicked boldneſs.

[3] The reaſon which theſe mockers pretend, becauſe the courſe of nature is all one as it was from the beginning, therefore the world was from everlaſting, and ſhall be for ever.

[4] He ſetteth againſt them the creation of heaven and earth by the word of God, which theſe men are willingly ignorant of.

[b] Which appeared, when the waters were gathered together into one place.

A. D. 66.

6 [5] Wherefore the world that then was, periſhed, overflowed with the [c] water.

7 [6] But the heavens and the earth, which are now, are kept by the ſame word in ſtore, and reſerved unto fire againſt the day of condemnation, and of the deſtruction of ungodly men.

8 [7] Dearly beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord * as a thouſand years, and a thouſand years as one day.

* Pſ. 90. 4.

9 [8] The Lord of that promiſe is not ſlack (as ſome men count ſlackneſs) [9] but is patient toward us, and * would have no man to periſh, but would all men to come to repentance.

* Ezek. 18. 32. and 33. 11. 1Tim. 2. 4.

10 [10] But the * day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens ſhall paſs away with a [d] noiſe, and the elements ſhall melt with heat, and the earth with the works that are therein, ſhall be burnt up.

* Matt. 24. 44. 1Theſſ 5. 2. Rev. 3. 3. and 16. 15.

11 [11] Seeing therefore that all theſe things muſt be diſſolved, what manner of perſons ought ye to be in holy converſation and godlineſs!

12 Looking for, and [e] haſting unto the coming of that day of God, by which the heavens being on fire ſhall be diſſolved, and the elements ſhall melt with heat.

13 But we look for * new heavens, and a new earth, according to his promiſe, [f] wherein dwelleth righteouſneſs.

* Iſa. 65 17. and 66. 22. Rev. 21. 1.

14 Wherefore, beloved, ſeeing that ye look for ſuch things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in [g] peace, without ſpot and blameleſs.

15 * And ſuppoſe that the long ſuffering of our Lord is ſalvation, [12] even as our beloved brother Paul, according to the wiſdom given unto him, wrote unto you,

* Rom. 2. 4.

16 As one that in all his epiſtles ſpeaketh of theſe things: [13] among the [h] which, ſome things are hard to be underſtood, which they that are unlearned and unſtable, wreſt, as they do alſo other ſcriptures, unto their own deſtruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, ſeeing ye know theſe things before, beware leſt ye be alſo plucked away with the error of the wicked, and fall from your own ſtedfaſtneſs.

18 But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt: to him be glory both now and evermore. Amen.

---

[5] Secondly, he ſetteth againſt them the univerſal flood which was the deſtruction, as it were, of the whole world

[c] For the waters returning into their former place, this world, that is to ſay, this beauty of the earth which we ſee and all living creatures which live upon the earth, periſhed.

[6] Thirdly, he pronounceth that it ſhall not be harder for God to burn heaven and earth with fire, in that day which is appointed for the deſtruction of the wicked (which thing he will alſo do) than it was for him in times paſt to make them with his only word, and afterward to overwhelm them with water.

[7] The taking away of an objection: In that he ſeemeth to defer this judgment a long ſeaſon, in reſpect of us it is true, but not before God, with whom there is no time either long or ſhort.

[8] The Lord will ſurely come, becauſe he hath promiſed: and that neither ſooner nor later than he hath promiſed.

[9] A reaſon why the latter day cometh not out of hand, becauſe God doth patiently wait till the elect be brought to repentance, that none of them may periſh.

[10] A very ſhort deſcription of the laſt deſtruction of the world, but in ſuch ſort as nothing could be ſpoken more gravely.

[d] With the violence as it were of a hiſſing ſtorm.

[11] An exhortation of purity of life, ſetting before us that horrible judgment of God, both to bridle our wantonneſs and alſo to comfort us, ſo that we be found watching, and ready to meet him at his coming.

[e] He requireth patience of us, yet ſuch patience as is not ſlothful.

[f] In which heavens.

[g] That you may try to your profit, how gentle and peaceable he is.

[12] Paul's epiſtles are allowed by the expreſs teſtimony of Peter.

[13] There be certain of theſe things obſcure and dark, whereof the unlearned take occaſion to overthrow ſome men that ſtand not faſt, wreſting the teſtimonies of the ſcripture to their own deſtruction. But this is the remedy againſt ſuch deceit, to labour that we may daily more and more grow up and increaſe in the knowledge of Chriſt.

[h] That is to ſay, among the which things: for he diſputeth not here whether Paul's epiſtles be plain or dark, but faith, that amongſt thoſe things which Paul hath written of in his epiſtles: and Peter himſelf in theſe two of his owns, there are ſome things which cannot be ſo eaſily underſtood, and therefore are of ſome drawn to their own deſtruction: and this he ſaith to make us more attentive and diligent, and not to remove us from the reading of holy things, for to what end ſhould they have written vain ſpeculations?

The Firſt Epiſtle General of JOHN.

CHAP. I.

A. D. 90.

1 He teſtifieth that he bringeth the eternal Word wherein is life, 5 and light. 9 God will be merciful unto the faithful, if groaning under the burden of their ſins, they learn to flee unto his mercy.

THAT [1] which was from the beginning, which we have [a] heard, which we have ſeen with theſe our eyes, which we have looked upon, and theſe hands of ours have handled of that [b] Word of life,

2 (For that life was made manifeſt, and we have ſeen it, and bear witneſs, and [c] ſhew unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifeſt unto us)

3 That, I ſay, which we have ſeen and heard, declare we unto you, [2] that ye may alſo have fellowſhip with us, and that our fellowſhip alſo may be with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt.

---

[1] He beginneth with the deſcription of the perſon of Chriſt, whom he maketh one, and not two: and him both God from everlaſting (for he was with the Father from the beginning, and is that eternal life) and alſo made true man, whom John himſelf and his companions, both heard, and beheld, and handled.

[a] I heard him ſpeak, I ſaw him myſelf with mine eyes, I handled with mine hands him that is very God, being made very man; and not I alone, but others alſo that were with me.

[b] That ſame everlaſting Word by whom all things are made, and in whom only there is life.

[c] Being ſent by him: and that doctrine is rightly ſaid to be ſhewed, for no man could ſo much as have thought of it, if it had not been thus ſhewed.

[2] The uſe of this doctrine is this, that all of us being coupled and joined together with Chriſt by faith, might become the ſons of God: in which thing only conſiſteth all happineſs.

A. D. 90.

4 And theſe things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.

5 [3] This then is the meſſage which we have heard of him and declare unto you, that God * is light, and in him is no darkneſs.

*John 8.12.

6 If we ſay that we have fellowſhip with him, and walk in darkneſs, we lye, and do not truly.

7 But if we walk in the [d] light as he is in the light, we have fellowſhip one with another, [4] and the * blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all ſin.

*Heb. 9. 28. 1 Pet. 1. 19. Rev. 1. 5.

8 [5] * If we ſay that we have no ſin, we [e] deceive ourſelves, and [f] truth is not in us.

*1 Kings 8. 46. 2 Chron. 6. 36. Prov. 20. 9.

9 [6] If we acknowledge our ſins, he is [g] faithful and juſt to [h] forgive us our ſins, and to cleanſe us from all unrighteouſneſs.

10 [7] If we ſay we have not ſinned, we make him [i] a lyar, and his [k] word is not in us.

CHAP. II.

1 He declareth that Chriſt is our mediator and advocate, 3 and ſheweth that the knowledge of God conſiſteth in holineſs of life, 12 which appertaineth to all ſorts, 14 that depend on Chriſt alone. 15 Then having exhorted them to contemn the world, 18 he giveth warning that antichriſts be avoided, 24 and that the known truth be ſtood unto.

MY [1] little children, theſe things write I unto you, that ye ſin not: and if any man ſin, we have an [a] Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the Juſt.

2 And he is the [b] reconciliation for our ſins: and not for ours only, but alſo for the ſins of the [c] whole world.

3 [2] And hereby we are ſure that we [d] know him, [e] if we keep his commandments.

4 [3] He that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a lyar, and the truth is not in him.

5 [4] But he that keepeth his word, in him is the [f] love of God perfect indeed: hereby we know that we are in [g] him.

6 [5] He that ſaith he remaineth in him, ought even ſo to walk as he hath walked.

7 [6] Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you: but an old commandment, which ye have had from the beginning: this old commandment is that word, which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 [7] Again, a new commandment I write unto you, that [h] which is true in him, and alſo in you: for the darkneſs is paſt, and that true light now ſhineth.

9 [8] He that ſaith that he is in that light, and hateth his brother, is in darkneſs until this time.

10 * He that loveth his brother, abideth in that light, and there is none occaſion of evil in him.

*Ch. 3. 14.

11 But he that hateth his brother, is in dark-

---

[3] Now he entereth into a queſtion, whereby we may underſtand that we are joined together with Chriſt, to wit, if we be governed with his light, which is perceived by the ordering of our life. And thus he reaſoneth: God is in himſelf moſt pure light, therefore he agreeth well with them which are lightſome, but with them that are darkſome he hath no fellowſhip.

[d] God is ſaid to be light of his own nature, and to be in light, that is to ſay, in that everlaſting infinite bleſſedneſs: and we are ſaid to walk in light, in that the beams of that light do ſhine unto us in the word.

[4] A digreſſion, or going from the matter he is in hand with, to the remiſſion of ſins: for this our ſanctification which walk in the light, is a teſtimony of our joining and knitting together with Chriſt: but becauſe this our light is very dark, we muſt needs obtain another benefit in Chriſt, to wit, that our ſins may be forgiven us being ſprinkled with his blood: and this in concluſion is the prop and ſtay of our ſalvation.

[5] There is none but needeth this benefit, becauſe there is none that is not a ſinner.

[e] This place doth fully refute that perfectneſs and works of ſupererogation, which the Papiſts dream of.

[f] So then, John ſpeaketh not thus for modeſty's ſake, as ſome men ſay, but becauſe it is ſo indeed.

[6] Therefore the beginning of ſalvation is to acknowledge our wickedneſs, and to require pardon of him, who freely forgiveth all ſins, becauſe he hath promiſed ſo to do, and he is faithful and juſt.

[g] So then our ſalvation hangeth upon the free promiſes of God, who becauſe he is faithful and juſt, will perform that which he hath promiſed.

[h] Where are then our merits? for this is our true felicity.

[7] A rehearſal of the former ſentence, wherein he condemned all of ſin without exception: inſomuch that if any man perſuade himſelf otherwiſe, he doth as much as in him lieth make the word of God himſelf vain, and to no purpoſe, yea, he maketh God a lyar: for to what end, either in times paſt, needed ſacrifices, or now Chriſt and the goſpel, if we be not ſinners?

[i] They do not only deceive themſelves, but are blaſphemous againſt God.

[k] His doctrine ſhall have no place in us: that is, in our hearts.

[1] It followeth not hereof, that we muſt give our wicked nature the bridle, or ſin ſo much the more freely, becauſe our ſins are cleanſed away by the blood of Chriſt, but we muſt rather ſo much the more diligently reſiſt ſin. And yet we muſt not deſpair becauſe of our weakneſs, for we have an advocate and a purger, Chriſt Jeſus the juſt, and therefore acceptable unto his Father.

[a] In that he nameth Chriſt, he ſhutteth forth all other.

[b] Reconciliation and interceſſion go together, to give us to underſtand that he is both advocate and high prieſt.

[c] For men of all ſorts, of all ages, and all places, ſo that this benefit belongeth not to the Jews only, of whom he ſpeaketh, as appeareth, ver. 7. but alſo to other nations.

[2] He returneth to the teſtimony of our conjunction with God, to wit, to ſanctification, declaring what it is to walk in the light, to wit, to keep God's commandments. Whereby it followeth that holineſs doth not conſiſt in thoſe things which men have deviſed, neither in a vain profeſſion of the goſpel.

[d] This muſt be underſtood of ſuch a knowledge as hath faith with it, and not of a common knowledge.

[e] For the tree is known by the fruit.

[3] Holineſs, that is, a life ordered according to the preſcript of God's commandments, how weak ſoever we be, is of neceſſity joined with faith, that is, with the true knowledge of the Father in the Son.

[4] He that keepeth God's commandments, loveth God indeed: He that loveth God, is in God, or is joined together with God. Therefore he that keepeth his commandments, is in him.

[f] Wherewith we love God.

[g] He meaneth our conjunction with Chriſt.

[5] He that is one with Chriſt, muſt needs live his life, that is, muſt walk in his ſteps.

[6] The apoſtle going about to expound the commandment of charity one towards another, telleth firſt, that when he urgeth holineſs, he bringeth no new trade of life (as they uſe to do which deviſe tradition one after another) but putteth them in mind of that ſame law which God gave in the beginning, to wit, by Moſes, at that time that God began to make laws to his people.

[7] He addeth, that the doctrine indeed is old, but it is now after a ſort new, both in reſpect of Chriſt, and alſo of us, in whom he, through the goſpel, engraveth his law effectually, not in tables of ſtone, but in our minds.

[h] Which thing, (to wit, that the doctrine is new which I write unto you) is true in him, and in you.

[8] Now he cometh to the ſecond table, that is, to charity one towards another, and denieth that that man hath true light in him, or is indeed regenerate, and the ſon of God, which hateth his brother: and ſuch an one wandereth miſerably in darkneſs, brag he of never ſo great knowledge of God, for that wittingly and willingly he caſteth himſelf headlong into hell.

A. D. 90.

neſs, and walketh in darkneſs, and knoweth not whither he goeth, becauſe that darkneſs hath blinded his eyes.

12 [9] Little children, [i] I write unto you, becauſe your ſins are forgiven you for his [k] name's ſake.

13 [10] I write unto you, fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning. [11] I write unto you, young men, becauſe ye have overcome that wicked one. [12] I write unto you, little children, becauſe ye have known the Father.

14 [13] I have written unto you, fathers, becauſe ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, becauſe ye are ſtrong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome that wicked one.

15 [14] Love not this [l] world, neither the things that are in this world. If any man love this world, the [m] love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that is in this world (as the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eyes, and the pride of life) is not of the Father, but is of this world.

17 [15] And this world paſſeth away, and the luſt thereof: but he that fulfilleth the will of God, abideth for ever.

18 [16] [n] Little children, [17] it is the laſt time: [18] and as ye have heard that Antichriſt ſhall come, even now there are many Antichriſts: whereby we know that it is the laſt time.

A. D. 90.

19 [19] They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, [o] they ſhould have continued with us. [20] But this cometh to paſs, that it might appear, that they are not all of us.

20 [21] But ye have an [p] ointment from that [q] Holy one, and know all things.

21 [22] I have not written unto you, becauſe ye know not the truth: but becauſe ye know it, and that no lye is of the truth.

22 [23] Who is a lyar, but he that denieth that Jeſus is [r] that Chriſt? the ſame is that Antichriſt that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 [s] Whoſoever denieth the Son, the ſame hath not the Father.

24 [24] Let therefore abide in you that ſame which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning, ſhall remain in you, ye alſo ſhall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promiſe that he hath promiſed us, even that eternal life.

26 [25] Theſe things have I written unto you, concerning them that deceive you.

27 But that [t] anointing which ye received of him, dwelleth in you: and ye [u] need not that any man teach you: but as the ſame [x] anointing teacheth

---

[9] He returneth again from ſanctification to remiſſion of ſins, becauſe that free reconciliation in Chriſt is the ground of our ſalvation, whereupon afterwards ſanctification muſt be built as upon a foundation.

[i] Therefore I write unto you, becauſe you are of their number whom God hath reconciled to himſelf.

[k] For his own ſake: And in that he nameth Chriſt, he ſhutteth out all other, whether they be in heaven or earth.

[10] He ſheweth, that this doctrine agreeth to all ages: and firſt of all ſpeaking to old men, he ſheweth, that Chriſt and his doctrine are paſſing ancient, and therefore if they be delighted with old things, nothing ought to be more acceptable unto them.

[11] He advertiſeth young men, if they be deſirous to ſhew their ſtrength, that they have a moſt glorious combat ſet here before them, to wit, Satan, the worſt enemy, who muſt be overcome: willing them to be as ſure of the victory as if they had already gotten it.

[12] Finally, he ſheweth to children, that that true Father, from whom they have to look for all good things, is ſet forth unto them in the goſpel.

[13] He addeth afterward in like order as many exhortations: as if he ſhould ſay, Remember, you fathers, as I wrote even now, that the everlaſting Son of God is revealed to us. Remember, ye young men, that that ſtrength whereby I ſaid that you put Satan to flight, is given you by the word of God which dwelleth in you.

[14] The world, which is full of wicked deſires, luſts, or pleaſures, and pride, is utterly hated of our heavenly Father. Therefore the Father and the world cannot be loved together: and this admonition is very neceſſary for green and flouriſhing youth.

[l] He ſpeaketh of the world, as it agreeth not with the will of God, for otherwiſe God is ſaid to love the world with an infinite love, John 3. 16. that is to ſay, thoſe whom he choſe out of the world.

[m] Wherewith the Father is loved.

[15] He ſheweth how much better it is to obey the Father's will, than the luſts of the world, by both their natures and unlike event.

[16] Now he turneth himſelf to little children, which notwithſtanding are well inſtructed in the ſum of religion, and willeth them by divers reaſons to ſhake off ſlothfulneſs, which is too familiar with that age.

[n] He uſeth this word (Little) not becauſe he ſpeaketh to children, but to allure them the more by uſing ſuch ſweet words.

[17] Firſt, becauſe the laſt time is at hand, ſo that the matter ſuffereth no delay.

[18] Secondly, becauſe Antichriſts, that is, ſuch as fall from God, are already come, even as they heard that they ſhould come. And it was very requiſite to warn that unheedy and warileſs age of that danger.

[19] A digreſſion againſt certain offences and ſtumbling-blocks whereat that rude age eſpecially might ſtumble and be ſhaken. Therefore that they ſhould not be terrified with the foul falling back of certain, firſt he maketh plain unto them, that although ſuch as fall from God and his religion had place in the church, yet they were never of the church: becauſe the church is the company of the elect, which cannot periſh, and therefore cannot fall from Chriſt.

[o] So then the elect can never fall from grace.

[20] Secondly, he ſheweth, that theſe things fall out to the profit of the church, that hypocrites may be plainly known.

[21] Thirdly, he comforteth them, to make them ſtand faſt, inſomuch as they are anointed of the Holy Ghoſt with the true knowledge of ſalvation.

[p] The grace of the Holy Ghoſt, and this is a borrowed kind of ſpeech, taken from the ointings uſed in the law.

[q] From Chriſt, who is peculiarly called holy.

[22] The taking away of an objection. He wrote not theſe things as to men which are ignorant of religion, but rather as to them which do well know the truth, yea, ſo far forth, that they are able to diſcern truth from falſhood.

[23] He ſheweth now plainly that falſe doctrine of the Antichriſts, to wit, that either they fight againſt the perſon of Chriſt, or his office, or both together, and at once. And they that do ſo, do in vain boaſt and brag of God, for that in denying the Son, the Father is alſo denied.

[r] Is the true Meſſias.

[s] They then are deceived themſelves, and alſo deceive others, which ſay that the Turks and other infidels worſhip the ſame God that we do.

[24] The whole preaching of the prophets and apoſtles is contrary to that doctrine. Therefore it is utterly to be caſt away, and this wholly to be holden, and kept, which leadeth us to ſeek eternal life in the free promiſe, that is to ſay, in Chriſt alone, who is given us of the Father.

[25] The ſame Spirit which endueth the elect with the knowledge of the truth, and ſanctifieth them, giveth them therewithal the gift of perſeverance, to continue to the end.

[t] The Spirit which you have received of Chriſt, and which hath led you into all truth.

[u] You are not ignorant of thoſe things, and therefore I teach them not as things that were never heard of, but call them to your remembrance as things which you do know.

[x] He commendeth both the doctrine which they had embraced, and alſo highly praiſeth their faith, and the diligence of ſuch as taught them, yet ſo, that he taketh nothing from the honour due to the Holy Ghoſt.

A. D. 90.

teacheth you of all things, and it is true and is not lying, and as it taught you, ye ſhall abide in him.

28 [26] And now, little children, abide in him, that when he ſhall appear, we may be bold, and not be aſhamed before him at his coming.

29 [27] If ye know that he is righteous, know ye that he which doth righteouſly, is born of him.

CHAP. III.

1 Setting down the ineſtimable glory of this, that we are God's ſons, 7 he ſheweth that newneſs of life muſt be teſtified by good works, whereof charity is a manifeſt token 19 of faith, 22 and praying unto God.

BEHOLD, [1] [a] what love the Father hath given to us, that we ſhould be [b] called the ſons of God! [2] for this cauſe this world knoweth you not, becauſe it knoweth not him.

2 [3] Dearly beloved, now are we the ſons of God, but yet it is not made manifeſt what we ſhall be: and we know that when he ſhall be made manifeſt, we ſhall be [c] like him: for we ſhall ſee him [d] as he is.

3 [4] And every man that hath this hope in him, purgeth himſelf, even [e] as he is pure.

4 [5] Whoſoever [f] committeth ſin, tranſgreſſeth alſo the law: for [g] ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the law.

5 [6] And ye know that he was made manifeſt, that he might * take away our ſins, and in him is no ſin. * Iſ. 53. 6. 9, 11. 1 Pet. 2. 22, 24.

6 Whoſoever abideth in him, ſinneth not: whoſoever [h] ſinneth, hath not ſeen him, neither hath known him.

7 [7] Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doth righteouſneſs, is righteous, as he is righteous.

8 [8] He that * committeth ſin, is of the [i] devil: for the devil [k] ſinneth from the [l] beginning: for this purpoſe was made manifeſt that Son of God, that he might looſe the works of the devil. * John 8. 44.

9 Whoſoever is born of God, ſinneth not: for his [m] ſeed remaineth in him, neither can he ſin, becauſe he is born of God.

10 [9] In this are the children of God known, and the children of the devil: whoſoever doeth not righteouſneſs, is not of God, [10] neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 [11] For this is the meſſage that ye heard from the beginning, that * we ſhould love one another. * John 13. 34. and 15. 12.

12 [12] Not as * [n] Cain which was of that wicked one, and ſlew his brother: [13] and wherefore ſlew he him? becauſe his own works were evil, and his brother's good. * Gen. 4. 8.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, though this world hate you.

14 [14] We [o] know that we are tranſlated from death unto life, becauſe we love the brethren: * he that loveth not his brother, abideth in death. * Ch. 2. 10. Lev. 19. 17.

15 Who-

[26] The concluſion both of the whole exhortation, and alſo of the former treatiſe.

[27] A paſſing over to the treatiſe following, which tendeth to the ſame purpoſe, but yet is more ample, and handleth the ſame matter after another order, for before he taught us to go up from the effects to the cauſe, and in this that followeth, he goeth down from the cauſes to the effects: And this is the ſum of this argument, God is the fountain of all righteouſneſs, and therefore they that give themſelves to righteouſneſs, are known to be born of him, becauſe they reſemble God the Father.

[1] He beginneth to declare this agreement of the Father and the Son, at the higheſt cauſe, to wit, at that free love of God towards us, wherewith he ſo loveth us, that alſo he adopteth us to be his children.

[a] What a gift, of how great love?

[b] That we ſhould be the ſons of God, and ſo that all the world may perceive we are ſo.

[2] Before he declareth this adoption, he ſaith two things: the one, that this is ſo great a dignity, is not to be eſteemed according to the judgment of the fleſh, becauſe it is unknown to the world, for the world knoweth not God the Father himſelf.

[3] The other, this dignity is not fully made manifeſt to us ourſelves, much leſs to ſtrangers, but we are ſure of the accompliſhment of it, inſomuch that we ſhall be like unto the Son of God himſelf, and ſhall enjoy his ſight indeed, ſuch as he is now, but yet notwithſtanding this is deferred until his next coming.

[c] Like, but not equal.

[d] For now we ſee as in a glaſs, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

[4] Now he deſcribeth this adoption, (the glory whereof as yet conſiſteth in hope) by the effect, to wit, becauſe that whoſoever is made the Son of God, endeavoureth to reſemble the Father in purity.

[e] This word ſignifieth a likeneſs, but not an equality.

[5] The rule of this purity can from no whence elſe be taken but from the law of God, the tranſgreſſion whereof is that which is called ſin.

[f] Giveth not himſelf to pureneſs.

[g] A ſhort definition of ſin.

[6] An argument taken from the material cauſe of our ſalvation: Chriſt in himſelf is moſt pure, and he came to take away our ſins by ſanctifying us with the Holy Ghoſt. Therefore whoſoever is truly partaker of Chriſt, doth not give himſelf to ſin; and contrarywiſe he that giveth himſelf to ſin, knoweth not Chriſt.

[h] He is ſaid to ſin, that giveth not himſelf to pureneſs, and in him ſin reigneth: but ſin is ſaid to dwell in the faithful, and not to reign in them.

[7] Another argument of things coupled together: He that liveth juſtly, is juſt, and reſembleth Chriſt that is juſt, and by that is known to be the Son of God.

[8] An argument taken of contraries: the devil is the author of ſin, and therefore he is of the devil, or is ruled by the inſpiration of the devil, that ſerveth ſin: and if he be the devil's ſon, then is he not God's ſon: for the devil and God are ſo contrary the one to the other, that even the Son of God was ſent to deſtroy the works of the devil. Therefore on the contrary ſide, whoſoever reſiſteth ſin is the ſon of God, being born again of his Spirit as of new ſeed, inſomuch that of neceſſity he is now delivered from the ſlavery of ſin.

[i] Reſembleth the devil, as the child doth the father, and is governed by his ſpirit.

[k] He ſaith not, ſinned, but ſinneth, for he doth nothing elſe but ſin.

[l] From the very beginning of the world.

[m] The Holy Ghoſt is ſo called of the effect he worketh, becauſe by his virtue and mighty working, as it were by ſeed, we are made new men.

[9] The concluſion: By a wicked life they are known, which are governed by the ſpirit of the devil: and by a pure life, which are God's children.

[10] He beginneth to commend charity towards the brethren, as another mark of the ſons of God.

[11] The firſt reaſon taken of the authority of God, which giveth the commandment.

[12] An amplification taken of the contrary example of Cain, which ſlew his brother.

[n] He bringeth forth a very fit and very old example, wherein we may behold both the nature of the ſons of God, and the ſons of the devil, and what ſtate and condition remaineth for us in this world, and what ſhall be the end of both at length.

[13] A ſhort digreſſion: Let us not marvel that we are hated of the world for doing our duty, for ſuch was the condition of Abel, who was a juſt perſon: and who would not rather be like him than Cain?

[14] The ſecond reaſon: becauſe charity is a teſtimony that we are tranſlated from death to life: and therefore hatred towards the brethren is a teſtimony of death: and whoſoever nouriſheth it, doth as it were foſter death in his boſom.

[o] Love is a token that we are tranſlated from death to life, foraſmuch as by the effects the cauſe is known.

A. D. 90.

15 [15] Whoſoever hateth his brother, is a manſlayer: and ye know that no manſlayer hath eternal life abiding in him.

* John 15. 13. Eph. 5. 2.

16 [16] * Hereby have we perceived love, that he laid down his life for us: therefore we ought alſo to lay down our lives for the brethren.

*Luke 3. 11.

17 * [17] And whoſoever hath this [p] world's good, and ſeeth his brother have need, and [q] ſhutteth up his compaſſion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 [18] My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue only, but in deed and in truth.

19 [19] For thereby we know that we are of the truth, [20] and ſhall before him aſſure our hearts.

20 For [r] if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 [21] Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we boldneſs toward God.

* Matt. 21. 22. John 15. 7. and 16. 23. Ch. 5. 14.

22 * [22] And whatſoever we aſk, we receive of him, becauſe we keep his commandments, and do thoſe things which are pleaſing in his ſight.

*John 6. 23. and 17. 3.

23 * This is then his commandment, that we believe in the name of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, and love one another, as he gave commandment.

* John 13. 34. and 15 10.

24 * For he that keepeth his commandments, dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we know that he abideth in us, even by that [s] ſpirit which he hath given us.

CHAP. IV.

1 Having ſpoken ſomewhat touching the trying of ſpirits: 4 for ſome ſpeak after the world, 5 and ſome after God: 7 he returneth to charity, 11, 19 and by the example of God he exhorteth to brotherly love.

A. D. 90.

DEARLY [1] beloved, believe not every [a] ſpirit, but try the ſpirits whether they are of God: for many falſe prophets are gone out into this world.

2 [2] Hereby ſhall ye know the Spirit of God: [b] Every ſpirit which confeſſeth that [c] Jeſus Chriſt is come in the [d] fleſh, is of God.

3 And every ſpirit that confeſſeth not that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God: but this is the ſpirit of Antichriſt, of whom ye have heard, how that he ſhould come, and now already he is in this world.

4 [3] Little children, ye are of God, and have overcome them: for greater is he that is in you, than he that is in this world.

5 [4] They are of this world, therefore ſpeak they of this world, and this world heareth them.

6 [5] We are of God: * he that knoweth God, heareth us: he that is not of God, heareth us not. Hereby know we the [e] Spirit of truth, and the ſpirit of error. *John 8. 47.

7 [6] Beloved, let us love one another: [7] for love cometh of God, and every one that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not, knoweth not God: [8] for God is [f] love.

9 * Herein was that love of God made manifeſt amongſt us, becauſe God ſent that his only begotten *John 3. 16.

---

[15] A confirmation: Whoſoever is a murderer, is in eternal death: whoſo hateth his brother, is a murderer, therefore is in death. And thereupon followeth the contrary: He that loveth his brother, hath paſſed to life, for indeed we are born dead.

[16] Now he ſheweth how far chriſtian charity extendeth, even ſo far, that according to the example of Chriſt, every man forget himſelf, to provide for, and help his brethren.

[17] He reaſoneth by compariſon: for if we are bound even to give our life for our neighbours, how much more are we bound to help our brother's neceſſity with our goods and ſubſtance?

[p] Wherewith this life is ſuſtained.

[q] Openeth not his heart to him, nor helpeth him willingly and chearfully.

[18] Chriſtian charity ſtandeth not in words, but in deed, and proceedeth from a ſincere affection.

[19] He commendeth charity by a triple effect: for firſt of all, by it we know that we are indeed the ſons of God, as he ſhewed before.

[20] Therefore it cometh that we have a quiet conſcience: as on the contrary ſide, he that thinketh that he hath God for a judge, becauſe he is guilty to himſelf, either he is never, or elſe very rarely quiet, for God hath a far quicker ſight than we, and judgeth more ſeverely.

[r] If an evil conſcience convinceth us, much more ought the judgment of God to condemn us, who knoweth our hearts better than we ourſelves do.

[21] A third effect alſo riſeth out of the former, that in theſe miſeries we are ſure to be heard, becauſe we are the ſons of God: as we underſtand by the grace of ſanctification, which is proper to the elect,

[22] The concluſion. That faith in Chriſt, and love one towards another, are things joined together, and therefore the outward teſtimonies of ſanctification muſt, and do, anſwer that inward teſtimony of the Spirit given unto us.

[s] He meaneth the Spirit of ſanctification, whereby we are born anew, and live unto God.

[1] Taking occcaſion leſt, by the name of the Spirit, love and charity ſhould be ſeparated from the worſhip of God, which chiefly dependeth on his true knowledge, he returneth to that which he ſpake of in the ſecond chapter, touching the taking heed of Antichriſts. And he will have us here to take heed of two things, the one is, that, ſeeing there be many falſe prophets, we do not lightly give credit to every man: the other is, that becauſe many men teach falſe things, we ſhould not therefore believe any. We muſt then obſerve a mean, that we may be able to diſcern the Spirit of God, which is altogether to be followed, from impure ſpirits, which are to be eſchewed.

[a] This is ſpoken by the figure Metonymy, and it is, as if he had ſaid, Believe not every one that ſaith, that he hath the gift of the Holy Ghoſt to do the office of a prophet.

[2] He giveth a certain and perpetual rule to know the doctrine of Antichriſt by, to wit, if either the divine or human nature of Chriſt, or the true uniting of them together, be denied: or if the leaſt jot that may be, be derogated from his office, who is our only King, Prophet, and everlaſting high Prieſt.

[b] He ſpeaketh ſimply of the doctrine, and not of the perſon.

[c] The true Meſſias.

[d] Is true Man.

[3] He comforteth the elect with a moſt ſure hope of victory: but yet ſo, that he teacheth them that they fight not with their own virtue, but with the virtue and power of God.

[4] He bringeth a reaſon why the world receiveth theſe teachers more willingly than the true: to wit, becauſe they breathe out nothing but that which is worldly: which is another note alſo to know the doctrine of Antichriſt by.

[5] He teſtifieth unto them, that his doctrine, and the doctrine of his fellows, is the aſſured word of God, which of neceſſity we have boldly to ſet againſt all the mouths of the whole world, and thereby diſcern the truth from falſhood.

[e] The true prophets, againſt whom are ſet falſe prophets, that is, ſuch as err themſelves, and lead others into error.

[6] He returneth to the commending of brotherly love and charity.

[7] The firſt reaſon: Becauſe it is a very divine thing, and therefore very meet for the ſons of God: ſo that whoſoever is void of it, cannot be ſaid to know God aright.

[8] A confirmation: for it is the true nature of God to love men, whereof we have a moſt manifeſt proof above all others, in that, that of his only free and infinite good will towards us his enemies, he delivered unto death, not a common man, but that his own Son, yea his only begotten Son, to the end that we, being reconciled through his blood, might be made partakers of his everlaſting glory.

[f] In that he calleth God Love, he ſaith more than if he had ſaid, that he loveth us infinitely.

A. D. 90. begotten Son into this world, that we might live through him.

10 Herein is that love: not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and ſent his Son to be a reconciliation for our ſins.

11 [9] Beloved, if God ſo loved us, we ought alſo to love one another.

12 * [10] No man hath ſeen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is [g] perfect in us.

• John 1. 18. 1 Tim. 6. 16.

13 Hereby know we, that we dwell in him, and he in us: becauſe he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 [11] And we have ſeen, and do teſtify, that the Father ſent that Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 Whoſoever [h] confeſſeth that Jeſus is the Son of God, in him dwelleth God, and he in God.

16 And we have known, and believed the love that God hath in us. [12] God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 [13] Herein is that love perfect in us, that we ſhould have boldneſs in the day of judgment: for [i] as he is, even ſo are we in this world.

18 There is no [k] fear in love, but perfect love caſteth out fear: for fear hath painfulneſs: and he that feareth, is not perfect in love.

19 [14] We love him, becauſe he loved us firſt.

20 [15] If any man ſay, I love God, and hate his brother, he is a lyar: [16] for how can he that loveth not his brother whom he hath ſeen, love God whom he hath not ſeen?

A. D. 90.

21 * [17] And this commandment have we of him, that he that loveth God, ſhould love his brother alſo.

• John 13. 34. and 15. 12.

CHAP. V.

1 He ſheweth that brotherly love and faith, are things inſeparable. 10 And that there is no faith towards God, but by believing in Chriſt. 14 Hence proceedeth calling upon God with aſſurance, 16 and alſo that our prayers be available for our brethren.

WHoſoever [1] believeth that Jeſus is that [a] Chriſt, is born of God: and every one that loveth him which begat, loveth [b] him alſo which is begotten of him:

2 [2] In this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his [c] commandments.

3 [3] For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: [4] and * his commandments are not [d] burdenous.

• Matt. 11. 30.

4 [5] For all that is born of God, overcometh this world: [6] and this is the victory that [e] hath overcome this world, even our [f] faith.

5 * [7] Who is it that overcometh this world, but he which believeth that Jeſus is that Son of God?

• 1 Cor. 15. 57.

6 [8] This is that Jeſus Chriſt that came by water

---

[9] Another reaſon by compariſon: if God ſo loved us, ſhall not we his children love one another?

[10] A third reaſon: Becauſe God is inviſible, therefore by this effect of his Spirit, to wit, by charity, he is underſtood, yea, and to be not out of us, but joined with us, and in us, in whom he is ſo effectually working.

[g] Is ſurely in us in deed and in truth.

[11] He underlayeth this charity with another foundation, to wit, faith in Jeſus, which joined us indeed with him, even as charity witneſſeth that we are joined with him. Furthermore, he teſtifieth of Chriſt, as who had ſeen him with his eyes.

[h] With ſuch a confeſſion as cometh from true faith, and is accompanied with love, ſo that there be an agreement of all things.

[12] A fourth reaſon: God is the fountain and well-ſpring of charity; yea, charity itſelf: therefore whoſoever abideth in it, hath God with him.

[13] Again (as a little before) he commendeth love: for that, ſeeing that by our agreement with God in this thing, we have a certain teſtimony of our adoption, it cometh thereby to paſs, that without fear we look for that latter day of judgment, ſo that trembling, and that torment of conſcience, is caſt out by this love.

[i] This ſignifieth a likeneſs, not an equality.

[k] If we underſtand by love, that we are in God, and God in us; that we are ſons, and that we know God, and that everlaſting life is in us: he concludeth aright, that we may well gather peace and quietneſs thereby.

[14] Leſt any man ſhould think, that that peace of conſcience proceedeth from our love, as from the cauſe, he goeth back to the fountain, to wit, to the free love wherewith God loveth us, although we deſerved and do deſerve his wrath. And hereof ſpringeth another double charity, which both are tokens and witneſſes of that firſt, to wit, that therewithal we love God, who loved us firſt, and then for his ſake our neighbours alſo.

[15] As he ſhewed that the love of our neighbour cannot be ſeparate from the love wherewith God loveth us, becauſe this laſt engendereth the other: ſo he denieth that the other kind of love wherewith we love God can be ſeparate from the love of our neighbour: whereof it followeth, that they lye impudently which ſay they worſhip God, and yet regard not their neighbours.

[16] The firſt reaſon taken of compariſon, why we cannot hate our neighbour, and love God, to wit, becauſe that he that cannot love his brother, whom he ſeeth, how can he love God, whom he ſeeth not?

[17] A ſecond reaſon, why God cannot be hated, and our neighbour loved, becauſe the ſelf-ſame law-maker commandeth both to love him and our neighbour.

[1] He goeth on forward in the ſame argument, ſhewing how both thoſe loves come into us, from that love wherewith God loveth us, to wit, by Jeſus, our Mediator, laid hold on by faith, in whom we are made the children of God, and do love the Father, of whom we are to begotten, and alſo our brethren, which are begotten with us.

[a] Is the true Meſſias.

[b] By one he meaneth all the faithful.

[2] The love of our neighbour doth ſo hang upon the love wherewith we love God, that this laſt muſt needs go before the firſt: whereof it followeth, that that is not to be called love, when men agree together to do evil, neither that, when as in loving our neighbours, we reſpect not God's commandment.

[c] There is no love where there is no true doctrine.

[3] The reaſon: for to love God, is to keep his commandments, which being ſo, and ſeeing that both the loves are commanded of one and the ſelf-ſame Law-maker, (as he taught before) it followeth alſo, that we do not love our neighbours, when we break God's commandments.

[4] Becauſe experience teacheth us, that there is no ability in our fleſh, neither yet will to perform God's commandments; therefore leſt the apoſtle ſhould ſeem, by ſo often putting them in mind of the commandments of God, to require things that are impoſſible, he pronounceth that the commandments of God are not in ſuch ſort grievous or burdenſome, that we can be oppreſſed with the burden of them.

[d] To them that be regenerate, that is to ſay, born anew, which are led by the Spirit of God, and are through grace delivered from the curſe of the law.

[5] A reaſon: Becauſe by regeneration we have gotten ſtrength to overcome the world, that is to ſay, whatſoever ſtriveth againſt the commandments of God.

[6] He declareth what that ſtrength is, to wit, faith.

[e] He uſeth the time that is paſt, to give us to underſtand, that although we be in the battle, yet undoubtedly we ſhall be conquerors, and are moſt certain of the victory.

[f] Which is the inſtrumental cauſe, and as a mean and hand whereby we lay hold on him, who indeed doth perform this, that is, hath and doth overcome the world, even Chriſt Jeſus.

[7] Moreover, he declareth two things, the one, what true faith is, to wit, that which reſteth upon Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God alone: whereupon followeth the other, to wit, that this ſtrength is not proper to faith, but by faith, as an inſtrument, is drawn from Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God.

[8] He proveth the excellency of Chriſt, in whom only all things are given us, by ſix witneſſes, three heavenly, and three earthly, which wholly and fully agree together. The heavenly witneſſes are, the Father, who ſent the Son, water and blood: [9] not by water only, but by water and blood: and it is that [g] Spirit that beareth witneſs: for that Spirit is truth.

A. D. 90.

7 For there are three which bear record in heaven, the Father, the [h] Word, and the Holy Ghoſt: and theſe three are [i] one.

8 And there are three which bear record in the earth, the ſpirit, and the water, and the blood: and theſe three agree in one.

9 [10] If we receive the witneſs of men, the witneſs of God is greater; for [k] this is the witneſs of God, which he teſtified of his Son.

* John 3. 36.

10 * [11] He that believeth in that Son of God, hath the witneſs in himſelf: he that believeth not God, hath made him a lyar, becauſe he believed not the record that God witneſſed of that his Son.

11 [12] And this is that record, to wit, that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in that his Son.

12 He that hath that Son, hath that life: and he that hath not that Son of God, hath not that life.

13 [13] Theſe things have I written unto you that believe in the name of that Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe in the name of that Son of God.

A. D. 90. * Ch. 3. 22.

14 [14] And this is that aſſurance that we have in him, * that if we aſk any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

15 And if we know that he heareth us, whatſoever we aſk, we know that we have the petitions that we have deſired of him.

16 [15] If any man ſee his brother ſin a ſin that is not unto death, let him [l] aſk, and he ſhall give him life for them that ſin not unto death.
* There is a ſin unto death: I ſay not that thou ſhouldeſt pray for it.

* Matt. 12. 31. Mark 3. 29.

17 [16] All unrighteouſneſs is ſin, but there is a ſin not unto death.

18 [17] We know that whoſoever is born of God, ſinneth not: but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himſelf, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 [18] We know that we are of God, and this whole world lieth in wickedneſs.

20 But we know that that Son of God is * come, and hath given us a mind to know him which is true: and we are in him that is true, that is, in that his Son Jeſus Chriſt: this ſame is that very [m] God and that eternal life.

* Luke 24. 45.

21 [19] Little children, keep yourſelves from idols. Amen.

the Word itſelf, which became fleſh, and the Holy Ghoſt The earthly witneſſes are water, (that is, our ſanctification) blood, (that is, our juſtification) the Spirit, (that is, acknowledging of God the Father in Chriſt by faith through the teſtimony of the Holy Ghoſt.)

[9] He warneth us not to ſeparate water from blood (that is, ſanctification from juſtification, or righteouſneſs begun, from righteouſneſs imputed) for we ſtand not upon ſanctification, but ſo far forth as it is a witneſs of Chriſt's righteouſneſs imputed unto us: and although this imputation of Chriſt's righteouſneſs be never ſeparated from ſanctification, yet is it the only matter of our ſalvation.

[g] Our ſpirit, which is the third witneſs, teſtifieth, that the Holy Ghoſt is truth, that is to ſay, that that is true which he telleth us, to wit, that we are the ſons of God.

[h] Look John 8. 14.

[i] Agree in one.

[10] He ſheweth by an argument of compariſon, of what great weight the heavenly teſtimony is that the Father hath given of the Son, unto whom agreeth both the Son himſelf and the Holy Ghoſt.

[k] I conclude thus aright: for that teſtimony which I ſaid is given in heaven, cometh from God, who ſetteth forth his Son.

[11] He proveth the ſureneſs of the earthly witneſſes by every man's conſcience, having that teſtimony in itſelf, which conſcience, he ſaith, cannot be deceived, becauſe it conſenteth to the heavenly teſtimony which the Father giveth of the Son: for otherwiſe the Father muſt needs be a lyar, if the conſcience which accordeth and aſſenteth to the Father, ſhould lye.

[12] Now at length he ſheweth what this teſtimony is, that is confirmed with ſo many witneſſes: to wit, that life, or everlaſting felicity, is the mere and only gift of God, which is in the Son, and proceedeth from him unto us, which by faith are joined with him, ſo that without him, life is nowhere to be found.

[13] The concluſion of the epiſtle, wherein he ſheweth firſt of all, that even they which already believe, do ſtand in need of this doctrine, to the end that they may grow more and more in faith: that is to ſay, to the end that they may be daily more and more certified of their ſalvation in Chriſt through faith.

[14] Becauſe we do not yet in effect obtain that which we hope for, the apoſtle joineth invocation or prayer with faith, which he will have to proceed from faith, and moreover to be conceived in ſuch ſort, that nothing be aſked but that which is agreeable to the will of God: and ſuch prayers cannot be vain.

[15] We are to make prayers not only for ourſelves, but alſo for our brethren which do ſin, that their ſins be not unto them, to death: and yet he excepteth that ſin which is never forgiven, or the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, that is to ſay, an univerſal and wilful falling away from the known truth of the goſpel.

[l] This is as much as if he ſaid, Let him deſire the Lord to forgive him, and he will forgive him, being ſo deſired.

[16] The taking away of an objection: Indeed all iniquity is comprehended under the name of ſin: but yet we muſt not deſpair therefore, becauſe every ſin is not deadly, and without hope of remedy.

[17] A reaſon why not all, nay rather why no ſin is mortal to ſome: to wit, becauſe they be born of God, that is to ſay, made the ſons of God in Chriſt, and being endued with his Spirit, they do not ſerve ſin, neither are deadly wounded of Satan.

[18] Every man muſt particularly apply to himſelf the general promiſes, that we may certainly perſuade ourſelves, that whereas all the world is by nature loſt, we are freely made the ſons of God, by the ſending of Jeſus Chriſt his ſon unto us, of whom we are lightened with the knowledge of the true God and everlaſting life.

[m] The divinity of Chriſt is moſt plainly proved by this place.

[19] He expreſſeth a plain precept of taking heed of idols: which he ſetteth againſt the only true God, that with this ſeal as it were he might ſeal up all the former doctrine.

The Second Epiſtle of JOHN.

A. D. 90.

1 This epiſtle is written to a woman of great renown, 4 who brought up her children in the fear of God. 6 He exhorteth her to continue in Chriſtian charity, 7 that ſhe accompany not with antichriſts, 10 but avoid them.

THE elder to the [a] elect [b] lady, and her children, [1] whom I love in the truth, and not I only, but alſo all that have known the truth,

2 For the truth's ſake which dwelleth in us, and ſhall be with us for ever:

3 Grace be with you, mercy and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt the Son of the Father, with [c] truth and love.

4 [2] I rejoiced greatly, that I found of thy children walking in [d] truth, as we have received a commandment of the Father.

5 And now beſeech I thee, lady, (not as writing a new commandment unto thee, but that ſame which we had from the beginning) that we * love one another.

* John 15. 12.

6 And this is that love, that we ſhould walk after his commandments. This commandment is, that as ye have heard from the beginning, ye ſhould walk in it.

7 [3] For many deceivers are entered into this world, which confeſs not that Jeſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh. He that is ſuch one, is a deceiver and an Antichriſt.

8 [4] [e] Look to yourſelves, that we loſe not the things which we have done, but that we may receive a full reward.

9 Whoſoever tranſgreſſeth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Chriſt, hath not God. He that continueth in the doctrine of Chriſt, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 [5] If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, * receive him not to houſe, neither bid him God ſpeed:

* Rom. 16. 17.

11 For he that biddeth him God ſpeed, is partaker of his evil deeds. Although I had many things to write unto you, yet I would not write with paper and ink: but I truſt to come unto you, and ſpeak mouth to mouth, that our joy may be full.

12 The ſons of thine elect ſiſter greet thee. Amen.

---

[a] This is no proper name, but to be taken as the word ſounceth, that is to ſay, to the worthy and noble lady.

[b] Excellent and honourable dame.

[1] The bond of Chriſtian conjunction, or linking together, is the true and conſtant profeſſion of the truth.

[c] With true knowledge, which hath always love joined with it, and following it.

[2] This true profeſſion conſiſteth both in love one towards another, which the Lord hath commanded, and alſo eſpecially in wholeſome and ſound doctrine, which alſo is delivered unto us: for the commandment of God is a ſound and ſure foundation, both of the rule of manners, and of doctrine, and theſe cannot be ſeparated the one from the other.

[d] According as the truth directeth them.

[3] Antichriſts, fighting againſt the perſon and office of Chriſt, were already crept into the church, in the time of the apoſtles.

[4] He that maketh ſhipwreck of doctrine, loſeth all.

[e] Beware, and take good heed.

[5] We ought to have nothing to do with them that defend perverſe doctrine.

The Third Epiſtle of JOHN.

A. D. 90.

1 He commendeth Gaius for hoſpitality, 9 and reprehendeth Diotrephes for vain glory. 10 He exhorteth Gaius to continue in well doing, 12 and in the end commendeth Demetrius.

THE [1] elder unto the beloved Gaius, whom I love in the truth.

2 Beloved, I wiſh chiefly that thou proſperedſt and faredſt well, as thy ſoul proſpereth.

3 For I rejoiced greatly when the brethren came, and teſtified of the truth that is in thee, how thou walkeſt in the truth.

4 I have no greater joy than [a] theſe, that is, to hear that my ſons walk in verity.

5 Beloved, thou doeſt [b] faithfully, whatſoever thou doeſt to the brethren, and to ſtrangers,

6 Which bare witneſs of thy love before the churches. Whom if thou [c] bringeſt on their journey as it beſeemeth, according to God, thou ſhalt do well,

7 Becauſe that for his name's ſake they went forth, and took nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to receive ſuch, that we might be [d] helpers to the truth.

9 [2] I wrote unto the church: but Diotrephes, which loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, receiveth us not:

10 Where-

[1] An example of a Chriſtian gratulation.

[a] Than theſe joys.

[b] As becometh a believer, and a Chriſtian.

[c] He commendeth to Gaius, either thoſe ſelf-ſame men whom he had entertained before, returning now again to him, about the affairs of the church, or elſe ſome other which had like buſineſs.

[d] That we ourſelves may help ſomewhat to the preaching of the truth.

[2] Ambition and covetouſneſs, two peſtilent plagues (eſpecially in them which have any eccleſiaſtical function) are condemned in Diotrephes' perſon.

A. D. 90.

10 Wherefore if I come, I will call to your remembrance the deeds which he doth, pratling againſt us with malicious words, and not therewith content, neither he himſelf receiveth the brethren, but forbiddeth them that would, and thruſteth them out of the church.

11 Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good: he that doth well, is of God: but he that doth evil, hath not [e] ſeen God.

12 Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the truth itſelf: yea, and we ourſelves bear record, and ye know that our record is true.

13 I have many things to write: but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee:

14 For I truſt I ſhall ſhortly ſee thee, and we ſhall ſpeak mouth to mouth. Peace be with thee. The friends ſalute thee. Greet the friends by name.

The General Epiſtle of JUDE.

A. D. 66.

3 He warneth the godly to take heed of ſuch men, 4 that make the grace of God a cloak for their wantonneſs: 5 and that they ſhall not eſcape unpuniſhed, for the contempt of that grace, 6, 7 he proveth by three examples, 14 and alledgeth the prophecy of Enoch. 20 Finally, he ſheweth the godly mean to overthrow all the ſnares of thoſe deceivers.

JUDE a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, and [a] brother of James, to them which are called and ſanctified [b] of God the Father, and [c] reſerved to Jeſus Chriſt:

2 Mercy unto you, and peace and love be multiplied.

3 [1] Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the [d] common ſalvation, it was needful for me to write unto you to exhort you, that ye ſhould [e] earneſtly contend for the maintenance of the faith which was [f] once given unto the ſaints.

4 [2] For there are certain men crept in, which were before of old ordained to this condemnation: [3] ungodly men they are, which turn the grace of God into wantonneſs, and * deny God the only Lord, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

* 2 Pet. 2. 1.

5 [4] I will therefore put you in remembrance, foraſmuch as ye once knew this, how that the Lord, after that he had delivered the people out of Egypt, * deſtroyed them afterward which believed not.

A. D. 66.

* Num. 14. 37.

6 [5] The * angels alſo which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their own habitation, he hath reſerved in everlaſting chains under darkneſs unto the judgment of the great day.

7 As * Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, which, in like manner as they did, [g] committed fornication, and followed [h] ſtrange fleſh, are ſet forth for an enſample, and ſuffer the vengeance of eternal fire.

* Gen. 19. 24.

8 Likewiſe notwithſtanding, theſe [i] ſleepers alſo defile the fleſh, [6] and deſpiſe [k] government, and ſpeak evil of them that are in authority.

9 [7] Yet Michael the archangel, when he ſtrove againſt the devil, and diſputed about the body of Moſes, durſt not blame him with curſed ſpeaking, but ſaid, The Lord rebuke thee.

10 [8] But theſe ſpeak evil of thoſe things which they know not: and whatſoever things they know naturally as beaſts, which are without reaſon, in thoſe things they corrupt themſelves.

11 [9] Wo be unto them: for they have followed

---

[a] This is put to make a difference between him and Judas Iſcariot.

[b] By God the Father.

[c] Set apart by the everlaſting counſel of God, to be delivered to Chriſt to be kept.

[1] The end and mark whereat he ſhooteth in this epiſtle, is, that he confirmeth the godly againſt certain wicked men, both in wholeſome doctrine and good manners.

[d] Of thoſe things that pertain to the ſalvation of all of us.

[e] That ye ſhould defend the faith by all the might you can, both by true doctrine and good example of life.

[f] Which was once ſo given, that it may never be changed.

[2] It is by God's providence, and not by chance, that many wicked men creep into the church.

[3] He condemneth this firſt in them, that they take a pretence or occaſion to wax wanton, by the grace of God: which cannot be, but the chief empire of Chriſt muſt be abrogated, in that ſuch men give up themſelves to Satan, as at this day the ſect of Anabaptiſts doth, which they call Libertines.

[4] He ſetteth forth the horrible puniſhment of them which have abuſed the grace of God to follow their own luſts.

[5] The fall of the angels was moſt ſeverely puniſhed, how much more then will the Lord puniſh wicked and faithleſs men?

[g] Following the ſteps of Sodom and Gomorrah.

[h] Thus he covertly ſetteth forth their horrible and monſtrous luſts.

[i] Which are ſo blockiſh and void of reaſon, as if all their ſenſes and wits were in a moſt dead ſleep.

[6] Another moſt pernicious doctrine of theirs, in that they take away the authority of magiſtrates, and ſpeak evil of them, as at this day the Anabaptiſts do.

[k] It is a greater matter to deſpiſe government than the governors, that is to ſay, the matter itſelf, than the perſons.

[7] An argument of compariſon: Michael, one of the chiefeſt angels, was content to deliver Satan, although a moſt curſed enemy, to the judgment of God to be puniſhed: and theſe perverſe men are not aſhamed to ſpeak evil of the powers which are ordained of God.

[8] The concluſion: Theſe men are in a double fault, to wit, both for their raſh folly in condemning ſome, and for their impudent and ſhameleſs contempt of that knowledge, which when they had gotten, yet notwithſtanding they lived as brute beaſts, ſerving their bellies.

[9] He foretelleth their deſtruction, becauſe they reſemble or ſhew forth Cain's ſhameleſs malice, Balaam's filthy covetouſneſs, and, to be ſhort, Korah's ſeditious and ambitious head.

18 How that they told you that there ſhould be mockers * in the laſt time, which ſhould walk after their own ungodly luſts.

21 And keep yourſelves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, unto eternal life.

22 [13] And have compaſſion of ſome, in putting difference:

23 And other ſave with [p] fear, pulling them out of the fire, and hate even that [q] garment which is ſpotted by the fleſh.

[10] He rebuketh moſt ſharply, with many other notes and marks, both their diſhoneſty or filthineſs, and their ſaucineſs, but eſpecially their vain bravery of words, and moſt vain pride, joining therewithal a moſt grave and heavy threatening out of a moſt ancient prophecy of Enoch touching the judgment to come.

[l] The feaſts of charity were certain banquets, which the brethren, which were members of thechurch, kept all together, as Tertullian ſetteth them forth in his Apology, chap. 39.

[12] It is the property of Antichriſts to ſeparate themſelves from the godly, becauſe they are not governed by the Spirit of God: and contrarywiſe, it is the property of Chriſtians to edify one another through godly prayers, both in faith, and alſo in love, until the mercy of Chriſt appear to their full ſalvation.

[13] Amongſt them which wander and go aſtray, the godly have to uſe this choice, that they handle ſome of them gently, and that other ſome, being even in the very flame, they endeavour to ſave with ſevere and ſharp inſtruction of the preſent danger: yet ſo, that they do in ſuch ſort abhor the wicked and diſhoneſt, that they eſchew even the leaſt contagion that may be.

CHAP. I.

1 He declareth what kind of doctrine is here handled, 8 even his, that is the beginning and ending: 12 Then the myſtery of the ſeven candleſticks and ſtars 20 is expounded.

---

[1] This chapter hath two principal parts; the title or inſcription, which ſtandeth inſtead of an exordium: and a narration going before the whole prophecy of this book. The inſcription is double, general and particular. The general containeth the kind of prophecy, the author, end, matter, inſtruments, and manner of communicating the ſame, in the firſt verſe: the moſt religious faithfulneſs of the apoſtle as a public witneſs, verſe 2. And the uſe of communicating the ſame, taken from the promiſe of God, and from the circumſtance of the time, ver. 3.

[a] An opening of a hid and ſecret thing.

[b] Which the Son opened to us out of his Father's boſom by angels.

[2] This is the particular or ſingular inſcription, wherein ſalvation is written unto certain churches by name, which repreſent the church catholic: and the certainty and truth of the ſame is declared, from the author thereof, unto the eighth verſe.

[3] That is, from God the Father, eternal, immortal, immutable: whoſe unchangeableneſs Saint John declareth by a form of ſpeech which is undeclined. For there is no incongruity in this place, where, of neceſſity, the words muſt be attempted unto the myſteries, and not the myſteries corrupted or impaired by the words.

[c] By theſe three times, is, was, and ſhall be, is ſignified this word Jehovah, which is the proper name of God.

[4] That is, from the Holy Ghoſt, which proceedeth from the Father and the Son. This Spirit is one in perſon according to his ſubſtance: but in communication of his virtue, and in demonſtration of his divine works in thoſe ſeven churches, doth ſo perfectly manifeſt himſelf, as if there were ſo many ſpirits, every one perfectly working in his own church. Wherefore after, chapter 5, 6. they are called the ſeven horns, and ſeven eyes of the Lamb, as much as to ſay, as his moſt abſolute power and wiſdom: and chapter 3. 1. Chriſt is ſaid to have thoſe ſeven ſpirits of God: and chapter 4. 5. it is ſaid, that ſeven lamps do burn before his throne, which alſo are thoſe ſeven Spirits of God. That this place ought to be ſo underſtood, it is thus proved. For firſt, grace and peace is aſked by prayer of this Spirit, which is a divine work, and an action incommunicable in reſpect of the moſt high Deity. Secondly, he is placed between the Father and the Son, as ſet in the ſame degree of dignity and operation with them; beſides, he is before the throne, as of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father and the Son: as the ſeven eyes and the ſeven horns of the Lamb. Moreover, theſe Spirits are never ſaid to adore God, as all other things are. Finally, that it is the power whereby the Lamb openeth the book, and looſed the ſeven ſeals thereof, when none could be found amongſt all creatures by whom the book might be opened, chap. 5. Of theſe things long ago Maſter John Luide of Oxford wrote learnedly unto me. Now the Holy Ghoſt is ſet in order of words before Chriſt, becauſe there was in that which followeth a long proceſs of ſpeech to be uſed concerning Chriſt.

[d] Theſe are the ſeven ſpirits, which are afterwards, chap. 5. ver. 6. called the horns and eyes of the Lamb, and are now made as a guard waiting upon God.

[5] A moſt ample and grave commendation of Chriſt, firſt, from his offices, the prieſthood and kingdom: ſecondly, from his benefits, as his love towards us, and waſhing us with his blood, in this verſe, and communication of his kingdom and prieſthood with us: thirdly, from his eternal glory and power, which is always to be celebrated of us, verſe 6. Finally, from the accompliſhment of all things once to be effected by him, at his ſecond coming, what time he ſhall openly deſtroy the wicked, and ſhall comfort the godly in the truth, verſe 7.

[e] All men.

[6] A confirmation of the ſalutation aforegoing, taken from the words of God himſelf: in which he avoucheth his operation in every ſingular creature, the immutable eternity that is in himſelf, and his omnipotency in all things; and concludeth in the Unity of his own eſſence, that Trinity of perſon which was before ſpoken of.

[f] I am he before whom there is nothing; yea, by whom every thing that is made, was made, and ſhall remain, tho' all they ſhould periſh.

[7] The narration, opening the way to the declaring of the authority and calling of Saint John the Evangeliſt in this ſingular Revelation, and to procure faith and credit unto this prophecy. This is the ſecond part of this chapter, conſiſting of a propoſition, and an expoſition. The propoſition ſheweth; firſt, who was called unto this Revelation, in what place, and how occupied, verſe 9. Then at what time, and by what means, namely by the Spirit, and the word, and that, on the Lord's day, which day, ever ſince the reſurrection of Chriſt, was conſecrated for Chriſtians unto the religion of the ſabbath: that is to ſay, to be a day of reſt, verſe 10. Thirdly, who is the author that calleth him, and what is the ſum of his calling.

A. D. 96.

of Jeſus Chriſt, was in the Iſle [g] called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the witneſſing of Jeſus Chriſt:

10 And I was raviſhed in [h] ſpirit on the [i] Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as it had been a trumpet,

11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, that firſt and that laſt: and that which thou ſeeſt, write in a book, and ſend it unto the ſeven churches which are in Aſia, unto Epheſus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamus, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

12 [8] Then I turned back to [k] ſee the voice that ſpake unto me: [9] and when I was turned, I ſaw ſeven golden candleſticks,

13 And in the midſt of the ſeven candleſticks, one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the feet, and girded about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and hairs were white as white wool, and as ſnow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire,

15 And his feet like fine braſs burning as in a furnace: and his voice as the ſound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand ſeven ſtars: and out of his mouth went a ſharp two-edged ſword: and his face ſhone as the ſun ſhineth in his ſtrength.

17 [10] And when I ſaw him, I fell at his feet as dead: [11] then he laid his right hand upon me, ſaying unto me, Fear not: [12] I am the * firſt and the laſt,

* Iſa. 41. 4.

18 And am alive, but I was dead: and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen: and I have the keys of hell and of death.

19 [13] Write the things which thou haſt ſeen, and the things which are, and the things which ſhall come hereafter.

20 [14] The myſtery of the ſeven ſtars which thou ſaweſt in my right hand, and the ſeven golden candleſticks, is this, The ſeven ſtars are the [1] angels of the ſeven churches: and the ſeven candleſticks which thou ſaweſt, are the ſeven churches.

CHAP. II.

1 John is commanded to write thoſe things which the Lord knew neceſſary, to the churches of Epheſus, 8 of the Smyrnians, 12 of Pergamus, 18 and of Thyatira, 25 that they keep thoſe things which they received of the apoſtles.

UNTO [1] the angel of the church of Epheſus write, [2] Theſe things ſaith he that holdeth the ſeven ſtars in his right hand, and walketh in the midſt of the ſeven golden candleſticks,

2 [3] I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canſt not bear with them which are evil, and haſt examined them which ſay they are apoſtles, and are not, and haſt found them lyars.

3 And thou waſt burdened, and haſt patience, and for my name's ſake haſt laboured, and haſt not fainted.

4 Nevertheleſs, I have ſomewhat [a] againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left thy firſt love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the firſt works: or elſe I will come againſt thee ſhortly, and will remove thy candleſtick out of his place, except thou amend.

6 But this thou haſt, that thou hateſt the works of the Nicolaitans, which I alſo hate.

7 [4] Let him that hath an ear, hear what the [g] Patmos is one of the iſles of Sporas, whither John was baniſhed, as ſome write.

[h] This is that holy raviſhment expreſſed, wherewith the prophets were raviſhed, and being as it were carried out of the world, were converſant with God: and ſo Ezekiel ſaith often, that he was carried from place to place of the Lord's Spirit, and that the Spirit of the Lord fell upon him.

[i] He calleth it the Lord's day, which Paul calleth the firſt day of the week, 1 Cor. 16. 2.

[8] The expoſition declaring the third and laſt point of the propoſition (for the other points are evident of themſelves) wherein is ſpoken, firſt, of the author of his calling, unto the ſeventeenth verſe; ſecondly, of the calling itſelf, unto the end of the chapter. And firſt of all the occaſion is noted in this verſe, in that St. John turned himſelf towards the viſion: after is ſet down the deſcription of the author, in the 13, 14, 15 and 16th verſes following.

[k] To ſee him whoſe voice I had heard.

[9] The deſcription of the author, which is Chriſt: by the candleſticks that ſtand about him, that is, the churches that ſtand before him, and depend upon his direction, in this verſe: by his properties, that he is one furniſhed with wiſdom and dexterity to the atchieving of great things, verſe 13. with ancient gravity and moſt excellent ſight of the eye, ver. 14. with ſtrength invincible, and with a mighty word, ver. 15. By his operations, that he ruleth the miniſtry of his ſervants in the church, giveth effect thereunto by the ſword of his word, and enlightening all things by his countenance, doth moſt mightily provide for every one by his divine providence, ver. 16.

[10] A religious fear that goeth before the calling of the ſaints, and their full confirmation to take upon them the vocation of God.

[11] A divine confirmation of this calling, partly by ſigns, and partly by word of power.

[12] A moſt elegant deſcription of this calling contained in three things, which are neceſſary unto a juſt vocation: Firſt, the authority of him that calleth, for that he is the beginning and end of all things, in this verſe; for that he is eternal and omnipotent, ver. 18. Secondly, the ſum of this prophetical calling and revelation, ver. 19. Laſtly, a declaration of thoſe perſons unto whom this prophecy is, by the commandment of God, directed in the deſcription thereof, ver. 20.

[13] The ſum of this prophecy, that the apoſtle muſt write whatſoever he ſhould ſee, adding nothing, nor taking away any thing, ver. 2. Hereof there are two parts: one is a narration of thoſe things which are, that is, which then were at that time contained in the ſecond and third chapter: the other part is of thoſe things which were to come, contained in the reſt of this book.

[14] That is, the thing which was myſtical, ſignified by the particulars of the viſion before going.

[1] By angels he meaneth the miniſters of the church.

[2] The former part of this book is compriſed in a narration of thoſe things which then were, as St. John taught us, chap. 1. 19. it belongeth wholly unto inſtruction, and in theſe two next chapters, containeth ſeven places, according to the number and condition of thoſe churches which were named before, chap. 1. 11. figured verſe 12, and diſtributed moſt aptly into their paſtors and flocks, verſe 20. which verſe of that chapter is as it were a paſſage unto the firſt part. Every one of theſe ſeven places hath three principal numbers: an exordium taken from the perſon of the author: a propoſition, in which is praiſe and commendation of that which is good, reprehenſion of that which is evil: and inſtruction, containing either an exhortation alone, or withal a diſſuaſion oppoſite unto it, and a concluſion ſtirring up unto attention, by divine promiſes. And this firſt place is unto the paſtors of the church of Epheſus.

[2] The exordium, wherein are contained the ſpecial praiſes of Chriſt Jeſus the author of this prophecy, out of the 6th and 13th verſes of the firſt chapter.

[3] The propoſition, firſt commending the paſtor of this church, verſe 2, 3; then reproving him, verſe 4; after informing him, and withal threatening that he will tranſlate the church to another place, verſe 5. This commination or threat, Chriſt mitigateth by a kind of correction, calling to mind the particular virtue and piety of that church, which God never leaveth without recompenſe, verſe 6. Concerning the Nicolaitans, ſee after upon the 15th verſe.

[a] To deal with thee for.

[4] The concluſion, containing a commandment of attention, and a promiſe of everlaſting life, ſhadowed out in a figure, of which Gen. 2. 9.

A. D. 96.

the Spirit ſaith unto the churches: To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in [5] the midſt of the [a] Paradiſe of God.

8 ¶ [6] And unto the angel of the church of the [c] Smyrnians, write, Theſe things ſaith he that is firſt and laſt, which was dead and is alive:

9 [7] I know thy works and tribulation, and poverty (but thou art rich) and I know the blaſphemy of them which ſay they are Jews, and are not, but are the ſynagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of thoſe things which thou ſhalt ſuffer: behold, it ſhall come to paſs, that the devil ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, that ye may be tried, and ye ſhall have [8] tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto the death, and I will give thee the crown of life.

11 [9] Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit ſaith to the churches. He that overcometh, ſhall not be hurt [10] of the ſecond death.

12 [11] And to the angel of the church which is at [d] Pergamus, write, This ſaith he which hath that ſharp ſword with two edges:

13 [12] I know thy works, and where thou dwelleſt, even where Satan's throne is, and thou keepeſt my name, and haſt not denied my faith, even in [e] thoſe days when Antipas my faithful martyr was ſlain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt there them that maintain the doctrine of * Balaam, which taught Balac to put a ſtumbling-block before the children of Iſrael, that they ſhould [f] eat of things ſacrificed unto idols, and commit fornication.

* Num. 24. 14. and 25. 1.

15 Even ſo haſt thou them that maintain the doctrine of the [13] Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.

A. D. 96.

16 Repent thyſelf, or elſe I will come unto thee ſhortly, and will fight againſt thee with the ſword of my mouth.

17 [14] Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the churches. To him that overcometh, will I give to eat [15] of the [g] Manna that is hid, and will give him a [h] [16] white ſtone, and in the ſtone a new [17] name written, which no man knoweth ſaving he that receiveth it.

18 ¶ And unto [18] the angel of the church which is at Thyatira, write, Theſe things ſaith the Son of God, which hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet like fine braſs:

19 I know [19] thy works and thy love, and [i] ſervice, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works, and that they are more at the laſt, than at the firſt.

20 Notwithſtanding, I have a few things againſt thee, that thou ſuffereſt the woman Jezebel, which calleth herſelf a propheteſs, to teach and to deceive my ſervants, to make them commit [k] fornication, and to eat meat ſacrificed unto idols:

21 And I gave her ſpace to repent of her fornication, but ſhe repented not.

22 Behold, I will caſt her into a bed, and them that commit fornication with her, into great affliction, except they repent them of their works.

23 And I will kill her children with death: and all the churches ſhall know that I am he which * ſearch the reins and hearts: and I will give unto every one of you according unto your works.

* 1 Sam. 16. 7. Pſ. 7. 10. Jer. 11. 20. and 17. 10.

24 And unto you I ſay, the reſt of them of Thyatira, As many as have not this learning, neither have known the [l] deepneſs of Satan (as they ſpeak) I will [m] put upon you none other burden,

---

[5] That is, in Paradiſe, after the manner of the Hebrew phraſe.

[b] This Chriſt ſpeaketh as he is Mediator.

[6] The ſecond place is unto the paſtors of the church of the Smyrnians. The exordium is taken out of the 17th and 18th verſes of the firſt chapter.

[c] Smyrna was one of the cities of Ionia in Aſia.

[7] The propoſition of praiſe is in this verſe, and of exhortation joined with promiſe, is in the next verſe.

[8] That is, of ten years. For ſo commonly both in this book and in Daniel, years are ſignified by the name of days, that God thereby might declare, that the ſpace of time is appointed by him, and the ſame very ſhort. Now becauſe Saint John wrote this book in the end of Domitian the emperor's reign, as Juſtinus and Irenæus do witneſs, it is altogether neceſſary that this ſhould be referred unto that perſecution which was done by the authority of the emperor Trajan, who began to make havock of the Chriſtian churches in the tenth year of his reign, as the hiſtoriographers do write: and his bloody perſecution continued until Adrian the emperor ſucceeded in his place: the ſpace of which time is preciſely ten years, which are here mentioned.

[9] The concluſion, ver. 7.

[10] See chap. 20. 6.

[11] The third place is unto the paſtors of Pergamus. The exordium is taken out of the ſixteenth verſe of the firſt chapter.

[d] Pergamus was the name of a famous city in old time in Aſia, where the kings of the Attalians were always reſident.

[12] The propoſition of praiſe, is in this verſe, of reprehenſion in the two following, and of exhortation joined with a conditional threat, ver. 16. Now this Antipas was the angel or miniſter of the church of Pergamus, as Aretas writeth.

[e] The faith of them of Pergamus is ſo much the more highly commended, becauſe they remained conſtant even in the very heat of perſecution.

[f] That which is here ſpoken of things offered to idols, is meant of the ſame kind which Paul ſpeaketh of, 1 Cor. 10. 14.

[13] Which follow the footſteps of Balaam, and ſuch as are abandoned to all filthineſs, as he ſhewed in the verſe aforegoing, and is here ſignified by a note of ſimilitude. And thus alſo muſt the ſixth verſe be underſtood. For this matter eſpecially, Irenæus muſt be conſulted withal.

[14] The concluſion, ſtanding of exhortation as before, and of promiſe.

[15] The bread of life, inviſible, ſpiritual, and heavenly, which is kept ſecretly with God, from before all eternity.

[g] He alludeth to that ſermon which we read of, John 6. and to the place we find, Pſalm 105. 40.

[h] Aretas writeth, that ſuch a ſtone was wont to be given to wreſtlers at games, or elſe that ſuch ſtones did in old time witneſs the acquitting of a man.

[16] Which is a ſign and witneſs of forgiveneſs and remiſſion of ſins, of righteouſneſs and true holineſs, and of purity incorrupted, after that the old man is killed.

[17] A ſign and teſtimony of newneſs of life in righteouſneſs and true holineſs, by putting on the new man, whom none doth inwardly know, ſave the ſpirit of man, which is in himſelf, the praiſe whereof is not of men, but of God, Rom. 2. 28.

[18] The fourth place is unto the paſtors of Thyatira. The exordium is taken out of the fourteenth and fifteenth verſes of the firſt chapter.

[19] The propoſition of praiſe is in this verſe of reprehenſion, for that they tolerated with them the doctrine of unrighteouſneſs and ungodlineſs, is verſe 20. the authors whereof, though they were called back of God, yet repented not, verſe 21. whereunto is added a moſt heavy threatning, verſe 22. and 23. of a conditional promiſe, and of exhortation to hold faſt the truth, in the two verſes following.

[i] So he calleth thoſe offices of charity which are done to the ſaints.

[k] By fornication, is idolatry, oftentimes in the ſcripture, meant.

[l] He pointeth out the bragging of certain men, which boaſted of their deep, that is, plentiful and common knowledge, which notwithſtanding is deviliſh.

[m] I will ſpeak no worſe thing againſt you, being content to have ſhewed you what I require to be in you.

A. D. 96.

25 But that which ye have already, hold faſt till I come.

26 [20] For he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give [21] power over nations.

* Pſ. 2. 9. 27 * And he ſhall rule them with a rod of iron: and as the veſſels of a potter, ſhall they be broken.

28 Even as I received of my Father, ſo will I give him the [22] morning ſtar.

29 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit ſaith to the churches.

CHAP. III.

1 The fifth epiſtle ſent to the paſtors of the church of Sardis, 7 of Philadelphia, 14 and of the Laodiceans; 16 that they be not lukewarm, 20 but endeavour to further God's glory.

AND [1] write unto the angel of the church which is at [a] Sardis, Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven ſpirits of God, and the ſeven ſtars, [2] I know thy works: for thou haſt a [b] name that thou liveſt, but thou art dead.

2 Be awake, and ſtrengthen the things which remain, that are [c] ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

* Ch. 16. 15. 1 Theſſ. 5. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 10. 3 Remember therefore, how thou haſt received and heard, and hold faſt and repent. * If therefore thou wilt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou ſhalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Notwithſtanding thou haſt a few names yet in Sardis, [3] which have not defiled their garments: and they ſhall walk with me in [4] white: [5] for they are [d] worthy.

* Ch. 20. 12. and 21, 27. Phil. 4. 3. 5 He that overcometh, ſhall be clothed in white array, and I will not put out his name out of the * book of life, but I will confeſs his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the churches.

7 ¶ [6] And write unto the angel of the church which is of Philadelphia, Theſe things ſaith he that is holy, and true, which hath the [e] key of David: which openeth, and no man ſhutteth: and ſhutteth, and no man openeth.

8 [7] I know thy works: behold, I have ſet before thee an open door, and no man can ſhut it: for thou haſt a little ſtrength, and haſt kept my word, and haſt not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them [f] of the ſynagogue of Satan, which call themſelves Jews, and are not, but do lye: behold, I ſay, I will make them that they ſhall come [8] and worſhip before thy feet, and ſhall know that I have loved thee.

10 Becauſe thou haſt [g] kept the word of my patience, therefore I will deliver thee from the hour of temptation, which will come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come ſhortly: hold that which thou haſt, that no man take thy crown.

12 [9] Him that overcometh, will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he ſhall go no more out: [10] and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is the new Jeruſalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and I will write upon him my new name.

13 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the churches.

14 [11] And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write, Theſe things ſaith [h] Amen, the faithful and true witneſs, that [i] beginning of the creatures of God.

15 [12] I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wereſt cold or hot.

16 Therefore, becauſe thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, it will come to paſs, that I ſhall ſpue thee out of my mouth.

17 For thou ſayeſt, I am rich and increaſed with goods, and have need of nothing, and knoweſt not how thou art wretched and miſerable, [13] and poor, and blind, and naked.

[20] The concluſion, wherein Chriſt aſſureth unto his ſervants the communion of his kingdom and glory in this verſe, and that following: and commandeth an holy attention in the laſt verſe.

[21] That is, I will make him a king, by communion with me, and my fellow heir, as it is promiſed, Matt. 19. 28. and 25 34. Rom. 8. 17. and 1 Cor. 6. 3. Eph. 2. 6. and 2 Tim. 2. 12. and Apoc. 3. 21. and 44.

[22] The brightneſs of greateſt glory and honour, neareſt approaching unto the light of Chriſt, who is the Son of righteouſneſs, and our head, Matt. 4.

[1] The firſt place is unto the paſtors of Sardis. The exordium is taken out of the 4. and 16 verſes of the firſt chapter.

[a] Sardis is the name of a moſt flouriſhing and famous city, where the kings of Lydia kept their courts.

[2] The propoſition of the proof is in this verſe: of exhortation joined with a threatening in the two verſes that follow, and of qualification by way of correction, unto the comfort of the good which yet remaineth there, verſe 4.

[b] Thou art ſaid to live, but art dead indeed.

[c] Other things, whoſe ſtate is ſuch, that they are now going, and unleſs they be confirmed, will periſh forthwith.

[3] That is, who have with all religion guarded themſelves from ſin and contagion, even from the very ſhew of evil, as Saint Jude exhorteth, verſe 23.

[4] Pure from all ſpot, and ſhining with glory. So it is to be underſtood always hereafter, as in the next verſe.

[5] The concluſion ſtanding upon a promiſe and a commandment, as before.

[d] They are meet and fit, to wit, becauſe they are juſtified in Chriſt, as they have truly ſhewed it: for he is righteous that worketh righteouſneſs: but ſo as the tree bringeth forth the fruit, look Rom. 8. 18.

[6] The ſixth place is unto the paſtors of Philadelphia. The exordium is taken out of the 18 verſe of the firſt chapter.

[e] All power of rule in commanding and forbidding, in delivering and puniſhing. And the houſe of David is the church, and the continual promiſe of David's kingdom belongeth to Chriſt.

[7] The propoſition of praiſe is in this verſe: of promiſes, to bring home again them that wander, verſe 9. and to preſerve the godly, verſe 10. and of exhortation, verſe 11.

[f] I will bring them to that caſe.

[8] That is, fall down and worſhip, either thee civilly, or Chriſt religiouſly at thy feet (and thus I had rather take it) whether here in the church (which ſeemeth more proper to the argument of this place) or there in the world to come. For Chriſt verily ſhall fulfil his word.

[g] Becauſe thou haſt been patient and conſtant, as I would my ſervants ſhould be.

[9] The concluſion, which containeth a promiſe and a commandment.

[10] That is, the new man ſhall be termed after his father, mother, and head, Chriſt.

[11] The ſeventh place is unto the paſtors of the church of Laodicea. The exordium is taken out of the 15 verſe of the firſt chapter.

[h] Amen, ſoundeth as much in the Hebrew tongue, as truly, or truth itſelf.

[i] Of whom all things that are made, have their beginning.

[12] The propoſition of reproof is in this verſe, whereunto is adjoined a threatening, verſe 16, with a confirmation declaring the ſame, verſe 17, and of exhortation unto faith and repentance, verſe 18, 19, whereunto is adjoined a conditional promiſe, verſe 20.

[13] The ſpiritual miſery of men is metaphorically expreſſed in three points: unto which are matched, as correſpondent, thoſe remedies which are offered, verſe 18.

18 I counſel thee to buy of me gold tried by the fire, that thou mayeſt be made rich: and white raiment, that thou mayeſt be clothed, and that thy filthy nakedneſs do not appear: and anoint thine eyes with eye ſalve, that thou mayeſt ſee.

19 As many as I love, * I rebuke and chaſten: be [k] zealous therefore and amend.

* Prov. 3. 12. Heb. 12. 5.

20 Behold, I ſtand at the door, and knock. [14] If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in unto him, and will ſup with him, and he with me.

21 [15] To him that overcometh, will I grant to ſit with me in my throne, even as I overcame, and ſit with my Father in his throne.

22 Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the churches.

CHAP. IV.

1 Another viſion, containing the glory of God's majeſty: 8 which is magnified of the four beaſts, 10 and the four and twenty elders.

AFTER [1] this I looked, and behold, a door was open in heaven, and the firſt voice which I heard, was as it were of a trumpet talking with me, ſaying, Come up hither, and I will ſhew thee things which muſt be done hereafter.

2 And [2] immediately I was raviſhed [a] in the ſpirit, [3] and behold, a throne was ſet in heaven, and one ſat upon the throne.

3 [4] And he that ſat, was to look upon, like unto a jaſper ſtone, and a ſardine, and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in ſight like to an emerald.

4 [5] And round about the throne were four and twenty ſeats, and upon the ſeats I ſaw four and twenty elders ſitting, clothed in white raiment, and had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 [6] And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thunderings, and voices, and there were ſeven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the ſeven ſpirits of God.

6 [7] And before the throne there was a ſea of glaſs like unto chryſtal: and in the midſt of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beaſts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the firſt beaſt was like a lion, and the ſecond beaſt like a calf, and the third beaſt had a face as a man, and the fourth beaſt was like a flying eagle.

8 And the [b] four beaſts had each one of them ſix wings about him, and they were full of eyes within, and they ceaſed not [8] day nor night, ſaying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and which is, and which is to come.

9 And when thoſe beaſts [c] gave glory, and honour, and thanks to him that ſat on the throne, which liveth for ever and ever,

10 [9] The four and twenty elders fell down before him that ſat on the throne, and worſhipped him that liveth for evermore, and caſt their crowns before the throne, ſaying,

11 [10] Thou art * worthy, O Lord, [11] to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou haſt created all things, and for thy will's ſake they are, and have been created.

* Ch. 5. 12.

CHAP.

---

[k] Zeal is ſet againſt them which are neither hot nor cold.

[14] This muſt be taken after the manner of an allegory, as John 14. 23.

[15] The concluſion, conſiſting of a promiſe, as chap. 2. verſe 26. and of an exhortation. Hitherto hath been the firſt part of the book of the Apocalypſe.

[1] Hereafter followeth the ſecond part of this book, altogether prophetical, foretelling thoſe things which were to come, as was ſaid before, chap. 1. 19. This is divided into two hiſtories: one common unto the whole world, unto the ninth chapter: and another ſingular of the church of God, thence unto the 22d chapter, and theſe hiſtories are ſaid to be deſcribed in ſeveral books, chapter 5. 1. and 10. 2. Now this firſt verſe is, as it were, a paſſage from the former part unto the ſecond: where it is ſaid, that the heaven was opened, that is, that heavenly things were unlocked, and that the voice of a trumpet ſounded in heaven, to ſtir up the apoſtle, and call him to the underſtanding of things to come. The firſt hiſtory hath two parts: one of the cauſes of things done, and of this whole Revelation, in this and the next chapter. Another of the acts done in the next four chapters. The principal cauſes according to the diſtinction of perſons in the unity of the divine eſſence, and according to the œconomy or diſpenſation thereof, are two: one the beginning, which none ſhall approach unto, that is, God the Father, of whom is ſpoken in this chapter. The other the Son, who is the mean cauſe, eaſy to be approached unto, in reſpect that he is God and man in one perſon, of whom, chapter 5.

[2] The manner of Revelation, as before, 1. 10.

[a] Look chapter 1. 10.

[3] A deſcription of God the Father, and of his glory in the heavens, framed unto the manner of men by his office, nature, company, attending, effect, inſtruments, and events, that follow afterwards. In this verſe he is preſented in office a judge, as Abraham ſaid, Gen. 18. which is declared by his throne, as an enſign of judgment, and his ſitting thereupon.

[4] By his nature, in that he is the Father, moſt glorious in his own perſon, and with his glory overſhining all other things.

[5] By the company attending about him, in that, as that moſt high judge, he is accompanied with the moſt honourable attendants of prophets and apoſtles both of the old and new church, whom Chriſt hath made to be prieſts and kings, chap. 1. 6. and 5. 10.

[6] By effects, in that moſt mightily he ſpeaketh all things by his voice and word, as Pſalm 29. 3. and with the light of his ſpirit and prudence, peruſeth and paſſeth through all.

[7] By inſtruments uſed, in that he hath a moſt ready treaſury, and as it were a work-houſe, excellently furniſhed with all things, unto the executing of his will, which things flow from his commandment, as is repeated, chap. 15. 2. and hath alſo the angels moſt ready adminiſters of his councils and pleaſure, unto all parts of the world, continually watching (in this verſe) working by reaſon otherwiſe than the inſtruments without life laſt mentioned, courageous as lions, mighty as bulls, wiſe as men, ſwift as eagles, verſe 7. moſt apt unto all purpoſes, as furniſhed with wings on every part, moſt piercing of ſight, and finally, pure and holy ſpirits, always in continual motion, verſe 8.

[b] Every beaſt had ſix wings.

[8] By events, in that for all the cauſes before mentioned, God is glorified both of angels, as holy, judge, omnipotent, eternal, and immutable, verſe 8. and alſo after their example he is glorified of holy men, verſe 9. in ſign and in ſpeech, ver. 10, 11.

[c] God is ſaid to have glory, honour, kingdom, and ſuch like, given unto him, when we godly and reverently ſet forth that which is properly and only his.

[9] Three ſigns of divine honour given to God, proſtration or falling down, adoration and caſting their crowns before God: in which the godly, though made kings by Chriſt, do willingly empty themſelves of all glory, moved with a religious reſpect of the majeſty of God.

[10] The ſum of their ſpeech: that all glory muſt be given unto God: the reaſon, becauſe he is the eternal beginning of all things, from whoſe only will they have their being, and are governed: and finally, in all reſpects are that which they are.

[11] That is, that thou ſhouldeſt challenge the ſame to thyſelf alone. But as for us, we are unworthy that even by thy goodneſs we ſhould be made partakers of this glory. And hitherto hath been handled the principal cauſe unapproachable, which is God.

CHAP. V.

1 The book ſealed with ſeven ſeals, 3 which none could open, 6 that Lamb of God is thought worthy to open, 12 even by the conſent of all the company of heaven.

AND [1] I ſaw in the [2] right hand of him that ſat upon the throne, [3] a book written within, and on the backſide ſealed with ſeven ſeals.

2 And I ſaw a ſtrong angel which preached with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to looſe the ſeals thereof?

3 [4] And no man in heaven nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 Then I wept much, becauſe no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 [5] And one of the elders ſaid unto me, Weep not: behold, that * [6] lion which is of the tribe of Judah, that root of David, hath obtained to open the book, and to looſe the ſeven ſeals thereof.

* Gen. 49. 9.

6 Then I beheld, and lo, [7] in the midſt of the throne, and of the four beaſts, and in the midſt of the elders, ſtood a lamb, as though he had been killed, which had ſeven horns, and ſeven eyes, which are the ſeven ſpirits of God, ſent into all the world.

7 [8] And he came, and took the book out of the right hand of him that ſat upon the throne.

8 [9] And when he had taken the book, the four beaſts, and the four and twenty elders, fell down before the Lamb, having every one [10] harps and golden vials full of odours, which are the [a] prayers of the ſaints,

A. D. 96.

9 And they ſung a [b] new [11] ſong, ſaying, [12] Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the ſeals thereof, becauſe thou waſt killed, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation,

10 And haſt made us unto our God * kings, and prieſts, and we ſhall reign on the earth.

* Ch. 1. 6. 2 Pet. 2. 9.

11 [13] Then I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne, and about the beaſts and the elders, [14] and there were * [c] ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands:

* Dan. 7. 10.

12 Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was killed, to [d] receive power, and riches, and wiſdom, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and praiſe.

13 [15] And all the creatures which are in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and in the ſea, and all that are in them, heard I, ſaying, Praiſe, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that ſitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for evermore.

14 [16] And the four beaſts ſaid, Amen, and the four and twenty elders fell down and worſhipped him that liveth for evermore.

CHAP. VI.

1 The Lamb openeth the firſt ſeal of the book, 3 the ſecond, 5 the third, 7 the fourth, 9 the fifth, 12 and the ſixth, and then ariſe murders, famine, peſtilence, outcries of ſaints, earthquakes, and divers ſtrange ſights in heaven.

AFTER

---

[1] A paſſing unto the ſecond principal cauſe, which is the Son of God, God and man, the mediator of all, as the eternal Word of God the Father, manifeſted in the fleſh. This chapter hath two parts: one that prepareth the way unto the Revelation, by rehearſal of the occaſions that did occur in the firſt four verſes. Another, the hiſtory of the Revelation of Chriſt: thence unto the end of the chapter.

[2] That is, in the very right hand of God.

[3] Here are ſhewed the occaſions for which this principal cauſe, and this Revelation was alſo neceſſary: the ſame are three; the firſt a preſent viſion of the book of the counſels of God, concerning the government of this whole world, which book is ſaid to be laid up with the Father as it were in his hand: but ſhut and unknown to all creatures, in this verſe. The ſecond is a religious deſire of the angels of God to underſtand the myſteries of this book, verſe 2. whereof ſee 1 Peter, 1. 12. The third is a lamentation of Saint John and all the godly, moved by the ſame deſire, verſe 4. when they ſaw that it was a thing impoſſible for any creature to effect: which is declared in verſe 3.

[4] Thus neither of them that are in heaven, nor of them which are in the earth, &c. And this I like better. Now this enumeration of parts is ſufficient to the denying of the whole: For of the creatures, one ſort is in heaven, above the earth: another in the earth, and another under the earth, in the ſea, as is afterwards declared, verſe 13.

[5] The ſecond part of this chapter, in which is ſet down the Revelation of the Son, as before was ſaid. This part containeth firſt an hiſtory of the manner how God prepared Saint John to underſtand this Revelation, in this verſe. Secondly, the Revelation of the Son himſelf, unto the 7th verſe. Thirdly, the accidents of this Revelation, in the reſt of the chapter. The manner how is here deſcribed in two ſorts: one from without him, by ſpeech, in this verſe: another within, by opening the eyes of Saint John (which before were held) that he might ſee, in the verſe following.

[6] That is, the moſt mighty and moſt approved prince: according to the uſe of the Hebrew ſpeech.

[7] The ſum of this Revelation: Chriſt the mediator taketh and openeth the book, verſe 6, 7. Therefore in this Revelation is deſcribed the perſon of Chriſt, in this verſe. His fact in the next verſe. The perſon is thus deſcribed: Chriſt, the mediator between God, angels, and men, as the eternal Word of God, and our redeemer: as the Lamb of God, ſtanding as ſlain, and making interceſſion for us by the virtue and merit of his everlaſting ſacrifice, is armed with the Spirit of God in his own perſon, that is, with the power and wiſdom of God effectually unto the government of this whole world.

[8] The fact of Chriſt the mediator: that he cometh unto the throne of the Father, of which chap. 4. and taketh the book out of his hand to open it. For that he opened it, it is firſt expreſſed, chap. 6, 1, &c.

[9] Now follow in the end the accidents of the Revelation laſt ſpoken of: that all the holy angels and men did ſing unto him: both the chief, verſe 9, 10, and the common order of angels, verſe 11, 12. and of all things created, verſe 13. the princes of both ſorts agreeing thereunto, verſe 14.

[10] The ſymbols or ſigns of praiſe, ſweet of ſavour, and acceptable unto God, ſee chap. 8. 3.

[a] Look chap. 8. 3.

[b] No common ſong.

[11] That is, compoſed according to the preſent matter, the Lamb having received the book as it were with his feet, and opened it with his horns, as it is ſaid in the Canticles.

[12] The ſong of the nobles or princes ſtanding by the throne, conſiſting of a publication of the praiſe of Chriſt, and a confirmation of the ſame from his benefits, both which we have received of himſelf (as are the ſuffering of his death, our redemption upon the croſs by his blood, in this verſe: and our communion with him in kingdom and prieſthood, which along ago he hath granted unto us with himſelf) and which we hereafter hope to obtain, as our kingdom to come, in Chriſt, in the verſe following.

[13] The conſent of the common order of angels, anſwering in melody unto their princes that ſtood by the throne.

[14] A number finite, but almoſt infinite, for one infinity indeed, as Daniel 7. 10.

[c] By this is meant a great number.

[d] To have all praiſe given to him as to the mightieſt and wiſeſt, &c.

[15] The conſent of all the common multitude of the creatures.

[16] A confirmation of the praiſe beforegoing, from the conteſtation of the nobles, expreſſed in word and ſigns, as once or twice before this.

A. D. 96.

AFTER, [1] I beheld when the Lamb had opened one of the ſeals, and I heard one of the four beaſts ſay, as it were the noiſe of thunder, Come and ſee.

2 Therefore [2] I beheld, and lo, there was a white horſe, and he that ſat on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him, and he went forth conquering that he might overcome.

3 And [3] when he had opened the ſecond ſeal, I heard the ſecond beaſt ſay, Come and ſee.

4 And there went out another horſe, that was red, and power was given to him that ſat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they ſhould kill one another, and there was given unto him a great ſword.

5 [4] And when he had opened the third ſeal, I heard the third beaſt ſay, Come and ſee. Then I beheld, and lo, a black horſe, and he that ſat on him had balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midſt of the four beaſts ſay, A [a] meaſure of wheat for a penny, and three meaſures of barley for a penny, [5] and oil and wine hurt thou not.

7 [6] And when he had opened the fourth ſeal, I heard the voice of the fourth beaſt ſay, Come and ſee.

8 And I looked, and behold, a pale horſe, and his name that ſat on him was death, and hell followed him, and power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with ſword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beaſts of the earth.

9 [7] And when he had opened the fifth ſeal, I ſaw under the altar the ſouls of them that were killed for the word of God, and for the teſtimony which they maintained,

10 And they cried with a loud voice, ſaying, How long, Lord, which art holy and true! doeſt not thou judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And long [8] white robes were given unto every one, and it was ſaid unto them, that they ſhould reſt for a little ſeaſon until their fellow ſervants and their brethren that ſhould be killed even as they were, were [b] fulfilled.

12 [9] And I beheld when he had opened the ſixth ſeal, and lo, there was a great earthquake, and the ſun was as black as [c] ſackcloth of hair, and the moon was like blood.

13 And the ſtars of heaven fell unto the earth, as a fig-tree caſteth her green figs, when it is ſhaken of a mighty wind.

14 And heaven departed away, as a ſcroll when it is rolled, and every mountain and iſle were moved out of their places.

15 [10] And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themſelves in dens, and among the rocks of the mountains,

16 And ſaid to the mountains and rocks, [11] * Fall on us, and hide us from the preſence of

* Iſa. 2. 19. Hoſ. 10. 8. Luke 23. 30.

[1] This is the ſecond part of this firſt hiſtory (which I ſaid was common, and of the whole world) of the works of God in the government of all things. Of this there are generally three members: the fore-ſignifying the caution, and the execution of all the evils which God poureth out upon this world, which hath moſt hardly deſerved of him. The fore-ſignifying is ſet down in this chapter, the caution for preſerving the church is in the next chapter, and the execution is deſcribed, chap. 8. 9. In every part of the fore-ſignifying there are three branches: the ſeveral and expreſs calling of Saint John to prepare himſelf to take knowledge of the things that were to be ſhewed unto him in the opening of the ſeals: the ſign, and the word expounding the ſign: and albeit the expreſs calling of Saint John be uſed only in four of the ſigns, yet the ſame is alſo to be underſtood in the reſt that follow. The author of the fore-ſignifyings is the Lamb, as that word of the Father made the mediator, opening the ſeals of the book. The inſtruments are the angels in moſt of the viſions, who expound the ſign and the words thereof. Now this firſt verſe containeth an expreſs calling of Saint John to mark the opening of the firſt ſeal,

[2] The firſt ſign joined with declaration is, that God, for the ſins and horrible rebellion of the world, will invade the ſame: and firſt of all will, as afar off, with his darts of peſtilence, moſt ſuddenly, mightily, and gloriouſly, beat down the ſame as judge, and triumph over it as conqueror.

[3] The ſecond ſign joined with words of declaration (after the expreſs calling of Saint John as before) is, that God being provoked unto wrath by the obſtinacy and hard-heartedneſs of the world, not repenting for the former plague: as ſetting upon the ſame at hand, will kindle the fire of debate amongſt men, and will deſtroy the inhabitants of this world, one by the ſword of another.

[4] The third ſign with declaration is, that God will deſtroy the world with famine, withdrawing all proviſion: which is, by the figure Synecdoche, comprehended in wheat, barley, wine, and oil.

[a] Hereby is ſignified what great ſcarcity of corn there was; for the word here uſed is a kind of meaſure of dry things, which is in quantity but the eighth part of a buſhel, which was an ordinary portion uſed to be given to ſervants for their ſtint of meat for one day.

[5] I had rather diſtinguiſh and read the words thus: "And the wine and the oil thou ſhalt not deal unjuſtly." In this ſenſe likewiſe the oil and the wine ſhall be ſold a very little for a penny. Thou ſhalt not deal unjuſtly, namely, when thou ſhalt meaſure out a very little for a great price: ſo is the place evident: otherwiſe that is moſt true which the wiſe man ſaith, That who with-holdeth the corn, ſhall be curſed of the people, Prov. 11. 26.

[6] The fourth ſign, joined with words of declaration, is, that God will addict the ſourth part of the world indifferently, unto death and hell, or the grave, by all thoſe means at once, by which before ſeverally and in order he had recalled their minds unto amendment. Unto theſe are alſo added the wild and cruel beaſts of the earth, out of Levit. 26. 22. Thus doth God, according to his wiſdom, diſpenſe the treaſures of his power juſtly towards all, mercifully towards the good, and with patience or long-ſufferance towards his enemies.

[7] The fifth ſign is, that the holy martyrs, which are under the altar, whereby they are ſanctified, that is, received into the truſt and tuition of Chriſt (into whoſe hands they are committed) ſhall cry out for the juſtice of God, in an holy zeal to advance his kingdom, and not of any private perturbation of the mind, in this and the next verſe, and that God will, in deed, ſign, and word, comfort them, verſe 11.

[8] As before, 3. 4.

[b] Until their number be fulfilled.

[9] The ſixth ſign, the narration whereof hath two parts: the ſign, and the event. The ſign is, that the earth, heaven, and the things that are in them, for horror of the ſins of the world upon thoſe moſt heavy foretellings of God and complaint of the ſaints, ſhall be ſhaken moſt vehemently, trembling in horrible manner, and loſing their light, in this verſe: falling from on high, verſe 13. withdrawing themſelves, and flying away for the greatneſs of the trouble, verſe 14. So holily do all creatures depend upon the will of God, and content themſelves in his glory.

[c] So they called in old time thoſe woven works that were of hair.

[10] The event of the ſign aforegoing: that there is no man that ſhall not be aſtoniſhed at that general commotion, flee away for fear, and hide himſelf, in this verſe, and wiſh unto himſelf moſt bitter death, for exceeding horror of the wrath of God, and of the Lamb, at which before he was aſtoniſhed. Now this perplexity is not of the godly, but of the wicked, whoſe portion is in this life, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaketh, Pſalm 17. 14. Not that ſorrow which is according unto God, which worketh repentance unto ſalvation, whereof a man ſhall never repent him, but that worldly ſorrow that bringeth death, 2 Cor. 7. 9. as their wiſhings do declare: for this hiſtory of the whole world, is ſevered from the hiſtory of the church, as I have ſhewed before, chap. 4. 1.

[11] Theſe are words of ſuch as deſpair of their eſcape: of which deſpair there are two arguments, the preſence of God and of the Lamb provoked to wrath againſt the world, him that ſitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb.

A.D. 96.

17 For the great day of his wrath is come, and who can ſtand?

CHAP. VII.

1 The angels coming to hurt the earth, 3 are ſtayed until the elect of the Lord 5 of all tribes were ſealed. 13 Such as ſuffered perſecution for Chriſt's ſake, 16 have great felicity 17 and joy.

AND [1] after that, I ſaw four angels ſtand on the [a] four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the winds ſhould not blow on the earth, neither on the ſea, [2] neither on any tree.

2 [3] And I ſaw [4] another angel come up from the eaſt, which had the ſeal of the living God, and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels to whom power was given to hurt the earth, and the ſea, ſaying,

3 Hurt ye not the earth, neither the ſea, neither the trees, till we have ſealed the ſervants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were ſealed, and there were ſealed [5] an hundred and four and forty thouſand of all the tribes of the children of Iſrael.

5 Of the tribe of Judah were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Reuben were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Gad were ſealed twelve thouſand.

6 Of the tribe of Aſer were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Napthtali were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Manaſſes were ſealed twelve thouſand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were ſealed twelve thouſand. [6] Of the tribe of [b] Levi were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Iſſachar were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Zebulun were ſealed twelve thouſand.

8 Of the tribe of [c] Joſeph were ſealed twelve thouſand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were ſealed twelve thouſand.

9 After theſe things I beheld, and lo a great multitude, [7] which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, [8] ſtood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with long white robes, and palms in their hands.

10 [9] And they cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Salvation cometh of our God, that ſitteth upon the throne, and of the Lamb.

11 And all the angels ſtood round about the throne, and about the elders, and the four beaſts, and they fell before the throne on their faces, and worſhipped God,

12 Saying, Amen: Praiſe, and glory, and wiſdom, and thanks, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for evermore. Amen.

13 [10] And one of the elders ſpake, ſaying unto me, What are theſe which are arrayed in long white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I ſaid unto him, Lord, thou knoweſt. And he ſaid unto me, [11] Theſe are they which came out of great tribulation, and have waſhed their long robes, and have made their long robes white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they in the preſence of the throne of God, and ſerve him [d] day and night in his temple, and he that ſitteth on the throne will dwell [e] among them.

in this verſe: and the conſcience of their own weakneſs, whereby men feel that they are no way able to ſtand in the day of the wrath of God, verſe 17. as it is ſaid, Iſaiah 14. 27.

[1] The ſecoud member of this part is a preventing of danger, as we diſtinguiſhed the ſame before, chapter 6. 1. that is, of the caution whereby God took care beforehand, and provided for his, that after the example of the Iſraelites of old, Exod. 8. 23. the faithful might be exempted from the plagues of this wicked world. This whole place is a certain interlocution and bringing in for this whole chapter, by occaſion of the prediction and argument of the ſixth ſeal. For firſt that evil is prevented in the elect, unto the 9th verſe. Then thanks are given by the elect for that cauſe, ver. 10, 11, 12. Laſtly, the accompliſhment of the things is ſet forth unto the end of the chapter. The firſt verſe is a tranſition, ſpeaking of the angels which keep the inferior parts from all evil until God do command. For (as it is excellently figured by Ezek. chap. 1. 11, 12.) their faces and their wings are reached upwards, continually waiting upon and beholding the countenance of God for their direction, and every of them goeth into that part that is right before his face: whitherſoever the Spirit ſhall go, they go, they ſtep not out of the way, that is, they depart not ſo much as a foot's breadth from the path commanded them of God.

[a] On the four quarters or coaſts of the earth.

[2] That is, neither into the air, into which the tops of trees are advanced.

[3] Now God provideth againſt the danger of his elect, by his commandment, verſe 2 and 3, and by ſign or figure, both for thoſe of the nation of the Jews, thence unto the 8th verſe, and alſo of the Gentiles, verſe 9.

[4] Not only another, or differing in number from the common angels of God: but alſo in eſſence, office, and operation, exceeding all angels: that is, Chriſt Jeſus, the eternal angel or word of God, and mediator of the covenant. So hereafter, chapter 8. 3. and 10. 15.

[5] That is, of the Jews, a number certain in itſelf before God, and ſuch as may be numbered of us: for which cauſe alſo the ſame is here ſet down as certain. But of the elect which are of the Gentiles, the number indeed is in itſelf certain with God, but of us not poſſibly to be numbered, as God, Gen. 15. 5. and often elſewhere, and Iſaiah figured moſt excellently, chap. 49. and 60. This therefore is ſpoken with reſpect, when a certain number is put for an uncertain Confer this with verſe 9.

[b] He ſkipped Dan, and reckoneth Levi.

[c] Of Ephraim, who was Joſeph's other ſon, and had the birthright given him, whereof he is called Joſeph.

[6] Here the tribe of Levi is reckoned up in common with the reſt, becauſe all the Iſraelites were equally made prieſts with them in Chriſt by his prieſthood, chap. 1. 6. and 5. 10. and Rom. 12. 1. and 1 Pet. 2. 9. The name of Dan is not mentioned, becauſe the Danites long before forſaking the worſhip of God, were fallen away from the fellowſhip of God's people unto the part of the Gentiles, which evil many ages before Jacob foreſaw, Gen. 49. 17. for which cauſe alſo there is no mention made of this tribe in the firſt book of the Chronicles.

[7] See before upon the 4th verſe.

[8] As prieſts, kings, and glorious conquerors by martyrdom: which things are noted by their proper ſigns in this verſe.

[9] The praiſe of God celebrated firſt by the holy men in this verſe, then by the heavenly angels in the two verſes following.

[10] A paſſage over unto the expounding of the viſion, of which the angel enquireth of Saint John, to ſtir him up withal, in this verſe; and John in the form of ſpeech both acknowledgeth his own ignorance, attributing knowledge unto the angel, and alſo in moſt modeſt manner requeſteth he expounding of the viſion.

[11] The expoſition of the viſion, wherein the angel telleth, firſt, the acts of the ſaints, that is, their ſufferings and work of faith in Chriſt Jeſus, in this verſe. Secondly, their glory: both preſent, which conſiſteth in two things; that they miniſter unto God, and that God protecteth them, verſe 15. and to come in their perfect deliverance from all annoyances, verſe 16. and in participation of all good things which even the memory of former evils ſhall never be able to diminiſh, verſe 17. The cauſe efficient, and which containeth all theſe things, is only one, even the Lamb of God, the Lord, the Mediator, and the Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

[d] He alludeth to the Levites, which ſerved day and night, for elſe there is no night in heaven.

[e] Or, upon them whereby is meant God's defence and protection, as it were toward them, who are as ſafe as men in the Lord's tents.

A. D. 96.

16 * They ſhall hunger no more, neither thirſt any more, neither ſhall the ſun light on them, neither any heat.

* Iſa. 49. 10.

17 For the Lamb, which is in the midſt of the throne, ſhall govern them, and ſhall lead them unto the lively fountains of waters, and * God ſhall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

CHAP. VIII.

1 After the opening of the ſeventh ſeal, 3 the ſaints prayers are offered up with odours. 6 The ſeven angels come forth with trumpets. 7 The four firſt blow, and fire falleth on the earth, 8 the ſea is turned into blood, 10, 11 the waters wax bitter, 12 and the ſtars are darkened.

AND [1] when he had opened the ſeventh ſeal, there was ſilence in heaven about half an hour.

2 [2] And I ſaw the ſeven angels which [a] ſtood before God, and to them were given ſeven trumpets.

3 [3] Then another angel came and ſtood before the altar having a golden cenſer, and much odours was given unto him, that he ſhould offer with the prayers of all ſaints upon the golden altar, which is before the throne.

4 And the ſmoke of the odours, with the prayers of the ſaints, [b] went up before God, out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the cenſer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and caſt it into the earth, and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and earthquake.

6 [4] Then the ſeven angels, which had the ſeven trumpets, prepared themſelves to blow the trumpets.

7 [5] So the firſt angel blew the trumpet, and there was hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were caſt into the earth, and the third part of trees was burnt, and all green graſs was burnt.

A. D. 96.

8 [6] And the ſecond angel blew the trumpet, and as it were a great mountain, burning with fire, was caſt into the ſea, and the third part of the ſea became blood.

9 And the third part of the creatures, which were in the ſea, and had life, died, and the third part of the ſhips were deſtroyed.

10 [7] There the third angel blew his trumpet, and there fell a great ſtar from heaven, burning like a torch, and it fell into the third part of the rivers, and into the fountains of waters.

11 And the name of the ſtar is called [8] wormwood: therefore the third part of the waters became wormwood, and many men died of the waters, becauſe they were made bitter.

12 [9] And the fourth angel blew the trumpet, and the third part of the ſun was ſmitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the ſtars, ſo that the third part of them was darkened: and the day was ſmitten, that the third part of it could not ſhine, and likewiſe the night.

13 And I beheld, and heard one angel flying through the midſt of heaven, ſaying with a loud voice, [10] Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, becauſe of the ſounds to come of the trumpet of the three angels, which were yet to blow the trumpets.

[1] He returneth to the hiſtory of the ſeals of the book which the Lamb opened. The ſeventh ſeal is the next fore-ſignification, and a preciſe commandment of the execution of the moſt heavy judgments of God upon this wicked world, which fore-ſignification being underſtood by the ſeal, all things in heaven are ſilent, and in horror through admiration, until commandment of execution be ſeverally given of God unto the miniſters of his wrath. So he paſſeth unto the third member, of which I ſpake before in chap. 6. verſe 1. which is of the execution of thoſe evils wherewith God moſt juſtly determined to afflict the world.

[2] Now followeth the third branch of the common hiſtory, as even now I ſaid: which is the execution of the judgments of God upon the world. This is firſt generally prepared unto the 6th verſe: then by ſeveral parts expounded according to the order of thoſe that adminiſtered the ſame, unto the end of the chapter following. Unto the preparation of this execution, are declared theſe things: firſt who are the adminiſters and inſtruments thereof in this verſe. Secondly, what is the work both of the prince and angels, giving order for this execution, thence unto the 5th verſe, and of his adminiſters in the 6th verſe. The adminiſters of the execution are ſaid to be ſeven angels: their inſtruments, trumpets, whereby they ſhould, as it were, ſound the alarm at the commandment of God. They are propounded ſeven in number, becauſe it pleaſed God not at once to pour out his wrath upon the rebellious world, but at divers times, and by piece-meal, and in ſlow order, and as with an unwilling mind to exerciſe his judgments upon his creatures, ſo long called upon both by word and figures, if happily they had learned to repent.

[a] Which appeareth before him as his miniſters.

[3] This is that great Emperor the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, our King and Saviour, who both maketh interceſſion to God the Father for the ſaints, filling the heavenly ſanctuary with moſt ſweet odour, and offering up their prayers, as the calves and burnt ſacrifices of their lips, in this verſe: in ſuch ſort as every one of them (ſo powerful is that ſweet ſavour of Chriſt, and the efficacy of his ſacrifice) are held in reconcilement with God, and themſelves made moſt acceptable unto him, verſe 4. And then alſo out of his treaſury, and from the ſame ſanctuary, poureth forth upon the world the fire of his wrath, adding alſo divine tokens thereunto and by that means (as of old the heralds of Rome were wont to do) he proclaimeth war againſt the rebellious world.

[b] Our prayers are nothing worth unleſs that true and ſweet ſavour of that only oblation be eſpecially and before all things with them, that is to ſay, unleſs we being firſt of all juſtified through faith in his Son, be acceptable unto him.

[4] This is the work of the adminiſters. The angels the adminiſters of Chriſt, only by ſounding trumpet and voice (for they are only as heralds) do effectually call forth the inſtruments of the wrath of God, through his power. Hitherto have been things general. Now followeth the narration of things particular, which the angels ſix in number wrought in their order, ſet out in the 19th verſe of the next chapter, and is concluded with the declaration of the event which followed upon theſe things done in the world's end, in the 10th and 11th chapters.

[5] The firſt execution at the ſound of the firſt angel, upon the earth, that is, the inhabitants of the earth (by metonymy) and upon all the fruits thereof: as the comparing of this verſe with the ſecond member of the 9th verſe doth not obſcurely declare.

[6] The ſecond execution upon the ſea, in this verſe; and all things that are therein, in the next verſe.

[7] The third execution upon the floods and fountains, that is, upon all freſh waters, in this verſe: the effect whereof is, that many are deſtroyed with the bitterneſs of waters, in the verſe following.

[8] This is ſpoken by a metaphor, of the name of a moſt bitter herb, and commonly known: unleſs perhaps a man following thoſe that note the derivation of words had rather expound it adjectively, for that which by reaſon of bitterneſs cannot be drank, or which maketh the liquor into which it is poured more bitter than that any man can drink the ſame.

[9] The fourth execution upon theſe lightſome bodies of heaven, which adminiſter unto this inferior world.

[10] A lamentable prediction or foretelling of thoſe parts of the divine execution which are yet behind, which alſo is a paſſage unto the argument of the next chapter. Of all theſe things in a manner, Chriſt himſelf expreſly foretold in the 21ſt chapter St. Luke, verſe 24, &c. and they are common plagues generally denounced, without particular note of time.

CHAP. IX.

1 The fifth angel bloweth his trumpet, 3 and ſpoiling locuſts come out. 13 The ſixth angel bloweth, 16 and bringeth forth horſemen, 20 to deſtroy mankind.

AND [1] the fifth angel blew the trumpet, and I ſaw [2] a ſtar fall from heaven unto the earth, [3] and to him was given the key of the [a] bottomleſs pit.

2 [4] And he opened the bottomleſs pit, and there aroſe the ſmoke of the pit, as the ſmoke of a great furnace, and the ſun and the air were darkened by the ſmoke of the pit.

3 [5] And there came out of the ſmoke locuſts upon the earth, and unto them was given power, as the ſcorpions of the earth have power.

4 [6] And it was commanded them that they ſhould not hurt the graſs of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree: but only thoſe men which have not the ſeal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them was commanded that they ſhould not kill them, but that they ſhould be vexed five months, and that their pain ſhould be as the pain that cometh of a ſcorpion, when he hath ſtung a man.

6 * Therefore in thoſe days ſhall men ſeek death, and ſhall not find it, and ſhall deſire to die, and death ſhall flee from them.

* Ch. 6. 16. Iſa. 2. 19. Hoſ. 10. 8.

7 [7] And the form of the locuſts was like unto horſes prepared unto battle, and on their heads were as it were crowns, like unto gold, and their faces were like the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had habergeons like unto habergeons of iron, and the ſound of their wings was like the ſound of chariots, when many horſes run unto battle.

10 And they had tails like unto ſcorpions, and there were ſtings in their tails, and their power was to hurt five months.

---

[1] The fifth execution upon the wicked men inhabiting the earth (as a little before the angel ſaid) wrought by the infernal powers, is declared in this place unto verſe 11. and after the ſixth execution thence unto verſe 19. And laſtly, is ſhewed the common event that followed the former execution in the world, in the two laſt verſes.

[2] That is, that the angel of God glittering with glory, as a ſtar fell down from heaven. Whether thou take him for Chriſt, who hath the keys of hell of himſelf, and by princely authority, chap. 1. verſe 18. or whether for ſome inferior angel, who hath the ſame key permitted unto him, and occupieth it miniſterially, or by office of his miniſtry here, and chap. 21. ſo the word, falling, is taken, Gen. 14. 10. and 24. 46. and Heb. 6. 6.

[3] The key was given to this ſtar. For thoſe powers of wickedneſs are thruſt down into hell, and bound with chains of darkneſs: and are there kept unto damnation, unleſs God for a time do let them looſe, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. and of this book, chap. 20. 21. the hiſtory of which chapters hath agreement of time with this preſent chapter.

[a] By the bottomleſs pit, he meaneth the deepeſt darkneſs of hell.

[4] Unto this is added, the ſmoke of the helliſh and infernal ſpirits, all dark, and darkening all things in heaven and in earth. The ſpiritual darkneſſes are the cauſes of all diſorder and confuſion. For the devil at a certain time (whereof verſe the fifth) ſent theſe darkneſſes into his kingdom, that he might at once and with one impreſſion overthrow all things, and pervert, if it were poſſible, the elect themſelves. By this darkneſs, all ſpiritual light, both active as of the ſun, and paſſive, as of the air which is lightened by the ſun, is taken away: and this is that which goeth before the ſpirits: it followeth of the ſpirits themſelves.

[5] A deſcription of the malignant ſpirits invading the world, taken from their nature, power, form, and order. From their nature, for that they are like unto certain locuſts, in quickneſs, ſubtilty, hurtfulneſs, number, and ſuch like, in this verſe. From their power, for that they are as the ſcorpions of the earth, of a ſecret force to do hurt: for our battle is not here with fleſh and blood, but with powers, &c. Epheſ. 6. 12. This place of the power of the devils generally noted in this verſe, is particularly declared afterwards in the three next verſes.

[6] Here that power of the devils is particularly deſcribed according to their actions and the effects of the ſame. Their actions are ſaid to be bounded by the counſel of God: both becauſe they hurt not all men, but only the reprobate (for the godly and elect, in whom there is any part of a better life, God guardeth by his decree) whom Chriſt ſhall not have ſealed in this verſe: and alſo becauſe they neither had all power, nor at all times, no not over thoſe that are their own, but limited in manner and time, by the preſcript of God, verſe 5. So their power to afflict the godly is none, and for the wicked it is limited in act and in effect by the will of God: for the manner was preſcribed unto them that they ſhould not ſlay, but torment the wretched world. The time is for five months, or for an hundred and fifty days, that is for ſo many years, in which the devils have indeed mightily perverted all things in the world: and yet without that public and unpuniſhed licence of killing, which afterwards they uſurped, when the ſixth angel had blown his trumpet, as ſhall be ſaid upon verſe 13. Now this ſpace is to be accounted from the end of that thouſand years mentioned chap. 20. 3. and that is from the popedom of that Gregory the VIIth. a moſt monſtrous necromancer, who before was called Hildebrandus Senenſis: for this man being made altogether of impiety and wickedneſs, as a ſlave of the devil, whom he ſerved, was the moſt wicked firebrand of the world: he excommunicated the emperor Henry the IVth. went about by all manner of treachery to ſet up and put down empires and kingdoms as liked himſelf, and doubted not to ſet Rodolph the Swede over the empire inſtead of Henry before named, ſending unto him a crown, with this verſe annexed unto it:

"Petra dedit Petro, Petrus diadema Rodolpho:"

That is,
The Rock to Peter gave the crown,
And Peter Rodolph doth renown.

Finally, he ſo finely beſtirred himſelf in his affairs, as he miſerably ſet all Chriſtendom on fire, and conveyed over unto his ſucceſſors the burning brand of the ſame: who, enraged with like ambition, never ceaſed to nouriſh that flame, and to enkindle it more and more: whereby cities, commonweals, and whole kingdoms, ſet together by the ears amongſt themſelves by moſt expert cut-throats, came to ruin, whilſt they miſerably wounded one another. This term of an hundred and fifty years, taketh end in the time of Gregory the IXth. or Hugolinus Anaguienſis, (as he was before called) who cauſed to be compiled by one Raymond his chaplain and confeſſor, the body of decretals, and by ſufferance of the kings and princes, to be publiſhed in the Chriſtian world, and eſtabliſhed for a law: for by this ſleight at length the popes arrogated unto themſelves licence to kill whom they would, whilſt others were unaware: and without fear eſtabliſhed a butchery out of many of the wicked canons of the decretals, which the trumpet of the fifth angel had expreſly forbidden, and had hindered until this time. The effects of theſe bloody actions are declared upon the ſixth verſe: that the miſerable world languiſhing in ſo great calamities, ſhould willingly run together unto death, and prefer the ſame before life, by reaſon of the grievouſneſs of the miſeries that oppreſſed them.

[7] The form of theſe helliſh ſpirits and adminiſters is ſhadowed out by ſigns and viſible figures in this ſort: that they are very expert and ſwift: that whereſoever they are in the world, the kingdom is theirs: that they manage all their affairs with cunning and ſkill in this verſe: that making ſhew of mildneſs and tender affection to draw on men withal, they moſt impudently rage in all miſchief: that they are moſt mighty to do hurt, verſe 8. that they are freed from being hurt of any man, as armed with the colour of religion and ſacred authority of privilege: that they fill all things with horror, verſe 9. that they are fraudulent: that they are venomous and extremely noiſome, though their power be limited, verſe 10. All which things are properly in the infernal powers, and communicated by them unto their miniſters and vaſſals.

11 [8] And they have a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomleſs pit, whoſe name in Hebrew is Abaddon, and in Greek he is named Apollyon, that is, deſtroying.

12 [9] One woe is paſt, and behold, yet two woes come after this,

13 ¶ [10] Then the ſixth angel blew the trumpet, [11] and I heard a voice from the [b] four horns of the golden altar, which is before God,

14 Saying to the ſixth angel, which had the trumpet, [12] Looſe the four angels, which are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 [13] And the four angels were looſed, which were prepared at an hour, at a day, at a month, and at a year, to ſlay the third part of men.

16 And the number of horſemen of war were twenty thouſand times ten thouſand: for I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I ſaw the horſes in a viſion, and them that ſat on them, having fiery habergeons, and of jacinth, and of brimſtone, and the heads of the horſes were as the heads of lions: and out of their mouths went forth fire, and ſmoke, and brimſtone.

18 Of theſe three was the third part of men killed, that is, of the fire, and of the ſmoke, and of the brimſtone, which came out of their mouths.

19 For their power is in their mouths, and in their tails: [14] for their tails were like unto ſerpents, and had heads wherewith they hurt.

20 [15] And the remnant of the men which were not killed by the plagues, repented not of the works of their hands, that they ſhould not worſhip devils, and * idols of gold, and of ſilver, and of braſs, and of ſtone, and of wood, which neither can ſee, neither hear nor go.

* Pſ. 115. 4. and 135. 15.

21 Alſo they repented not of their murder, and of their ſorcery, neither of their fornication, nor of their theft.

CHAP. X.

1 Another angel appeareth cloathed with a cloud, 2 holding a book, 3 and crieth out. 8 A voice from heaven commandeth John to take the book. 10 He eateth it.

AND [1] I ſaw [2] another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and the rainbow upon his head, and his face was as the ſun, and his feet as pillars of fire.

---

[8] The order of powers of maliciou neſs: that they are ſubject to one infernal king, whom thou mayeſt call in Engliſh, The Deſtroyer: who driveth the whole world both Jews and Gentiles into the deſtruction that belongeth unto himſelf. And I cannot tell whether this name have reſpect unto the etymological interpretation of Hildebrand, by a figure often uſed in the holy ſcripture; which albeit it may otherwiſe be turned of the Germans (as the ſenſe of compound words is commonly ambiguous) yet in very deed it ſignifieth as much as if thou ſhouldſt call him, The firebrand, that is, he that ſetteth on fire thoſe that be faithful unto him.

[9] A paſſage unto the next point and the hiſtory of the time following.

[10] The ſixth execution done upon the world by the tyrannical powers thereof, working in the four parts of the earth, that is, in moſt cruel manner executing their tyrannous dominion through the whole world: and killing the miſerable people without puniſhment, which before was not lawful for them to do in that ſort, as I ſhewed upon the fourth verſe. This narration hath two parts: a commandment from God, in the 14th verſe, and an execution of the commandment, in the verſe following.

[11] The commandment given by Chriſt himſelf, who is governor over all.

[b] He alludeth to the altar of incenſe, which ſtood in the court which the prieſts were in, over-againſt the ark of the covenant, having a vail betwixt them.

[12] As if he ſhould have ſaid, theſe hitherto have been ſo bound by the power of God, that they ſhould not freely run upon all men as themſelves luſted, but were ſtayed and reſtrained at that great flood of Euphrates, that is, in their ſpiritual Babylon (for this is a periphraſis of the ſpiritual Babylon, by the limits of the viſible Babylon long ſince overthrown) that they might not commit thoſe horrible ſlaughters, which they long breathed after. Now, go to, let looſe thoſe four angels, that is, adminiſters of the wrath of God, in that number that is convenient for the ſlaughtering of the four quarters of the world: ſtir them up, and give them the bridle, that, ruſhing out of that Babylon of theirs, which is the ſeat of the wicked ones, they may flee upon all the world: therein to rage, and moſt licentiouſly to practiſe their tyranny, as God hath ordained. This was done when Gregory the Ninth, by public authority, ſtabliſhed for law his own decretals, by which he might freely lay trains for the life of ſimple men. For who is it that ſeeth not that the laws decretal moſt of them are ſnares to catch ſouls withal? Since that time (O good God) how great ſlaughters have been! how great maſſacres! All hiſtories are full of them: and this our age aboundeth with moſt horrible and monſtrous examples of the ſame.

[13] The execution of the commandment is in two points: one, that thoſe butchers are let looſe, that out of their tower of the ſpiritual Babylon they might with fury run abroad through all the world, as well the chief of that crew which are moſt prompt unto all aſſays, in this verſe, as their multitudes both moſt copious, of which a number certain is named for a number infinite, verſe 16. and in themſelves by all means fully furniſhed to hide and to hurt, verſe 17. as being armed with fire, ſmoke, and brimſtone, as appeareth in the colour of this armour, which dazzleth the eyes of all men, and have the ſtrength of lions to hurt withal, from which (as out of their mouth) the fire, ſmoke, and ſtinking darts of the Pope, are ſhot out, verſe 18. The other point is, that theſe butchers have effected the commandment of God by fraud and violence, in the two verſes following.

[14] That is, they are harmful every way: on what part ſoever thou put thine hand unto them, or they touch thee, they do hurt. So the former are called ſcorpions, ver. 3.

[15] Now remaineth the event (as I ſaid upon the firſt verſe) which followed of ſo many and ſo grievous judgments in the moſt wicked world, namely, an impenitent confirmation of the ungodly in their impiety and unrighteouſneſs, though they feel themſelves moſt vehemently preſſed with the hand of God: for their obſtinate ungodlineſs is ſhewed in this verſe: and their unrighteouſneſs in the verſe following. Hitherto hath been the general hiſtory of things to be done univerſally in the whole world: which, becauſe it doth not ſo much belong to the church of Chriſt, is therefore not ſo expreſly diſtinguiſhed by certainty of time and other circumſtances, but is woven, as they ſay, with a ſlight hand. Alſo there is none other cauſe why the hiſtory of the ſeventh angel is paſſed over in this place, than for that the ſame more properly appertaineth unto the hiſtory of the church. But this is more diligently ſet out according to the time thereof, chap. 11 and 16. as ſhall appear upon thoſe places.

[1] Now Saint John paſſeth unto the other prophetical hiſtory, which is of the church of God, as I ſhewed, that this book ſhould be diſtinguiſhed, chapter 4, 1. This ſtory reacheth hence unto the two and twentieth chapter. And this whole chapter is but a tranſition from the common hiſtory of the world unto that which is particular of the church. There are in this tranſition or paſſage, two preparations, as it were, unto the church ſtory compriſed in this whole chapter. One is the authority of Chriſt, revealing his myſteries, and calling his ſervant, unto the 7th verſe. The other is Saint John's calling, proper unto this place, and repeated from before unto the end of this chapter. Authority is given unto this Revelation by theſe things: firſt, by the appearing from heaven in this habit and countenance, ſtrong, ready, glorious, ſurveying all things by his providence, and governing them by his omnipotence, verſe 1. Secondly, that he brought not by chance, but out of a book, this open Revelation, ſet forth unto the eye, to ſignify the ſame unto the ſea, and land, as the Lord over all, verſe 2. Thirdly, that he offered the ſame not whiſpering or muttering in a corner (as falſe prophets do) but crying out with a loud voice unto them which ſleep, and with a lioniſh and terrible noiſe rouſed up the ſecure: the very thunders themſelves giving teſtimony thereunto, verſe 3. Laſtly, for that he confirmed all by an oath, verſe 5, 6, 7.

[2] Chriſt Jeſus, ſee chapter 7. verſe 2.

2 And he had in his hand a [3] little book open, and he put his right foot upon the ſea, and his left on the earth.

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, ſeven thunders uttered their voices.

4 [4] And when the ſeven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: but I heard a voice from heaven, ſaying unto me, [a] Seal up thoſe things which the ſeven thunders have ſpoken, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I ſaw ſtand upon the ſea, and upon the earth, [b] lift up his hand to heaven,

6 And ſware by him that liveth for evermore, which created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the ſea, and the things that therein are, [5] that [c] time ſhould be no more.

7 But in the days of the [6] voices of the ſeventh angel, when he ſhall begin to blow the trumpet, even the myſtery of God ſhall be finiſhed, as he hath declared to his ſervants the prophets.

8 [7] And the voice which I heard from heaven, ſpake unto me again, and ſaid, Go, and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel, which ſtandeth upon the ſea and upon the earth.

9 So I went unto the angel, and ſaid unto him, Give me the little book. And he ſaid unto me, Take it, and eat it up, and it ſhall make thy belly bitter, but it ſhall be in thy mouth as ſweet as honey.

10 Then I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up, and it was in my my mouth as ſweet as honey: but when I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 [8] And he ſaid unto me, Thou muſt propheſy again among the people and nations, and tongues, and to many kings.

CHAP. XI.

1 The temple is commanded to be meaſured. 3 The Lord ſtirreth up two witneſſes, 7 whom the beaſt murdereth, 9 and no man burieth them. 11 God raiſeth them to life, 12 and calleth them up to heaven. 13 The wicked are terrified, 15 by the trumpet of the ſeventh angel: the reſurrection, 18 and judgment is deſcribed.

THEN [1] was given me a reed like unto a rod, and the angel ſtood by, ſaying, Riſe and [2] meet the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worſhip therein.

2 [3] But the [a] court which is without the temple,

[3] Namely, a ſpecial book of the affairs of God's church: For the book that containeth things belonging unto the whole world is ſaid to be kept with the Creator, chapter 5, verſe 1. but the book of the church with the Redeemer: and out of this book is taken the reſt of the hiſtory of this Apocalypſe.

[4] A godly care is laudable, but muſt be joined with knowledge. Therefore nothing is to be taken in hand but by calling, which muſt be expected and waited for of the godly.

[a] Keep them cloſe.

[b] This was a geſture uſed of one that ſweareth, which men do now-a-days uſe.

[5] Neither time itſelf, nor the things that are in time: but that the world to come is at hand, which is altogether of eternity, and beyond all times.

[c] There ſhall never be any more time.

[6] Whereof chap. 11. 15. and 16. 17.

[7] The other part of this chapter concerning the calling of Saint John to the receiving of the prophecy following, which is enjoined him, firſt by ſign, in three verſes, then in plain words in the laſt verſe. Unto the ſetting down of the ſign belong theſe things: That Saint John is taught from heaven to demand the book of the prophecy in this verſe, for theſe motions and deſires God doth inſpire, that demanding the book, he is charged to take it in a figurative manner, the uſe whereof is expounded verſe the ninth. (as in the ſecond chapter of Ezekiel, and the ninth verſe) whence this ſimilitude is borrowed: laſtly, for that Saint John, at the commandment of Chriſt, took the book, and found by experience that the ſame, as proceeding from Chriſt, was moſt ſweet, but in that he foretelleth the afflictions of the church, it was moſt bitter unto his ſpirit.

[8] A ſimple and plain declaration of the ſign beforegoing, witneſſing the divine calling of Saint John, and laying upon him the neceſſity thereof.

[1] The authority of the intended Revelation being declared, together with the neceſſity of that calling, which was particularly impoſed upon Saint John: hereafter followeth the hiſtory of the eſtate of Chriſt his church, both conflicting or warfaring, and overcoming in Chriſt. For both the true church of Chriſt is ſaid to fight againſt that which is falſely ſo called, over the which Antichriſt ruleth, Chriſt Jeſus overthrowing Antichriſt by the ſpirit of his mouth: and Chriſt is ſaid to overcome moſt glorioully until he ſhall ſlay the Antichriſt by the appearance of his coming, as the apoſtle excellently teacheth, 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. So this hiſtory hath two parts: one of the ſtate of the church conflicting with the temptations, unto the ſixteenth chapter, the other of the ſtate of the ſame church obtaining victory, thence unto the 20th chapter. The firſt part hath two members moſt conveniently diſtributed into their times, whereof the firſt containeth an hiſtory of the chriſtian church for 1260 years, what time the goſpel of Chriſt was as it were taken up from amongſt men into heaven: the ſecond containeth an hiſtory of the ſame church unto the victory perfected. And theſe two members are briefly, though diſtinctly, propounded in this chapter; but are both of them more at large diſcourſed after in due order. For we underſtand the ſtate of the church conflicting, out of chapters 12 and 13. and of the ſame growing out of afflictions, out of the 14th, 15th, and 16th chapters. Neither did Saint John at unawares join together the hiſtory of theſe two times in this chapter, becauſe here is ſpoken of prophecy, which all confeſs to be but one juſt and immutable in the church, and which Chriſt commanded to be continual. The hiſtory of the former time reacheth unto the 14th verſe: the latter is ſet down in the reſt of this chapter. In the former are ſhewed theſe things: the calling of the ſervants of God in four verſes: the conflicts which the faithful muſt undergo in their calling for Chriſt and his church, thence unto the tenth verſe: and their reſurrection, and receiving up into heaven, unto the fourteenth verſe. In the calling of the ſervants of God are mentioned two things: the begetting and ſettling of the church, in two verſes, and the education thereof, in two verſes. The begetting of the church is here commended unto Saint John by ſign and by ſpeech: the ſign is a meaſuring rod, and the ſpeech a commandment to meaſure the temple of God, that is, to reduce the ſame unto a new form: becauſe the Gentiles are already entered into the temple of Jeruſalem, and ſhall ſhortly defile and overthrow the ſame utterly.

[2] Either that of Jeruſalem, which was a figure of the church of Chriſt, or that heavenly exemplar, whereof verſe 19. but the firſt liketh me better, and the things following do all agree thereunto. The ſenſe thereof is, Thou ſeeſt all things in God's houſe, almoſt from the paſſion of Chriſt, to be diſordered: and that not only the city of Jeruſalem, but alſo the court of the temple, is trampled under foot of the nations, and of prophane men, whether Jews or ſtrangers: and that only the temple, that is, the body of the temple, with the altar, and a ſmall company of good men which truly worſhip God, do now remain, whom God doth ſanctify and confirm by his preſence. Meaſure therefore this, even this true church, or rather the true type of the true church, omitting the reſt, and ſo deſcribe all things from me, that the true church of Chriſt may be as it were a little center, and the church of Antichriſt as the circle of the center, every way in length and breadth compaſſing about the ſame, that by way of prophecy thou mayeſt ſo declare openly, that the ſtate of the temple of God, and the faithful which worſhip him, that is, of the church, is much more ſtraight than the church of Antichriſt.

[3] As if he ſhould ſay, It belongeth nothing unto thee, to judge thoſe which are without, 1 Corinth. 5. 12. which be innumerable: look unto thoſe of the houſhold only, or unto the houſe of the living God.

[a] He ſpeaketh of the outer court, which was called the people's court, becauſe all men might come into that.

A. D. 96. temple, [b] caſt out, and meet it not: for it is given unto the [4] Gentiles, and the holy city ſhall they tread under foot, [5] two and forty months.

3 But [6] I will give power unto my two witneſſes, and they ſhall [7] propheſy a thouſand two hundred and threeſcore days clothed in ſackcloth.

4 Theſe [8] are two olive trees, and two candleſticks, ſtanding before the God of the earth.

5 [9] And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouths, and devoureth their enemies: for if any man will hurt them, thus muſt he be killed.

6 Theſe have power to ſhut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their propheſying, and have power over waters to turn them into blood, to ſmite the earth with all manner of plagues, as often as they will.

A. D. 96. 7 [10] And when they have finiſhed their [c] teſtimony, [11] the beaſt that cometh out of the bottomleſs pit, ſhall make war againſt them, and ſhall [12] overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their corpſes ſhall lie in the [13] ſtreets of the great city, which [d] ſpiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, [14] where our Lord alſo was crucified

9 And they of the people, and kindreds, and tongues, and Gentiles ſhall, ſee their corpſes [15] three days and an half, and ſhall not ſuffer their carcaſes to be put in graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth, [16] ſhall rejoice over them and be glad, and ſhall ſend gifts one to another: for theſe two prophets [17] vexed them that dwelt on the earth.

---

[b] That is, counted to be caſt out, which in meaſuring is refuſed as prophane.

[4] To prophane perſons, wicked and unbelievers, adverſaries unto the church.

[5] Or a thouſand two hundred and threeſcore days, as is ſaid in the next verſe: that is, a thouſand two hundred and threeſcore years, a day for a year, as often in Ezek. and Daniel, which thing I noted before, 2. 10. The beginning of theſe thouſand two hundred and threeſcore years we account from the paſſion of Chriſt, whereby (the partition-wall being broken down) we were made of two, one, Epheſ. 2. 14. I ſay, one flock, under one ſhepherd, John 10. 16. and the end of theſe years preciſely falleth into the popedom of Boniface the eighth, who a little before the end of the year of Chriſt one thouſand two hundred ninety-four, entered the popedom of Rome, in the feaſt of Saint Lucia (as Bergomenſis ſaith) having put in priſon his predeceſſor Cœleſtinus, whom by fraud, under colour of oracle, he deceived: for which cauſe that was well ſaid of him, "Intravit ut vulpes, regnavit ut leo, mortuus eſt "ut canis." That is, "He entered like a fox, reigned "like a lion, and died like a dog." For if from a thouſand two hundred ninety four years thou ſhalt take the age of Chriſt which he lived on the earth, thou ſhalt find there remaineth juſt one thouſand two hundred and threeſcore years, which are mentioned in this place and many others.

[6] I had rather tranſlate it "illud" than "illam"; "the temple," than "the city:" for God ſaith, I will give that temple, and commit it unto my two witneſſes, that is, unto the miniſters of the word, who are few indeed, weak and contemptible: but yet two, that is, of ſuch a number as one of them may help another, and one confirm the teſtimony of another unto all men, that from the mouth of two or three witneſſes every word may be made good amongſt men, 2 Cor. 13. 1.

[7] They ſhall exerciſe their office enjoined by me, by the ſpace of thoſe thouſand two hundred and ſixty years, in the midſt of afflictions, though never ſo lamentable, which is figuratively ſhewed by the mourning garment.

[8] That is, the ordinary and perpetual inſtruments of ſpiritual grace, peace, and light in my church, which God by his only power preſerved in this temple. So Zechariah 4. 3.

[9] The power and efficacy of the holy miniſtry, and which is truly evangelical, is declared both in earth and in heaven, protecting the adminiſters thereof, and deſtroying the enemies, in this verſe, virtue indeed divine, moſt mightily ſhewing itſelf forth in heaven, earth, and the ſea, verſe 6, as it is deſcribed, 2 Corinthians, 10. 4. according to the promiſe of Chriſt, Mark 16. 17. And this is the ſecond place (as I ſaid before) of the combats which the ſervants of God muſt needs undergo in the executing of their calling, and of the things that follow the ſame combats. In the combats or conflicts are theſe things, to overcome, in theſe two verſes: to be overcome and killed, verſe 7. After the ſlaughter follow theſe things, that the carcaſes of the godly are laid abroad, verſe 8. being unburied, are made a matter of ſcorn, together of curſing and bitter execrations, verſe 9. and that therefore gratulations are publicly and privately made, verſe 10.

[10] That is, when they have ſpent thoſe thouſand two hundred and ſixty years, mentioned verſe 2 and 3. in publiſhing their teſtimony according to their office.

[c] When they have done their meſſage.

[11] Of which, after chap. 13, &c. that beaſt is the Roman empire, made long ago of civil, eccleſiaſtical: the chief head whereof was then Boniface the eighth, as I ſaid before: who lifted up himſelf in ſo great arrogance (ſaith the author of, Faſciculus temporum) that he called himſelf, Lord of the whole world, as well in temporary cauſes, as in ſpiritual: there is an extant of that matter, written by the ſame Boniface moſt arrogantly, ſhall I ſay or moſt wickedly; "Cap. unam ſancta, extra de majoritate & obedientia." And in the ſixth of the decretals (which is from the ſame author) many things are found of the ſame argument.

[12] He ſhall perſecute moſt cruelly the holy men, and put them to death, and ſhall wound and pierce through with curſings both their names and writings. And that this was done to very many godly men, by Boniface, and others, the hiſtories do declare, eſpecially, ſince the time that the odious and condemned name amongſt the multitude, firſt, of the brethren Waldenſes or Lugdunenſes, then alſo of the Fratricles, was pretended, that good men might with more approbation be maſſacred.

[13] That is, openly at Rome, where at that time was a moſt great concourſe of people, the year of Jubilee being then firſt ordained by Bonifiace unto the ſame end, in the year of Chriſt 1300. example whereof is read, chap. 1. "Extra, de pœnitentiis & remiſſionibus." So by one act he committed double injury againſt Chriſt, both aboliſhing his truth by the reſtoring of the type of the Jubilee, and triumphing over his members by moſt wicked ſuperſtition. O religious heart! Now, that we ſhould underſtand the things of Rome, Saint John himſelf is the author, both after in the 17th chapter, almoſt throughout, and alſo in the circumſcription, now next following, when he ſaith, it is that great city (as chap. 17, 18. he calleth it) and is ſpiritually termed Sodom and Egypt: and that ſpiritually (for that muſt here again be repeated from before) Chriſt was there crucified. For the two firſt appellations ſignify ſpiritual wickedneſs: the latter ſignifieth the ſhew and pretence of good, that is, of chriſtian and ſound religion. Sodom ſignifieth moſt licentious impiety and injuſtice. Egypt, moſt cruel perſecution of the people of God: and Jeruſalem ſignifieth the moſt confident glorying of that city, as it were in true religion, being yet full of falſhood and ungodlineſs. Now who is ignorant that theſe things do rather and more agree unto Rome than any other city. The commendations of the city of Rome, for many years paſt, are publicly notorious, which are not for me to gather together. This only I will ſay, that he long ſince did very well ſee what Rome is, who taking his leave thereof, uſed theſe verſes:

"Roma, vale, vidi, ſatis eſt vidiſſe: revertar,
"Quum leno, meretrix, ſcurra, cinœdus ero."

Now farewel, Rome, I have thee ſeen, it was enough to ſee.
I will return when as I mean, bawd, harlot, knave to be.

[d] After a more ſecret kind of meaning and underſtanding.

[14] Namely, in his members, as alſo he ſaid unto Saul, Acts 9. 5.

[15] That is, for three years and a half: for ſo many years Boniface lived after his Jubilee, as Bergomenſis witneſſeth.

[16] So much the more ſhall they by this occaſion exerciſe the jollity of their Jubilee.

[17] The goſpel of Chriſt is the affliction of the world, and the miniſtry thereof a favour of death unto death to thoſe that periſh, 1 Cor. 2. 16.

A. D. 96.

11 [18] But after [19] three days and an half, [20] the ſpirit of life coming from God, ſhall enter into them, and they [21] ſhall ſtand up upon their feet: and great fear ſhall come upon them which ſaw them.

12 And they ſhall hear a great voice from heaven, ſaying unto them, [22] Come up hither. And they ſhall aſcend up to heaven in a cloud, [23] and their enemies ſhall ſee them.

13 [24] And the ſame hour ſhall there be a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city ſhall fall, and in the earthquake ſhall be ſlain in number ſeven thouſand: and the remnant were ſore feared, [25] and [e] gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 [26] The ſecond woe is paſt, and behold, the third woe will come anon.

15 [27] And the ſeventh angel blew the trumpet, and there were great voices in heaven, ſaying, [28] The kingdoms of the world are our Lord's, and his Chriſt's, and he ſhall reign for evermore.

16 [29] Then the four and twenty elders, which ſat before God on their ſeats, fell upon their faces, and worſhipped God,

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, Lord God Almighty, which art, and which waſt, and which art to come: for thou haſt received thy great might, and haſt obtained thy kingdom.

18 [30] And the Gentiles were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they ſhould be judged, and that thou ſhouldeſt give reward unto thy ſervants the prophets, and to the ſaints, and to them that fear thy name, to ſmall and great, and ſhouldeſt deſtroy them which deſtroy the earth.

19 Then the temple of God was [31] opened in heaven, and there was ſeen in his temple the ark of his covenant: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and earthquake, and much hail.

CHAP. XII.

1 A woman 2 appeareth travailing with child, 4 whoſe child the dragon would devour, 7 but Michael overcometh him, 9 and caſteth him out, 13 and the more he is caſt down and vanquiſhed, the more fiercely he exerciſeth his ſubtilties.

AND there appeared a great wonder in heaven: [2] a woman clothed with the ſun, and

---

[18] The third place, as I noted before, is of the riſing again of the prophets from the dead, and their carrying up into heaven. For their reſurrection is ſhewed in this verſe: their calling and lifting up into heaven, in the verſe following.

[19] That is, what time God ſhall deſtroy that wicked Boniface.

[20] That is, the prophets of God ſhall in a ſort riſe again, not the ſame in perſon (as they ſay) but in ſpirit: that is, in the power and efficacy of their miniſtry, which St. John expreſſed before, verſes 5 and 6. And ſo the prophecy that is ſpoken of Elias, is interpreted by the angel to be underſtood of John the Baptiſt, Luke 1. 17. For the ſame Boniface himſelf, who ſought to kill and deſtroy them, was by the fire of God's mouth (which the holy miniſtry ſheweth and exhibiteth) devoured and died miſerably in priſon, by the endeavour of Sarra Columnenſis, and Nogaretus a French knight, whom Philip the fair, king of France, ſent into Italy, but with a very ſmall power.

[21] That is, the moſt grievous heat of afflictions and perſecution, ſhall ſtay for a while, for the great amaze that ſhall ariſe upon that ſudden and unlooked-for judgment of God.

[22] They were called by God into heaven, and taken out of this malignant world, into the heavenly church, which alſo lieth hidden here in the earth, to exerciſe their calling ſecretly: as of whom this wretched world was unworthy, Heb. 11. 38. For the church of the wicked is by compariſon called the earth, or the world: and the church of the godly, heaven: So in ancient times amongſt the godly Iſraelites ſo amongſt the Jews, in the days of Manaſſes and other kings, when the earth refuſed the heirs of heaven: we read that they lay hidden as heaven in the earth.

[23] Yet could they not hinder the ſecret ones of the Lord (as the Pſalmiſt called them, Pſalm 83. 4.) but they that went on forward in his work.

[24] Bergomenſis ſaith, in the year of our Lord, 1201, this year a blazing ſtar foretelling great calamity to come, appeared in heaven: in which year, upon the feaſt of St. Andrew, ſo great an earthquake aroſe, as never before: which alſo continuing by times, for many days, overthrew many ſtately houſes. This ſaith he of the year next following the Jubilee: which St. John ſo many ages before expreſſed word for word.

[25] They were indeed broken with preſent aſtoniſhment of mind, but did not earneſtly repent as they ought to have done.

[e] Glorified God by confeſſing his name.

[26] He paſſeth unto the ſecond hiſtory, which is the ſecond part of this chapter. St. John calleth theſe the ſecond and third woe, having reſpect unto Chap. 9. 12.

[27] Of whoſe ſounding the trumpet, Chriſt expreſly foretold, chap. 10. 7. and this is the ſecond part of this chapter, containing a general hiſtory of the Chriſtian church, from the time of Boniface VIII. unto the conſummation of the victory declared by voice from heaven. In this hiſtory there are three branches, a preparation by the ſound of the angel's trumpet: a narration by the voices of heavenly angels and elders, and a confirmation by ſign.

[28] The narration hath two parts: an acclamation of the heavenly creatures in this verſe, and both an adoration by all the elders, verſe 16. and alſo a moſt ample thankſgiving, verſe 17, 18. The ſenſe of the acclamation is: Now the Lord is entered on his kingdom, and hath reſtored his church, in which, moſt mightily recovered from the prophanation of the Gentiles, he may glorify himſelf. Namely, that which the Lord ordained, when firſt he ordained his church, that the faith of the ſaints doth now behold as accompliſhed.

[29] As before, 7. 11. This giving of thanks is altogether of the ſame content with the words going before.

[30] A ſpeech of the Hebrew language, as much to ſay, as Gentiles being angry, thine inflamed wrath came upon them, and ſhewed itſelf from heaven, occaſioned by their anger and fury.

[31] This is the confirmation of the next prophecy beforegoing, by ſigns exhibited in heaven, and that of two ſorts, whereof ſome are viſible, as the paſſing away of the heaven, the opening of the temple, the ark of the covenant appearing in the temple, and teſtifying the glorious preſence of God, and the lightnings: others apprehended by ear and ſuch dull ſenſe, which bear witneſs in heaven and earth to the truth of the judgments of God.

[1] Hitherto hath been the general prophecy, comprehended in two parts, as I ſhewed upon chap. 11. Now ſhall be declared the firſt part of this prophecy, in this and the next chapter, and the latter part in the 14th, 15th, and 16th chapter. Unto the firſt part, which is of the conflicting or militant church, belong two things. The beginning and the progreſs of the ſame in conflicts and Chriſtian combats. Of which two, the beginning or upſpring of the church is deſcribed in this chapter, and the progreſs thereof in the chapter following. The beginning of the Chriſtian church we define to be from the firſt moment of the conception of Chriſt, until that time wherein this church was as it were weaned and taken away from the breaſt or milk of her mother: which is the time when the church of the Jews with their city and temple was overthrown by the judgment of God. So we have in this chapter the ſtory of 69 years and upwards. The parts of this chapter are three. The firſt, is the hiſtory of the conception and bearing in womb, in four verſes. The ſecond, an hiſtory of the birth, from the 5th verſe unto the 12th. The third is of the woman that had brought forth, unto the end of the chapter. And theſe ſeveral parts have every one their conflicts. Therefore in that firſt part are two things contained, one, the conception and bearing in womb, in two verſes: and another of the laying in wait of the dragon againſt that ſhould be brought forth, in the next two verſes. In the firſt point are theſe things, the deſcription of the mother, verſe 1. and the dolors of childbirth, verſe 2. all ſhewed unto John from heaven.

[2] A type of the true holy church which then was in the nation of the Jews. This church (as is the ſtate of the holy church catholic) did in itſelf ſhine about with glory given of God, trod under feet mutability and changeableneſs, and poſſeſſed the kingdom of heaven as the heir thereof.

A. D. 96. and the moon was under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve ſtars.

2 And [3] ſhe was with child, and cried travailing in birth, and was pained ready to be delivered

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven: [4] for behold a great red dragon having [5] ſeven heads, and ten [6] horns, and ſeven crowns upon his heads:

4 [7] And his tail drew the third part of the ſtars of heaven, and caſt them to the earth. And the dragon [8] ſtood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, [9] to devour her child, when ſhe had brought it forth.

5 [10] So ſhe brought forth a man [11] child, which ſhould rule all nations with a rod of iron, and that her child was taken up unto God and to his throne.

6 [12] And the woman fled into the wilderneſs, where ſhe hath a place prepared of God, that [13] they ſhould feed her there a thouſand two hundred and threeſcore days.

7 And there was a battle in heaven, [14] Michael and his angels fought againſt the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels.

8 [15] But they prevailed not, neither was their [a] place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon, that old ſerpent, called the devil and Satan, was caſt out, which deceiveth all the world: he was even caſt in to the earth, and his angels were caſt out with him. A. D. 96.

10 Then I heard a loud voice in heaven, ſaying, [16] Now is ſalvation, and ſtrength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Chriſt: for the accuſer of our brethren is caſt down, which accuſed them before our God day and night.

11 But they overcame him by that blood of the lamb, and by that word of their teſtimony, and they [b] loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth, and of the ſea: for the devil is come down unto you, which hath great wrath, knowing that he had but a ſhort time.

13 And when [17] the dragon ſaw that he was caſt unto the earth, he perſecuted the woman which had brought forth the man child.

14 [18] But to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that ſhe might fly into the wilderneſs, into her [c] place, where ſhe is nouriſhed for a [19] time, and times, and half a time, from the preſence of the ſerpent.

---

[3] For this is that barren woman that brought not forth, of the which Iſaiah 45. 1. and Gal. 4. 27. ſhe cried out for good cauſe, and was tormented at that time, when in the judgment of all ſhe ſeemed near unto death, and in a manner ready to give up the ghoſt, by reaſon of her weakneſs and poverty.

[4] That is, the devil or Satan (as is declared verſe 9.) mighty angry, and full of wrath.

[5] Thereby to withſtand thoſe ſeven churches ſpoken of, that is, the catholic church, and that with kingly furniture and tyrannical magnificence: ſignified by the crowns ſet upon his heads, as if the ſame without controverſy belonged unto him by the proper right: as alſo he boaſted unto Chriſt, Matt. 4. 9 See after upon chap. 13. 1.

[6] More than are the horns of the lamb, or than the churches are: ſo well furniſhed doth the tyrant brag himſelf to be unto all manner of miſchief.

[7] After the deſcription of Satan followeth this action, that is, his battle offered unto the church, partly to that which is viſible, wherein the wheat is mingled with the chaff. and the good fiſh with that which is evil; a good part thereof, though in appearance it ſhined as the ſtars ſhine in heaven, he is ſaid to be thruſt down out of heaven, and to pervert: for if it were poſſible he would pervert even the elect, Matt. 24. 24. and partly, to the elect members of the holy catholic church, in the ſecond part of this verſe. Many therefore of the members of this viſible church, ſaith Saint John, he overthrew, and triumphed upon them.

[8] He withſtood that elect church of the Jews, which was now ready to bring forth the Chriſtian church, and watched for that ſhe ſhould bring forth. For the whole church and whole body is compared unto a woman: and a part of the church unto that which is brought forth, as we have noted at large upon Cant. 7. 6.

[9] Chriſt myſtical (as they call him) that is, the whole church, conſiſteth of the perſon of Chriſt as the head, and of the body united thereunto by the Spirit, ſo is the name of Chriſt taken, 1 Cor. 12. 12.

[10] The ſecond hiſtory of this church delivered of a child: in which firſt the conſideration of the child born, and of the mother, is deſcribed in two verſes: ſecondly, the battle of the dragon againſt the young child, and the victory obtained againſt him in three verſes following: laſt of all is ſung a ſong of victory, unto the twelfth verſe. Now Saint John, in conſideration of the child born, noteth two things: for he deſcribeth him, and his ſtation or place in this verſe.

[11] That is Chriſt the head of the church joined with his church (the beginning root and foundation whereof is the ſame Chriſt) endowed with kingly power, and taken up into heaven out of the jaws of Satan (who as a ſerpent did bite him upon the croſs) that, ſitting upon the celeſtial throne, he might reign over all.

[12] The church of Chriſt which was of the Jews, after his aſſumption into heaven, hid itſelf in the world as in a wilderneſs, truſting in the only defence of God, as witneſſeth Saint Luke in the Acts of the Apoſtles.

[13] Namely, the apoſtles and ſervants of God ordained to feed with the word of life the church collected both of the Jews and Gentiles, unleſs that any man will take the word "alerent" imperſonally, after the uſe of the Hebrews, inſtead of "aleretur:" but I like the firſt better. For he hath reſpect unto thoſe two prophets, of whom, chap. 11. 3. As for the meaning of the 1260 days, look the ſame place.

[14] Chriſt is the prince of angels, and the head of the church, who beareth that iron rod, verſe 5. See the notes upon Daniel, chapter 12. 1. In this verſe a deſcription of the battle, and of the victory in the two verſes following. The Pſalmiſt had reſpect unto this battle, Pſalm 68. 19. and Paul, Eph. 4. 8. and Col, 2. 15.

[15] The deſcription of the victory, by denying of one thing in this verſe, and by affirming the contrary in the next verſe. As that Satan gained nothing in heaven, but was by the power of God thrown down into the world whereof he is the prince, Chriſt himſelf and his elect members ſtanding ſtill by the throne of God.

[a] They were caſt out ſo, that they were never ſeen any more in heaven.

[16] The ſong of victory or triumph, containing, firſt, a propoſition of the glory of God, and of Chriſt, ſhewed in that victory. Secondly, it containeth a reaſon of the ſame propoſition, taken from the effects, as that the enemy is overcome in battle, in this verſe, and that the godly are made conquerors (and more than conquerors, Rom. 8. 37.) verſe 11. Thirdly, a concluſion, wherein is an exhortation unto the angels, and to the ſaints: and unto the world a prophecy of great miſery, and of deſtruction, procured by the devil againſt mankind, leſt himſelf ſhould ſhortly be miſerable alone, verſe 12.

[b] He is ſaid, in the Hebrew tongue, to love his life, that eſteemeth nothing more precious than his life: and on the other ſide, he is ſaid not to love his life, who doubteth not to hazard it, whereſoever need requireth.

[17] The third part: an hiſtory of the woman delivered; conſiſting of two members, the preſent battle of Satan againſt the church of the Jewiſh nation, in four verſes: and the battle intended againſt the ſeed thereof, that is, againſt the church of the Gentiles, which is called holy, by reaſon of the goſpel of Chriſt, in the two laſt verſes.

[18] That is, being ſtrengthened with divine power: and taught by oracle, ſhe fled ſwiftly from the aſſault of the devil, and from the common deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and went into a ſolitary city beyond Jordan, called Pella, as Euſebius telleth in the fifth chapter of the third book of his eccleſiaſtical hiſtory: which place God had commanded her by revelation.

[c] Into that place which God had appointed for her.

[19] That is, for three years and an half: ſo the ſame ſpeech is taken, Dan. 7. 25. This ſpace of time is reckoned in manner from that laſt and moſt grievous rebellion of the Jews, unto the deſtruction of the city and temple,

15 [20] And the ſerpent caſt out of his mouth water after the woman, like a flood, that he might cauſe her to be carried away of the flood.

16 [21] But the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and ſwallowed up the flood which the dragon had caſt out of his mouth.

17 [22] Then the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went and made war with the remnant of her ſeed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the teſtamony of Jeſus Chriſt.

18 [23] And I ſtood on the ſea ſand.

CHAP. XIII.

1 The beaſt with many heads is deſcribed, 12 which draweth the moſt part of the world to idolatry. 13 The other beaſt riſing out of the earth, 15 giveth power unto him.

AND [1] I ſaw a beaſt riſe [2] out of the ſea, having ſeven heads and [3] ten horns, and upon his horns were ten crowns, and [4] upon his head [5] the name of blaſphemy.

2 And the beaſt which I ſaw was [6] like a leopard, and his feet like a bear's, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: [7] and the dragon gave him his power and his throne, and great authority.

3 [8] And I ſaw one of his heads as it were wounded to death, but his deadly wound was healed, and all the world wondered and followed the beaſt.

for their defection or falling away, began in the twelfth year of Nero, before the beginning whereof many foreſigns and predictions were ſhewed from heaven, as Joſephus writeth, lib. 7. cap. 12. and Hegeſippus, lib. 5. cap. 44. amongſt which this is very memorable, that in the feaſt of Pentecoſt not only a great ſound and noiſe was heard in the temple, but alſo a great voice was heard of many out of the ſanctuary, which cried out unto all, Let us depart hence. Now three years and a half after this defection was begun of the Jews, and thoſe wonders happened, the city was taken by force, the temple overthrown, and the place forſaken of God: and this compaſs of time St. John noted in this place.

[20] That is, he inflamed the Romans and nations, that they perſecuting the Jewiſh people with cruel arms, might by the ſame occaſion invade the church of Chriſt, now departed from Jeruſalem, and out of Judea. For it is an uſual thing in ſcripture, that the raging tumults of the nations ſhould be compared unto waters.

[21] That is, there was offered in their place other Jews, unto the Romans and nations raging againſt that people; and it came to paſs thereby, that the church of God was ſaved whole from that violence, that moſt raging flood of perſecution, which the dragon vomited out, being altogether ſpent in the deſtruction of thoſe other Jews.

[22] Being ſet on fire by this means, he began to be more mad, and becauſe he perceived that his purpoſe againſt the Chriſtian church of the Jews remnant was come to nought, he reſolved to fall upon her ſeed, that is, the church gathered alſo by God of the Gentiles, and the holy members of the ſame. And this is that other branch, as I ſaid upon the thirteenth verſe, in which the purpoſe of Satan is ſhewed, verſe 17. and his attempt, verſe 18.

[23] That is, a moſt mighty tempeſt that he ruſhed upon the whole world (whoſe prince he is) to raiſe the floods, and provoke the nations, that they might with their furious billows toſs up and down, drive here and there, and finally deſtroy the church of Chriſt, with the holy members of the ſame. But the providence of God reſiſted his attempts, that he might favour the church of the Gentiles, yet tender, and as it were green. The reſt of this ſtory of the dragon is excellently proſecuted by Saint John hereafter in the 20th chapter. For here the dragon endeavouring to do miſchief, was by God caſt into priſon.

[1] The apoſtle having declared the ſpringing up of the Chriſtian church, and the eſtate of the church from which ours taketh her beginning, doth now paſs unto the ſtory of the progreſs thereof, as I ſhewed in the entrance of the former chapter. And this hiſtory of the progreſs of the church, and the battles thereof, is ſet down in this chapter, but diſtinctly in two parts, one is of the civil Roman empire, unto verſe 10. another of the body eccleſiaſtical or prophetical, thence unto the end of the chapter. In the former part are ſhewed theſe things: Firſt, the ſtate of that empire, in four verſes: then the acts thereof, in three verſes: after the effect, which is exceeding great glory, verſe 8. And laſt of all is commended the uſe, and the inſtruction of the godly againſt the evils that ſhall come from the ſame, verſe 9, 10. The hiſtory of the ſtate containeth a moſt ample deſcription of the beaſt, firſt intire, verſe 1, 2. and then reſtored after hurt, verſe 3, 4.

[2] On the ſand whereon ſtood the devil, practiſing new tempeſts againſt the church, in the verſe next beforegoing: what time the empire of Rome was indangered by domeſtical diſſenſions, and was mightily toſſed, having ever and anon new heads and new emperors. See in the 17th chapter, and verſe 8.

[3] Having the ſame inſtruments of power, providence, and moſt expert government, which the dragon is ſaid to have had in the 12th chapter, and the 3d verſe.

[4] We read in the twelfth chapter, and third verſe, that the dragon had ſeven crowns ſet upon ſeven heads, becauſe the thief avoucheth himſelf to be proper Lord and Prince of the world, but this beaſt is ſaid to have ten crowns ſet upon ſeveral, not heads, but horns: becauſe the beaſt is beholden for all unto the dragon, verſe 2. and doth not otherwiſe reign than by law of ſubjection given by him, namely, that he employ his horns againſt the church of God. The ſpeech is taken from the ancient cuſtom and form of dealing in ſuch caſe: by which they that were abſolute kings, did wear the diadem upon their heads: but their vaſſals, and ſuch as reigned by grace from them, wore the ſame upon their hoods: for ſo they might commodiouſly lay down their diadems, when they came into the preſence of their ſovereigns: as alſo the elders are ſaid when they adored God which ſat upon the throne, to have caſt down their crowns before him, chap. 4 ver. 10.

[5] Contrary to that which God of old commanded ſhould be written in the head-piece of the high prieſt, that is, "Sanctitas Jehovæ," "Holineſs unto the Lord." The name of blaſphemy impoſed by the dragon, is, (as I think) that which Saint Paul ſaith in the ſecond chapter of his ſecond Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, the fourth verſe: "He ſitteth as God, and boaſteth himſelf to be God." For this name of blaſphemy both the Roman emperors did then challenge unto themſelves, as Suetonius and Dion do report of Caligula and Domitian: and after them the Popes of Rome did with full mouth profeſs the ſame of themſelves, when they challenged unto themſelves ſovereignty in holy things: of which kind of ſayings the ſixth book of the Decretals, the Clementines, and the Extravagants, are very full. For theſe men were not content with that which Anglicus wrote in his Poetria, (the beginning whereof is, "Papa ſtupor mundi," "The Pope is the wonder of the world.)" "Nec Deus es, nec homo, ſed neuter es inter utrumque:" "Thou art not God, nor art thou man, but neuter mixt of both:" as the gloſs witneſſeth upon the ſixth book: But they were bold to take to themſelves the very name of God: and to accept it given of others: according as almoſt an hundred and twenty years ſince, there was made for Sixtus the fourth, when he ſhould firſt enter into Rome in his dignity papal, a pageant of triumph, and cunningly fixed upon the gate of the city he ſhould enter at, having written upon it this blaſphemous verſe:

"Oraculo vocis mundi moderaris habenas,
"Et meritò in terris crederis eſſe Deus."

That is,

By oracle of thine own voice, the worldthou govern'ſt all;
And worthily a God on earth men think and do thee call.

Theſe and ſix hundred the like, who can impute unto that modeſty whereby good men of old would have themſelves called the ſervants of the ſervants of God? Verily either this is a name of blaſphemy, or there is none at all.

[6] Swift as the leopard; eaſily claſping all things, as the bear doth with his foot; and tearing and devouring all things with the mouth, as doth the lion.

[7] That is, he lent the ſame unto the beaſt to uſe, when he perceived that himſelf could not eſcape, but muſt needs be taken by the hand of the angel, and caſt into the bottomleſs pit, chapter 20. yet did not he abandon the ſame utterly from himſelf, but that he might uſe it as long as he could.

[8] This is the other place that appertaineth to the deſcription of the beaſt of Rome: that, beſides that natural dignity,

4 And they worſhipped the dragon which gave the power unto the beaſt: and they worſhipped the beaſt, ſaying, Who is like unto the beaſt! who is able to war with him!

5 [9] And there was given unto him a mouth, that ſpake great things and blaſphemies, and power was given unto him, [10] to do two and forty months.

6 And he opened his mouth unto blaſphemy againſt God, to blaſpheme his name, [11] and his tabernacle, [12] and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given to him to make war with the ſaints, and to overcome them, and power was given him over every kindred, and tongue, and nation.

8 Therefore all that dwell upon the earth, ſhall worſhip him, [13] whoſe names are not written in the book of life of that Lamb which was ſlain from the beginning of the world.

9 [14] If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 If any lead into captivity, he ſhall go into captivity: * if any kill with a ſword, he muſt be killed by a ſword: here is the patience and the faith of the ſaints.

* Gen. 9. 6. Matt. 26. 52.

11 [15] And I beheld another beaſt coming up out of the earth, [16] which had two horns like the lamb, but he ſpake like the dragon.

12 [17] And he did all that the firſt beaſt could do before him, and he cauſed the earth, and them which dwell therein, [18] to worſhip the firſt beaſt, whoſe deadly wound was healed.

13 [19] And he did great wonders, ſo that he made dignity, and amplitude of the Roman empire, which was ſhadowed in the two former verſes, there was added this alſo as miraculous, that one head was wounded, as it were, unto death, and was healed again, as from heaven, in the ſight of all men. This head was Nero the emperor, in whom the race of the Cæſars fell from the imperial dignity, and the government of the commonwealth was tranſlated unto others: in whoſe hands the empire was ſo cured, and recovered unto health, as it ſeemed unto all ſo much the more deeply rooted and grounded faſt than ever before. And hence followed thoſe effects which are next ſpoken of: Firſt, an admiration of certain power, as it were ſacred and divine, ſuſtaining the empire, and governing it: Secondly, the obedience and ſubmiſſion of the whole earth, in this verſe: Thirdly, the adoration of the dragon, and moſt wicked worſhipping of devils, confirmed by the Roman emperors: Laſtly, the adoration of the beaſt himſelf, which grew into ſo great eſtimation, as that both the name and worſhip of a god was given unto him, verſe the fourth Now there were two cauſes which brought in the minds of men this religion: the ſhew of excellency, which bringeth with it reverence: and the ſhew of power invincible, which bringeth fear. Who is like (ſay they) unto the beaſt! Who ſhall be able to fight with him!

[9] The ſecond member, containing an hiſtory of the acts of the beaſt, as I ſaid verſe 1. The hiſtory of them is concluded in two points: the beginning, and the manner of them. The beginning is the gift of the dragon, who put and inſpired into the beaſt both his impiety againſt God, and his immanity and injuſtice againſt all men, eſpecially againſt the godly, and thoſe that were of the houſhold of faith, verſe the fifth. The manner of the acts or actions done, is of two ſorts, both impious in mind, and blaſphemous in ſpeech againſt God, his church, and the godly, verſe the ſixth: and alſo moſt cruel and injurious in deeds even ſuch as were done of moſt raging enemies, and of moſt inſolent and proud conquerors, verſe the 7th.

[10] Namely, his actions, and manner of dealing. As concerning thoſe two and forty months, I have ſpoken of them before in the twelfth chapter, and ſecond verſe.

[11] That is, the holy church, the true houſe of the living God.

[12] That is, the godly, in ſeveral, who hid themſelves from his cruelty. For this bloody beaſt ſurcharged thoſe holy ſouls moſt falſly with thoſe innumerable accuſations for the name of Chriſt, as we read in Juſtin Martyr, Tertullian, Arnobius, Minutius, Euſebius, Auguſtine, and others: which examples the latter times followed moſt diligently, in deſtroying the flock of Chriſt: and we in our own memory have found by experience, to our incredible grief. Concerning heaven, ſee in the eleventh chapter, and in the twelfth verſe.

[13] That is, ſuch as are not from everlaſting elected in Chriſt Jeſus. For this is that Lamb ſlain, of which chapter the fifth, verſe the ſixth. Theſe words I do, with Aretas, diſtinguiſh in this manner: "Whoſe names are not written from the laying of the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the Lamb ſlain." And this diſtinction is confirmed by a like place hereafter, chapter 17. 8.

[14] The concluſion of this ſpeech of the firſt beaſt, conſiſting of two parts. An exhortation to attentive audience, in this verſe: and a foretelling, which partly containeth threatenings againſt the wicked, and partly comforts for thoſe which in patience and faith ſhall wait for that glorious coming of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, verſe the tenth.

[15] The ſecond member of the viſion, concerning the eccleſiaſtical dominion, which in Rome ſucceeded that which was politic, and is in the power of the corporation of falſe prophets, and of the forgers of falſe doctrine. Wherefore the ſame beaſt, and the ſame body or corporation, is called by Saint John by the name of falſe prophet, chapter 16. verſe 13 and 19. verſe 20. The form of this beaſt is firſt deſcribed in this verſe, then his acts in the verſes following: and the whole ſpeech is concluded in the laſt verſe. This beaſt is by his breed a ſon of the earth (as they ſay) obſcurely born, and by little and little creeping up out of his abject ſtate.

[16] That is, in ſhew he reſembled the Lamb (for what is more mild or more humble than to be the ſervant of the ſervants of God?) but indeed he played the part of the the dragon, and of the wolf, Matt. 7. 15. For even Satan changeth himſelf into an angel of light, 2 Cor. 11. 14. and what ſhould his honeſt diſciples and ſervants do?

[17] The hiſtory of the acts of this beaſt containeth in ſum three things, hypocriſy, the witneſs of miracles, and tyranny: of which the firſt is noted in this verſe, the ſecond in the three verſes following, the third in the ſixteenth and ſeventeenth verſes. His hypocriſy is moſt full of leaſing, whereby he abuſeth both the former beaſt and the whole world: in that albeit he hath by his cunning, and as it were by lime, made of the former beaſt a moſt miſerable ſkeleton, or anatomy, uſurped all his authority unto himſelf, and moſt impudently exerciſeth the ſame in the ſight and view of him: yet he carrieth himſelf ſo, as if he honoured him with moſt high honour, and did in very good truth cauſe him to be reverenced of all men.

[18] For unto this beaſt of Rome, which of a civil empire is made an eccleſiaſtical hierarchy, are given divine honours, and divine authority ſo far, as he is believed to be above the ſcriptures, which the glôſs upon the decretals declareth by this deviliſh verſe:

"Articulos ſolvit, ſynodumque facit generalem."

That is,

He changeth the articles of Faith, and giveth authority to general councils.

Which is ſpoken of the Papal power. So the beaſt is by birth, foundation, ſeat, and finally ſubſtance, one: only the pope hath altered the form and manner thereof, being himſelf the head both of that tyrannical empire, and alſo of the falſe prophets: for the empire hath he taken unto himſelf, and thereunto hath added this cunning device. Now theſe words, 'whoſe deadly wound was cured,' are put here for diſtinction ſake, as alſo ſometimes afterwards: that even at that time the godly readers of this prophecy might by this ſign be brought to ſee the things as preſent: as if it were ſaid, that they might adore this very empire that now is, whoſe head we have ſeen in our own memory to have been cut off, and to be cured again.

[19] The ſecond point of the things done by the beaſt, is the credit of great wonders or miracles, and pertaining to the ſtrengthening of this impiety: of which ſigns ſome were given from above, as it is ſaid, that fire was ſent down from heaven by falſe ſorcery, in this verſe. Others were ſhewed here below in the ſight of the beaſt, to eſtabliſh idolatry, and deceive ſouls: which part St. John ſetteth forth, beginning (as they ſay) at that which is laſt, in this manner: Firſt, the effect is declared in theſe words: "He deceiveth the inhabitants of the earth." Secondly, the common manner of working, in two ſorts: one of miracles, "For the ſigns which were given him to do in the preſence of the beaſt:" the other of the words added to the ſigns, and teaching the idolatry by thoſe ſigns, "Saying unto the inhabitants of the earth, that they ſhould make an image unto the

A. D. 96. made fire to come down from heaven on the earth, in the ſight of men,

14 And deceived them that dwell on the earth by the ſigns which were permitted him to do in the ſight of the beaſt, ſaying to them that dwell on the earth, that they ſhould make the [20] image of the [21] beaſt which had the wound of a ſword, and did live.

15 [22] And it was permitted to him to give a [a] ſpirit unto the image of the beaſt, ſo that the image of the beaſt ſhould ſpeak, and ſhould cauſe that as many as would not worſhip the image of the beaſt, ſhould be killed.

16 [23] And he made all, both ſmall and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive [24] a [b] mark in their right hand or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might [25] buy or ſell, ſave he that had the [26] mark or the name of the beaſt, or the number of his name.

18 [27] Here is wiſdom. Let him that hath wit, count the number of the beaſt: for it is the [28] number of a man, and his number is ſix hundred threeſcore and ſix. A. D. 96.

CHAP. XIV.

1 The Lamb ſtandeth on mount Sion, 4 with his chaſte worſhippers. 6 One angel preacheth the goſpel, 8 another foretelleth the fall of Babylon: 9 the third warneth that the beaſt be avoided. 13 A voice from heaven pronounceth them happy who die in the Lord. 16 The Lord's ſickle is thruſt into the harveſt, 18 and into the vintage.

THEN I looked, and lo, a Lamb [1] ſtood on mount Sion, and with him [2] an hundred forty the beaſt, which, &c." Thirdly, a ſpecial manner is declared: "That it is given unto him to put life unto the image of the beaſt:" and that ſuch a kind of quickening, that the ſame both ſpeaketh by anſwer unto thoſe that aſk counſel of it, and alſo pronounceth death againſt all thoſe that do not obey nor worſhip it: all which things oftentimes by falſe miracles, through the procurement and inſpiration of the devil, have been effected and wrought in images. The hiſtories of the Papiſts are full of examples of ſuch miracles, the moſt of them feigned, many alſo done by the devil in images, as of old in the ſerpent, Gen. 3. 1. By which examples is confirmed not the authority of the beaſt, but the truth of God and theſe prophecies.

[20] That is, images, by enallage or change of the number: for the worſhip of them ever ſince the ſecond council of Nice, hath been ordained in the church by public credit and authority, contrary to the law of God.

[21] In the Greek, the word is of the dative caſe, as much to ſay, as unto the worſhip, honour and obeying of the beaſt, for by this maintenance of images, this pſeudoprophetical beaſt doth mightily profit the beaſt of Rome, of whom long ago he received them. Wherefore the ſame is hereafter very fitly called the image of the beaſt, for that images have their beginning from the beaſt, and have their form or manner from the will of the beaſt, and have their end and uſe fixed in the profit and commodity of the beaſt.

[22] And of this miracle of the images of the beaſt, (that is, which the beaſt hath ordained to eſtabliſh idolatry) which miraculouſly ſpeak, and give judgment, or rather marvellouſly, by the fraud of the falſe prophets, the Papiſts books are full fraughted.

[a] To give life, as Jannes and Jambres imitated the wonders that Moſes wrought.

[23] The third place is a moſt wicked and moſt inſolent tyranny, as was ſaid before, uſurped over the perſons of men, in this verſe: and over their goods and actions, in the next verſe. For he is ſaid both to bring upon all perſons a tyrannous ſervitude, ſo that as bond-ſlaves they might ſerve the beaſt: and alſo to exerciſe over all their goods and actions a pedlar like abuſe of indulgences and diſpenſations (as they term them) amongſt their friends, and againſt others, to uſe moſt violent interdictions, and to ſhoot out curſings, even in natural and civil, private and public contracts, wherein all good faith ought to have place.

[24] That is, their Chriſm, by which in the ſacrament (as they call it) of confirmation, they make ſervile unto themſelves, the perſons and doings of men, ſigning them in their forehead and hands, and as for the ſign left by Chriſt (of which chap. 7. 3.) and the holy ſacrament of baptiſm, they make as void. For whom Chriſt hath joined unto himſelf by baptiſm, this beaſt maketh challenge unto them by his greaſy chriſm, which he doubteth not to prefer before baptiſm, both in authority and in efficacy.

[b] The mark of the name of the beaſt.

[25] That is, have any traffic or intercourſe with men, but they only which have this anointing and conſecrating of clerkly tonſure, as they call it. Read Gratian "De conſecratione, diſtinctione tertia, c. 5. omnes ſpiritus, &c." of theſe matters.

[26] Here the falſe prophets do require three things, which are ſet down in the order of their greatneſs, a character, a name, and the number of the name. The meaning is, that man that hath not their firſt anointing, and clerical tonſure or ſhaving: ſecondly, holy orders, by receiving whereof is communicated the name of the beaſt: or finally, hath not attained that high degree of pontifical knowledge, and of the law (as they call it) canonical, and hath not as it were made up in account and caſt the number of the myſteries thereof: for in theſe things conſiſteth the number of that name of the beaſt. And this is excellently ſet forth in the next verſe.

[27] That is, in this number of the beaſt conſiſteth that popiſh wiſdom, which unto them ſeemeth the greateſt of all others. In theſe words St. John expoundeth that ſaying, which went before of the number of the beaſt, what it hath above his mark or cogniſance and his name. Theſe things, ſaith St. John, the mark and the name of the beaſt, do eaſily happen unto any man, but to have the number of the beaſt, is wiſdom: that is, only the wiſe and ſuch as have underſtanding, can come by that number: for they muſt be moſt illuminate doctors that attain thereunto, as the words following do declare.

[28] How great and of what denomination this number of the beaſt is, by the which the beaſt accounteth his wiſdom, St. John declareth in theſe words, Doſt thou demand how great it is? it is ſo great, that it occupieth the whole man: he is alway learning, and never cometh to the knowledge thereof: he muſt be a man indeed that doth attain unto it. Aſkeſt thou of what denomination it is? verily it ſtandeth of ſix throughout, and perfectly riſeth of all the parts thereof in their ſeveral denominations (as they term them:) it ſtandeth of ſix by units, tens, hundreds, &c. ſo as there is no one part in the learning and order pontifical, which is not either referred unto the head, and, as it were, the top thereof, or contained in the ſame: ſo fitly do all things in this hierarchy agree one with another, and with their head. Therefore that cruel beaſt Boniface the VIIIth. doth commend by the number of ſix, thoſe decretals which he perfected, in the procem of the ſixth book: "Which "book (ſaith he) being to be added to five other books of "the ſame volume of decretals, we thought good to name "Sextum, the ſixth: that the ſame volume, by addition "thereof, containing a ſenary, or the number of ſix books "(which is a number perfect) may yield a perfect form of "managing all things, and perfect diſcipline of behavi"our." Here therefore is the number of the beaſt, who poureth from himſelf all his parts, and bringeth them all back again unto himſelf by his diſcipline in moſt wiſe and cunning manner. If any man deſire more of this, let him read the gloſs upon that place, I am not ignorant that other interpretations are brought upon this place: but I thought it my duty, with the good favour of all, and without the offence of any, to propound my opinion in this point. And for this cauſe eſpecially, for that it ſeemed unto me neither profitable, nor like to be true, that the number of the beaſt, or of the name of the beaſt, ſhould be taken as the common ſort of interpreters do take it. For this number of the beaſt teacheth, giveth out, imprinteth, as a public mark of ſuch as be his, and eſteemeth that mark above all others, as the mark of thoſe whom he loveth beſt. Now thoſe other expoſitions ſeem rather to be far removed from this property and condition of that number: whether you reſpect the name Latinus, or Titan, or any other. For theſe the beaſt doth not teach, nor give forth, nor imprint, but moſt diligently forbiddeth to be taught, and audaciouſly denieth: he approveth not theſe, but reproveth them, and hateth them that think ſo of this number, with an hatred greater than that of Vatinius.

[1] The hiſtory of the church of Chriſt being finiſhed for more than a thouſand and three hundred years, at which time Boniface VIII. lived, as before hath been ſaid: there remaineth the reſt of the hiſtory of the conflicting or militant forty and four thouſand, having his Father's [3] name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven as the ſound of many waters, and as the ſound of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers, harping with their harps.

3 And they ſung as it were a new ſong before the throne, and before the four beaſts, and the elders: and no man could learn that ſong, but the hundred forty and four thouſand which were bought from the earth.

4 Theſe are they which are not defiled with women, for they are virgins: theſe follow the Lamb whitherſoever he goeth: theſe are bought from men, being the firſt fruits unto God, and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouths was found no guile: for they are without ſpot before the throne of God.

6 ¶ [4] Then I ſaw [5] another angel fly in the midſt of heaven, having an everlaſting goſpel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

* Pſ. 145. 6. 7 [6] * Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him: for the hour of his judgment is come: and worſhip him that made * heaven and earth, and the ſea, and the fountains of waters.

* Acts 14. 15.

8 And there followed another angel, ſaying, * Babylon that great city is fallen, it is fallen: for ſhe made all nations to drink of the wine of the [a] wrath of her fornication.

* Iſa. 21. 9. Jer. 51. 8. Ch. 18. 2.

9 ¶ And the third angel followed them, ſaying with a loud voice, [7] If any man worſhip the beaſt and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or on his hand,

10 The ſame ſhall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, yea, of the pure wine which is poured into the cup of his wrath, and he ſhall be tormented in fire and brimſtone before the holy angels, and before the Lamb.

11 And the ſmoke of their torment ſhall aſcend evermore: and they ſhall have no reſt day nor night, which worſhip the beaſt and his image, and whoſoever receiveth the print of his name.

12 [8] Here is the patience of the ſaints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jeſus.

13 Then I heard a voice from heaven, ſaying unto me, Write, The dead which die [b] in the Lord, are fully bleſſed. Even ſo ſaith the Spirit: for they reſt from their labours, and their [c] works follow them.

14 ¶ [9] And I looked, and behold, a [10] white cloud, and upon the cloud one ſitting like unto tant church, from thence unto the time of the laſt victory, in three chapters. For firſt of all, as the foundation of the whole hiſtory is deſcribed, the ſtanding of the Lamb with his army and retinue in five verſes, after his worthy acts which he hath done, and yet doth in moſt mighty manner, whilſt he overthroweth Antichriſt with the ſpirit of his mouth, in the reſt of this chapter, and in the two following. Unto the deſcription of the Lamb, are propounded three things, his ſituation, place and attendance: for the reſt are expounded in the former viſions, eſpecially upon the fifth chapter.

[2] As ready girt to do his office (as Acts 7. 56.) in the midſt of the church, which aforetime mount Sion did prefigure.

[3] As before, 7. 2. This retinue of the Lamb is deſcribed firſt by divine mark (as before 7. 2.) in this verſe. Then by divine occupation, in that all and every one in his retinue moſt vehemently and ſweetly (verſe 2.) do glorify the Lamb with a ſpecial ſong before God and his elect angels: which ſong fleſh and blood cannot hear, nor underſtand, ver. 3. Laſtly, by their deeds done before, and their ſanctification in that they were virgins pure from ſpiritual and bodily fornication, that is, from impiety and unrighteouſneſs, that they followed the Lamb as a guide unto all goodneſs, and cleaved unto him: that they are holy unto him, as of grace redeemed by him: that in truth and ſimplicity of Chriſt they have exerciſed all theſe things, ſanctimony of life, the direction of the Lamb, a thankful remembrance of redemption by him: finally (to conclude in a word) that they are blameleſs before the Lord, ver. 4, 5.

[4] The other part (as I ſaid on the firſt verſe) is of the acts of the Lamb, the manner whereof is delivered in two ſorts, of his ſpeech and of his facts. His ſpeeches are ſet forth unto the 13th verſe of this chapter, and his facts unto the ſixteenth chapter. In the ſpeech of the Lamb, which is the word of the goſpel, are taught in this place theſe things: The ſervice of the godly, conſiſting inwardly of reverence towards God, and outwardly of the glorifying of him: the viſible ſign of which is adoration, ver. 7. The overthrowing of wicked Babylon, ver. 8. and the fall of every one of the ungodly which worſhip the beaſt, ver. 9, 10, 11. Finally, the ſtate of the holy ſervants of God, both preſent, ver. 11. and to come, moſt bleſſed, according to the promiſe of God, ver. 13.

[5] This angel is a type or figure of the good and faithful ſervants of God, whom God eſpecially from that time of Boniface VIII. hath raiſed up to the publiſhing of the goſpel of Chriſt, both by preaching and by writing. So God firſt, near unto the time of the ſame Boniface, uſed Peter Caſſidorus an Italian: after Arnold, de Villa Nova, a Frenchman, then Occam, Dante, Petrarch, after that, Johannes de Rupe Ceſa, a Franciſcan: after again, John Wickliffe an Engliſhman, and ſo continually one or another unto the reſtoring of the truth, and enlarging of his church.

[6] That is, Babylon is deſtroyed by the ſentence and judgment of God: the execution whereof St. John deſcribeth, chap. 18. And this voice of the miniſters of Chriſt hath continued ſince the time that Babylon (which is Rome) hath by deliberate counſel and manifeſt malice oppugned the light of the goſpel offered from God.

[a] Of her fornication, whereby God was provoked to wrath.

[7] That is, ſhall not worſhip God alone, but ſhall transfer his divine honour unto this beaſt, whether he do it with his heart, or counterfeiting in ſhew. For he (ſaith Chriſt) that denieth me before men, him will I deny before my Father and his angels, Matt. 10. 32. And this is that voice of the holy miniſtry, which at this time is very much uſed of the holy and faithful ſervants of God. For having now ſufficiently found out the public obſtinacy of Babylon, they labour not any longer to thunder out againſt the ſame: but to ſave ſome particular members by terror (as St. Jude ſpeaketh) and to pluck them out of the public flame: or elſe by vehement commiſeration of their eſtate to lead them away, they ſet before them eternal death, into which they ruſh unawares, unleſs in good time they return unto God: but the godly which are of their own flock, they exhort unto patience, obedience, and faith in the Lord Jeſus, and charge them to give light by their good example, of good life unto others.

[8] The patience, ſanctification, and juſtification, by faith: the conſequence whereof are reſt, felicity, and glory eternal in the heavenly fellowſhip of God and his angels.

[b] That is, for the Lord.

[c] By works, is meant the reward which followeth good works.

[9] The ſecond part of this chapter, as I ſaid verſe 1. Of the acts and doings of Chriſt, in overthrowing of Antichriſt and his church by the Spirit of his divine mouth: ſeeing that having been called back by word both publicly and privately unto his duty, and admoniſhed of his moſt certain ruin, he yet ceaſeth not to maintain and protect his own adherents, that they may do him ſervice; and to afflict the godly with moſt barbarous perſecutions. Of thoſe things which Chriſt doth there are two kinds; one common or general in the reſt of this chapter, another particular againſt that ſavage and rebellious beaſt and his worſhippers, chapter 15, 16. That common kind is the calamity of wars, ſpread abroad through the whole earth, and filling all things with blood, and that without reſpect of any perſon. This is figured or ſhadowed out in two types of the harveſt and vintage. Since the time that the light of the goſpel began to ſhine out, and ſince prophecy or preaching by the grace of God was raiſed up again, how the Son of man, [11] having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a [12] ſharp ſickle.

15 [13] And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that ſat on the cloud, * Thruſt in thy ſickle and reap: for the time is come to reap: for the * harveſt of the earth is ripe.

*Joel 3. 13.
* Matt. 13. 39.

16 And he that ſat on the cloud, thruſt in his ſickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

17 [14] Then another angel came out of the temple, which is in heaven, having alſo a ſharp ſickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire, and cried with a loud cry to him that had the ſharp ſickle, and ſaid, Thruſt in thy ſharp ſickle, and gather the cluſters of the vineyard of the earth: for her grapes are ripe.

19 And the angel thruſt in his ſharp ſickle on the earth, and cut down the vines of the vineyard of the earth, and caſt them into that great wine-preſs of the wrath of God.

20 And the wine-preſs was trodden without the city, [15] and blood came out of the wine-preſs unto the horſe bridles, by the ſpace of a thouſand and ſix hundred furlongs.

CHAP. XV.

1 The ſeven angels having the ſeven laſt plagues. 3 They that conquered the beaſt, praiſe God. 6 To the ſeven angels, 7 ſeven vials full of God's wrath are delivered.

AND [1] I ſaw another ſign in heaven, great and marvellous, ſeven [2] angels, having the ſeven laſt plagues: for by them is fulfilled the wrath of God.

A. D. 96.

2 [3] And I ſaw [4] as it were a glaſſy ſea, mingled with fire, and [5] them that had gotten victory of the beaſt, and of his image, and of his mark, and of the number of his name, [6] ſtand at the glaſſy ſea, having the harps of God.

3 And they ſung [7] the ſong of Moſes the [a] ſervant of God, and the ſong of the Lamb, ſaying, [8] Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty: juſt and true are thy * [b] ways, King of ſaints.

*Pſ. 145. 17.

4 * Who ſhall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name! for thou only art holy, and all nations ſhall come and worſhip before thee: for thy judgments are made manifeſt.

* Jer. 10. 7.

5 [9] And after that, I looked, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of teſtimony was open in heaven.

6 And the ſeven angels came out of the temple, which had the [10] ſeven plagues, clothed in [11] pure and bright linen, and having their breaſts [12] girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the [13] four beaſts gave unto the ſeven angels ſeven golden vials full of the wrath of God, which liveth for evermore.

8 And the temple was full of the ſmoke of the glory of God and of his power, [14] and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the ſeven plagues of the ſeven angels were fulfilled.

CHAP.

horrible wars have been kindled in the world! how much human fleſh hath been thrown to the earth by this divine reaping! how much blood (alas for woe) hath overflown for theſe hundred years almoſt! all hiſtories do cry out, and this our age (if ever before) is now in horror by reaſon of the rage of that ſickle which Antichriſt calleth for. In this place is the firſt type that is of the harveſt.

[10] Declaring his fierceneſs by his colour, like unto that which is in the white or milky circle of heaven.

[11] As one that ſhall reign from God, and occupy the place of Chriſt in this miſerable execution.

[12] That is, a moſt fit and commodious inſtrument of execution, deſtroying all by hewing and thruſting through: for who may ſtand againſt God?

[13] Chriſt giveth a commandment in this verſe, and the angel executeth it in the next verſe.

[14] The other type (as I ſaid verſe 14.) is the vintage: the manner whereof is one with that which went before; if thou except this, that the grape-gathering is more exact in ſeeking out every thing than is the harveſt labour. This is therefore a more grievous judgment, both becauſe it ſucceedeth the other, and becauſe it is underſtood to be executed with great diligence.

[15] That is, overflowed very deep, and very far and wide: the ſpeech is hyperbolical or exceſſive, to ſignify the greatneſs of the ſlaughter. And theſe be thoſe pleaſant fruits forſooth of the contempt of Chriſt, and deſiring of Antichriſt rather than him, which the miſerable, mad, and blind world doth at this time reap.

[1] This is that other place of the acts of Chriſt, as I noted before, 14. 14. Now therefore is ſhewed a ſingular work of the judgment of God belonging to the overthrow of Antichriſt and his forces, of which divine work the preparation is deſcribed in this chapter, and the execution in the next. The preparation is firſt ſet down generally, and in type, in this verſe: and is after particularly ſet forth in the reſt of the chapter.

[2] Of which chapter 8, 9. in pouring forth the plagues of the world: for even theſe plagues do for the moſt part agree with thoſe.

[3] There are two parts of the narration: one, the confeſſion of the ſaints, glorifying God, when they ſaw the preparation of the judgments of God, unto the 4th verſe: another, the vocation, inſtruction, and confirmation of thoſe inſtruments which God hath ordained for the execution of his judgments, in four other verſes.

[4] This part of the viſion alludeth unto the ſea, or large veſſel of braſs, in which the prieſts waſhed themſelves in the entrance of the temple: for in the entrance of the heavenly temple (as it is called verſe 5.) is ſaid to have been a ſea of glaſs, moſt lightſome and clear unto the commodity of choice mixed with fire, that is, as containing the treaſury of the judgments of God, which he bringeth forth and diſpenſeth according to his own pleaſure: for out of the former the prieſts were cleanſed of old: and out of this the ungodly are deſtroyed now, chap. 46.

[5] That is, the godly martyrs of Chriſt, who ſhall not give place even in miracles unto that beaſt: of theſe ſee before, chap. 13. 17. and 14. 9, 10.

[6] Glorifying God, from the particular obſervation of the weapons and inſtruments of God's wrath, floating in the ſea of glaſs.

[7] That ſong of triumph, which is in Exod. 15. 2.

[a] So is Moſes called for honour's ſake, as it is ſet forth, Deut. 34. 10.

[8] This ſong hath two parts: one a confeſſion, both particular, in this verſe, and general, in the beginning of the next verſe: another, a narration of cauſes belonging to the confeſſion, whereof one kind is eternal in itſelf, and moſt preſent unto the godly, in that God is both holy, and alone God: another kind is future, and to come, in that the elect taken out of the Gentiles (that is, out of the wicked ones and unbelieving, as chap. 11. 2.) were to be brought unto the ſame ſtate of happineſs, by the magnificency of the judgment of God, in the next verſe.

[b] Thy doings.

[9] The ſecond part of the narration (as was noted verſe 2.) wherein firſt the authority of the whole argument and matter thereof is figured, by a fore-running type of a temple opened in heaven, as chap. 11. 19. namely, that all thoſe things are divine and of God, that proceed from thence, in this verſe. Secondly, the adminiſters or executors come forth out of the temple, verſe 6. Thirdly, they are furniſhed with inſtruments of the judgments of God, and weapons fit for the manner of the ſame judgments, ver. 7. Finally, they are confirmed by teſtimony of the viſible glory of God, in the laſt verſe. A like teſtimony whereunto was exhibited of old in the law, Exod. 40. 34.

[10] That is, commandments to inflict thoſe ſeven plagues. Here is the figure called Metonymia.

[11] Which was in old time a ſign of the kingly or princely dignity.

[12] This girding was a ſign of diligence, and the girdle of gold was a ſign of ſincerity and truſtineſs, in taking in charge the commandments of God.

[13] Of theſe before, chap. 4. 7.

[14] None of thoſe ſeven angels might return, till he had performed fully the charge committed unto him, according to the decree of God.

CHAP. XVI.

2 and 17 The angels pour out the ſeven vials of God's wrath given unto them, and ſo divers plagues ariſe in the world, 18 to terrify the wicked, 19 and the inhabitants of the great city.

AND [1] I heard a great voice out of the temple, ſaying to the ſeven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the ſeven vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 [2] And the firſt went and poured out his vial upon the earth: and there fell a noiſome and a grievous ſore upon the men which had the [3] mark of the beaſt, and upon them which worſhipped his image.

3 [4] And the ſecond angel poured out his vial upon the ſea, and it [a] became as the blood of a dead man: and every living thing died in the ſea.

4 [5] And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters, and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters ſay, Lord, Thou art juſt, which art, and which waſt: and holy, becauſe thou haſt judged theſe things.

6 For they ſhed the blood of the ſaints and prophets, and therefore haſt thou given them blood to drink: for they are worthy.

7 [6] And I heard another out of the ſanctuary ſay, Even ſo, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

8 [7] And the fourth angel poured out his vial on the ſun, and it was given to him to torment men with the heat of fire,

9 And men boiled in great heat, and blaſphemed the name of God, which hath power over theſe plagues, and they repented not to give him glory.

10 [8] And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the throne of the beaſt, and his kingdom waxed dark, and they gnawed their tongues for ſorrow,

11 And blaſphemed the God of heaven for their pains, and for their ſores, and repented not of their works.

12 [9] And the ſixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river [10] Euphrates, and the [11] water thereof dried up, [12] that the way of the kings of the Eaſt ſhould be prepared.

13 And I ſaw [13] three unclean ſpirits [14] like frogs come out of the mouth of that [15] dragon, and out of the mouth of that [16] beaſt, and out of the mouth of that [17] falſe prophet.

14 For they are the ſpirits of devils, working miracles, to go unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 [18] (* Behold, I come as a thief. Bleſſed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, leſt he walk nakedly, and men ſee his filthineſs)

* Ch. 3. 3. Matt. 24.44. Luke 12.39.

---

[1] In the former chapter was ſet down the preparation unto the work of God: here is delivered the execution thereof. And in this diſcourſe of the execution is a general commandment in this verſe; then a particular recital in order of the execution done by every of the ſeven angels, in the reſt of the chapter. This ſpecial execution againſt Antichriſt and his crew doth in manner agree unto that which was generally done upon the whole world, chap. 8 and 9. and belongeth (if my conjecture fail me not) unto the ſame time. Yet herein they do differ one from another, that this was particularly effected upon the princes and ring-leaders of the wickedneſs of the world; the other generally againſt the whole world being wicked. And therefore theſe judgments are figured more grievous than thoſe.

[2] The hiſtory of the firſt angel, whoſe plague upon the earth is deſcribed almoſt in the ſame words with that ſixth plague of the Egyptians, Exod. 9. 9. But it doth ſignify a ſpiritual ulcer, and that torture or butchery of conſcience, ſeared with an hot iron, which accuſeth the ungodly within, and both by truth of the word (the light whereof God hath now ſo long ſhewed forth) and by bitterneſs ſtirreth up and forceth out the ſword of God's wrath.

[3] See chap. 13. 16.

[4] The hiſtory of the ſecond angel, who troubleth and moleſteth the ſeas, that he may ſtir up the conſcience of men ſleeping in their wickedneſs, ſee chap. 8. 8.

[a] It was turned into rotten and filthy blood, ſuch as is in dead bodies.

[5] The ſtory of the third angel ſtriking the rivers in this verſe, who proclaiming the juſtice of God, commendeth the ſame by a moſt grave compariſon of the ſins of men with the puniſhment of God: which is common to this place, and that which went before. Wherefore alſo this praiſing is attributed to the angel of the waters, a name common to the ſecond and third angels, according as both of them are ſaid to be ſent againſt the waters, albeit the one of the ſea, the other of the rivers, in two verſes.

[6] A confirmation of the praiſe beforegoing, out of the ſanctuary of God, whether immediately by Chriſt, or by ſome one of his angels, for Chriſt alſo is called another angel, chap. 7. 2, 3, 8. and 12. 1.

[7] The ſtory of the fourth angel who throweth the plague upon the heaven and upon the ſun, of which, Luke 21. 26. the effects whereof are noted two: the one peculiar, that it ſhall ſcorch men with heat in this verſe; the other proceeding accidentally from the former, that their fury ſhall ſo much the more be enraged againſt God in the next verſe, when yet (O wonderful mercy and patience of God!) all other creatures are firſt ſtricken often and grievouſly by the hand of God before mankind, by whom he is provoked: as the things beforegoing do declare.

[8] The ſtory of the fifth angel, who ſtriketh the kingdom of the beaſt with two plagues, abroad with darkneſs, within with biles and dolors moſt grievous, throughout his whole kingdom, that thereby he might wound the conſcience of the wicked, and puniſh that moſt perverſe obſtinacy of the idolaters: whereof aroſe perturbation, and thence a furious indignation and deſperate madneſs, raging againſt God and hurtful unto itſelf.

[9] The ſtory of the ſixth angel, divided into his act, and the event thereof. The act is, that the angel did caſt out of his mouth the plague of a moſt glowing heat, wherewith even the greateſt floods, and which moſt were wont to ſwell and overflow (as Euphrates) were dried up, by the counſel of God in this verſe. The event is, that the mere madneſs wherewith the wicked are enraged, that they may ſcorn the judgments of God, and abuſe them furiouſly to ſerve their own turn, and to the executing of their own wicked outrage.

[10] The bond of the ſpiritual Babylon, and to the fortreſſes of the ſame, chap. 9. 14.

[11] So the church of the ungodly, and kingdom of the beaſt, is ſaid to be left naked, all the defences thereof in which they put their truſt, being taken away from it.

[12] That is, that even they which dwell further off, may with more commodity make haſte unto that ſacrifice which the Lord hath appointed.

[13] That is, every of them bent their whole force, and conſpired that by wonders, word and work, they might bring into the ſame deſtruction, all kings, princes, and potentates of the world, curſedly bewitched of them by their ſpirits, and teachers of the vanity and impurity of the beaſt that committed fornication with the kings of the earth. And this is a right deſcription of our times.

[14] Croking with all importuity, and continually day and night provoking and calling forth to arms, as the trumpets and furies of war, as is declared in the next verſe.

[15] That is, the devil, as chap. 11. 5.

[16] Whereof chap. 13. 1.

[17] That is, of that other beaſt, of which chap. 13. 11. for ſo is he called alſo, chap. 19. 20. and 20. 10.

[18] A parentheſis for admonition, in which God warneth his holy ſervants, who reſt in the expectation of Chriſt, always to addreſs their minds unto his coming, and to look unto themſelves, that they be not ſhamefully made naked and circumvented of theſe unclean ſpirits, and ſo they be miſerably unprepared at the coming of the Lord, ſo Matt. 24. 29. and 25. 13.

16 [19] And they gathered them together into a place called in Hebrew, [20] Armageddon.

17 ¶ [21] And the ſeventh angel poured out his vial into the [22] air: and there came a loud voice out of the temple of heaven from [23] the throne, ſaying, [24] It is done.

18 ¶ [25] And there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and there was a great earthquake, ſuch as was not ſince men were upon the earth, even ſo mighty an earthquake.

19 [26] And the great city was divided into three parts: and the cities [27] of the nations fell: and that great [28] Babylon came in remembrance before God, * to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceneſs of his wrath.

*Jer. 25. 15.

20 And every iſle fled away, and the mountains [29] were not [b] found.

21 [30] And there fell a great hail, like [c] talents, out of heaven upon the men, and men blaſphemed God becauſe of the plague of the hail: for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

CHAP. XVII.

1 That great whore is deſcribed, 2 with whom the kings of the earth committed fornication. 6 She is drunken with the blood of ſaints. 7 The myſtery of the woman, and the beaſt that carried her, expounded. 11 Their deſtruction. 14 The Lamb's victory.

THEN [1] there came one of the ſeven angels which had the ſeven vials, and talked with me, ſaying unto me, Come: I will ſhew [2] thee the [a] damnation of the great whore that ſitteth upon many waters,

2 With whom have committed fornication the kings of the earth, and the inhabitants of the earth are drunken with the wine of her fornication.

3 [3] So he carried me away into the wilderneſs in the Spirit, and I ſaw a woman ſit upon a [b] ſcarlet-coloured beaſt, full of names of blaſphemy, which had ſeven heads and ten horns.

4 And [4] the woman was arrayed [5] in purple and ſcarlet, and gilded with gold, and precious ſtones, and pearls, and had [6] a cup of gold in her hand full of abomination, and filthineſs of her fornication.

---

[19] Namely, the angel, who holily, according to the commandment of God, was to do ſacrifice: notwithſtanding that thoſe impure ſpirits do the ſame wickedly, as ſervants, not unto God, but unto the beaſt that hath ſeven heads.

[20] That is (to ſay nothing of other expoſitions) the mountain itſelf, or mountain places of Megiddon. Now it is certain by the holy ſcriptures, that Megiddon is a city and territory in the tribe of Manaſſes, bordering upon Iſſachar and Aſher, and was made famous by that lamentable overthrow of king Joſias, whereof 2 Kings 22. 30. and 2 Chron. 35. 22. and Zach. 12. 11. In this mountain country God ſaith by figure, or type, that the kings of the people which ſerve the beaſt, ſhall meet together: becauſe the Gentiles did always caſt that lamentable overthrow in the teeth of the church of the Jews, unto their great reproach: and therefore were perſuaded that that place ſhould be moſt fortunate unto them (as they ſpeak) and unfortunate unto the godly. But God here pronounceth, that the reproach of the church, and confidence of the ungodly, ſhall by himſelf be taken away, in the ſelfſame place where the nations perſuaded themſelves they ſhould mightily exult and triumph againſt God and his church.

[21] The ſtory of the ſeventh angel unto the end of the chapter, in which firſt is ſhewed, by ſign and ſpeech, the argument of this plague, in this verſe, and then is declared the execution thereof in the verſes following.

[22] From whence he might move the heaven above, and the earth beneath.

[23] That is, from him that ſitteth on the throne, by the figure called Metonymia.

[24] That is, Babylon is undone, as is ſhewed verſe 19. and in the chapters following. For the firſt onſet (as I might ſay) of this denunciation is deſcribed in this chapter: and the laſt, containing a perfect victory, is deſcribed in thoſe that follow.

[25] Now is declared the execution (as is ſaid in verſe 27.) and the thing that ſhall laſt come to paſs in heaven and in earth, before the overthrow of the beaſt of Babylon: both generally, verſe 18. and particularly in the curſed city, and ſuch as have any familiarity therewith, in the three laſt verſes.

[26] The ſeat or ſtanding place of Antichriſt.

[27] Of all ſuch as cleave unto Antichriſt, and fight againſt Chriſt.

[28] That harlot, of whom in the next chapter following. Now this phraſe, "to come into remembrance," is, after the common uſe of the Hebrew ſpeech, borrowed from men, and attributed unto God.

[29] That is, were ſeen no more, or were no more extant. A borrowed Hebraiſm.

[b] Appeared not, which the Hebrews utter after this ſort, were not, Gen. 5. 24.

[30] The manner of the particular execution, moſt evidently teſtifying the wrath of God by the original and greatneſs thereof: the event thereof is the ſame with that which is in chap. 9. 13. and that which hath been mentioned in this chapter, from the execution of the fourth angel hitherto, that is to ſay, an incorrigible pertinacy of the world in their rebellion, and an heart that cannot repent, verſe 9 and 11.

[c] As it were about the weight of a talent, and a talent was threeſcore pounds, that is, ſix hundred groats, whereby is ſignified a marvellous and ſtrange weight.

[1] The ſtate of the church militant being declared, now followeth the ſtate of the church overcoming, and getting victory, as I ſhewed before in the beginning of the tenth chapter. This ſtate is ſet forth in four chapters. As in the place beforegoing I noted, that in that hiſtory the order of time was not always exactly obſerved, ſo the ſame is to be underſtood in this hiſtory, that it is diſtinguiſhed according to the perſons of which it treateth, and that in the ſeveral ſtories of the perſons is ſeverally obſerved in the time thereof. For firſt is delivered the ſtory of Babylon deſtroyed in this and the next chapter (for this Babylon, out of all doubt, ſhall periſh before the two beaſts and the dragon.) Secondly, is delivered the deſtruction of both the two beaſts, chap. 19. And laſtly of the dragon, chap. 18. In the ſtory of the ſpiritual Babylon are diſtinctly ſet forth the ſtate thereof in this chapter, and the overthrow done from God, chap. 18. In this verſe, and that which followeth, is a tranſition or paſſage unto the firſt argument, conſiſting of the particular calling of the prophet (as often heretofore) and a general propoſition.

[2] That is, that damnable harlot, by a figure, called hyppalage. For Saint John as yet had not ſeen her. Although another interpretation may be borne, yet I like this better.

[a] The ſentence that is pronounced againſt this harlot.

[3] Henceforth is propounded the type of Babylon, and the ſtate thereof, in four verſes. After, a declaration of the type, in the reſt of this chapter. In the type are deſcribed two things; the beaſt (of whom chapter 13) in the third verſe, and the woman that ſitteth upon the beaſt, ver. 4, 5, 6. The beaſt in proceſs of time hath gotten ſomewhat more than was expreſſed in the former viſion. Firſt, in that it is not read before, that he was apparelled in ſcarlet, a robe imperial, and of triumph. Secondly, in that that this is full of names of blaſphemy: the other carried the name of blaſphemy only in his heads. So God did teach that this beaſt is much increaſed in impiety and injuſtice, and doth in this laſt age triumph in both theſe more inſolently and proudly than ever before.

[b] A ſcarlet colour, that is, with a red and purple garment: and ſurely it was not without cauſe that the Romiſh clergy were ſo much delighted with this colour.

[4] That harlot, the ſpiritual Babylon, which is Rome. She is deſcribed by her attire, profeſſion, and deeds.

[5] In attire moſt glorious, triumphant, moſt rich, and moſt gorgeous.

[6] In profeſſion, the nouriſher of all, in this verſe, and teaching her myſteries unto all, verſe 5. ſetting forth all things moſt magnificently: but indeed moſt pernicioully beſotting miſerable men with her cup, and bringing upon them a deadly giddineſs.

5 [7] And in her forehead was a name written, A myſtery, [8] that great Babylon, that mother of whoredoms and abominations of the earth.

6 [9] And I ſaw the woman drunken with the blood of ſaints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jeſus, [10] and when I ſaw her, I wondered with great marvel.

7 [11] Then the angel ſaid unto me, Wherefore marvelleſt thou? I will ſhew thee the myſtery of that woman, and of that beaſt that beareth her, which hath ſeven heads and ten horns.

8 [12] The beaſt that thou haſt ſeen, [13] was, and is not, and [14] ſhall aſcend out of the bottomleſs pit, and ſhall go into perdition, and they that dwell on the earth ſhall wonder (whoſe names are not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) [15] when they behold the beaſt that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 [16] Here is the mind that hath wiſdom. The [c] ſeven heads [17] are ſeven mountains, whereon the woman ſitteth: [18] they are alſo ſeven kings.

10 [19] Five are fallen, [20] and one is, [21] and another is not yet come: and when he cometh, he muſt continue a ſhort ſpace.

11 [22] And the beaſt that was, and is not, is even [23] the eighth, and is [24] one of the ſeven, [25] and ſhall go into deſtruction.

---

[7] Deceiving with the title of religion, and publick inſcription of myſtery: which the beaſt in times paſt did not bear.

[8] An expoſition, in which Saint John declareth what manner of woman this is.

[9] In manner of deeds: She is red with blood, and ſheddeth it moſt licentiouſly, and therefore is coloured with the blood of the ſaints: as, on the contrary part, Chriſt is ſet forth imbrued with the blood of his enemies, Iſa. 63. 1.

[10] A paſſage unto the ſecond part of this chapter, by occaſion given of Saint John, as the words of the angel do ſhew in the next verſe.

[11] The ſecond part or place, as I ſaid, verſe 1. The enarration of the viſion promiſed in the verſe following. Now there is delivered firſt an enarration of the beaſt and his ſtory, unto the 14th verſe. After, of the harlot, unto the end of the chapter.

[12] The ſtory of the beaſt hath a triple deſcription of him The firſt is a diſtinction of this beaſt from all that ever have been at any time: which diſtinction is contained in this verſe. The ſecond is a delineation or a painting out of the beaſt by things preſent, by which he might even at that time be known of the godly: and this delineation is according to his heads, verſe 12, 13, 14. This beaſt is that empire of Rome, of which I ſpake chap. 13. 11. according to the mutations and changes whereof, which then had already happened, the Holy Ghoſt hath diſtinguiſhed and ſet out the ſame. The apoſtle diſtinguiſheth this beaſt from all others in theſe words: "The beaſt which thou ſaweſt, "was, and is not." For ſo I expound the words of the apoſtle for the evidency ſake, as I will further declare in the notes following.

[13] The meaning is, that beaſt which thou ſaweſt before, (chap. 13. 1.) and which yet thou haſt now ſeen, was (was, I ſay) even from Julius Cæſar in reſpect of beginning, riſing up, ſtation, glory, dominion, manner, and ſtock: from the houſe of Julius: and yet is not now the ſame, if they look unto the houſe and ſtock: for the dominion of this family was tranſlated unto another, after the death of Nero; from that other unto a third; from a third unto a fourth; and ſo forth, was varied and altered by innumerable changes. Finally, the empire is one, as it were one beaſt: but exceedingly varied by kindreds, families, and perſons. It was therefore, ſaith Saint John, in the kindred or houſe of Julius: and now it is not in that kindred, but tranſlated unto another.

[14] As if he ſhould ſay, Alſo this ſame that is, ſhall ſhortly not be: but ſhall aſcend out of the depth, or out of the ſea (as was ſaid, chap. 13. 1.) that is, ſhall be a new ſtock from amongſt the nations without difference, and ſhall in the ſame ſtate go unto deſtruction, or run and periſh: and ſo ſhall ſucceſſively new princes or emperors come and go, ariſe and fall, the body of the beaſt remaining ſtill, but toſſed with ſo many and often alterations as no man can but marvel that this beaſt was able to ſtand and hold it out, in ſo many mutations; verily, no empire that ever was toſſed with ſo many changes, and as it were with ſo many tempeſts of the ſea, ever continued ſo long.

[15] That is, as many as have not learned the providence of God, according to the faith of the ſaints, ſhall marvel at theſe grievous and often changes: when they ſhall conſider the ſelf-ſame beaſt, which is the Roman empire, to have been, and not to be, and to be, and ſtill moleſted with perpetual mutation, and yet in the ſame to ſtand and continue. This, in mine opinion, is the moſt ſimple expoſition of this place confirmed by the event of the things themſelves. Although the laſt change alſo, by which the empire, that before was civil, became eccleſiaſtical, is not obſcurely ſignified in theſe words, of which two, the firſt exerciſed cruelty upon the bodies of the ſaints: the other alſo upon their ſouls: the firſt by human order and policy, the other under the colour of the law of God, and of religion, raged and imbrued itſelf with the blood of the godly.

[16] An exhortation, preparing unto audience by the ſame argument, with that of Chriſt: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Wherefore for mine own part, I had rather read in this place, "Let there be here a mind, &c." So the angel paſſeth fully unto the ſecond place of this deſcription.

[c] Very children know what the ſeven-hilled city is, which is ſo much ſpoken of, and whereof Virgil thus reporteth; "And compaſſeth ſeven towers in one wall:" that city it is, that when John wrote theſe things, had rule over the kings of the earth. It was and is not, and yet it remaineth to this day, but it is declining unto deſtruction.

[17] This is the painting-out of the beaſt by things preſent (as I ſaid before) whereby St. John endeavoured to deſcribe the ſame, that he might be both known of the godly in that age, and be further obſerved and marked of the poſterity afterwards. This delineation hath one type, that is, his heads, but a double deſcription or application of the type: one permanent, from the nature itſelf, the other changeable, by the working of men. The deſcription permanent, is by the ſeven hills, in this verſe, the other that fleeteth, is from the ſeven kings, verſe 10, 11. And here it is worthy to be obſerved, that one type hath ſometimes two or more applications, as ſeemeth good to the Holy Ghoſt to expreſs, either one thing by divers types, or divers things by one type. So I noted before of the ſeven ſpirits, chap. 1. 4. Now this woman that ſitteth upon ſeven hills, is the city of Rome, called in times paſt of the Grecians, ἑπτάλοφός, i. e. of ſeven tops or creſts, and of Varro ſepticeps, i. e. of her ſeven heads (as here) or ſeven heads, and of others, ſeptemcollis, i. e. ſtanding upon ſeven hills.

[18] The beginning of theſe kings or emperors, is almoſt the ſame with the beginning of the church of Chriſt, which I ſhewed before, chap. 11. 1. Namely, from the year 25. after the paſſion of Chriſt, what time the temple and church of the Jews was overthrown. In which year it came to paſs, by the providence of God, that that ſaying, "The beaſt was, and is not," was fulfilled before the deſtruction of the Jews, immediately following, came to paſs. That was the year from the building of the city of Rome 809, from which year Saint John both numbered the emperors which hitherto had been, when he wrote theſe things, and foretelleth of two others next to come: and that with this purpoſe, that when this particular prediction or foretelling of things to come ſhould take effect, the truth of all other predictions in the church might be the more confirmed. Which ſign God of old mentioned in the law, Deut. 18. and Jeremiah confirmeth, chap. 28. 8.

[19] Whoſe names are theſe: the firſt, Servius Sulpitius Galba, who was the ſeventh emperor of the people of Rome; the ſecond, Marcus Salvius Otho; the third, Aulus Vitellius; the fourth, Titus Flavius Veſpaſianus; the fifth, Titus Veſpaſianus, his ſon, of his own name.

[20] Flavius Domitian, ſon of the firſt Veſpaſian. For in the latter end of his days Saint John wrote theſe things, as witneſſeth Irenæus, lib. 5. adverſus hæreſes.

[21] Nerva: the empire being now tranſlated from the family of Flavius. This man reigned only one year, four months, and nine days, as the hiſtory writers do tell.

[22] This is ſpoken by the figure Synecdoche, as much as to ſay, as that head of the beaſt, which was, and is not, becauſe it is cut off, and Nerva in ſo ſhort time extinguiſhed. How many heads there were, ſo many beaſts there ſeemed to be in one. See the like ſpeech in the third verſe of the thirteenth chapter.

[23] Nerva Trajanus, who himſelf in divers reſpects is called here the ſeventh and the eighth.

[24] Though in number and order of ſucceſſion he be the eighth, yet he is reckoned together with one of theſe heads, becauſe Nerva and he were one head. For this man obtained authority together with Nerva, and was conſul with him, when Nerva left his life.

A. D. 96.

12 [26] And the ten horns, which thou ſaweſt, are [27] ten kings, which yet have not received a kingdom, but ſhall receive power, as kings, [28] at one hour, with the beaſt.

13 [29] Theſe have one mind, and ſhall give their power and authority unto the beaſt.

14 Theſe ſhall fight with the [30] Lamb, and the Lamb ſhall overcome them: * for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are on his ſide, called, and choſen, and faithful.

* Ch. 19. 6. 1 Tim. 6. 15.

15 [31] And he ſaid unto me, The waters which thou ſaweſt, where the whore ſitteth, [32] are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten [33] horns which thou ſaweſt upon the beaſt, are they that ſhall hate the whore, and ſhall make her deſolate and naked, and ſhall eat her fleſh, and burn her with fire.

17 [34] For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to do with one conſent for to give their kingdom unto the beaſt, until the words of God be fulfilled.

18 And that woman which thou ſaweſt, is that [35] great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAP. XVIII.

2 The horrible deſtruction of Babylon is ſet out. 11, 16, 18 The merchants of the earth, who were enriched with the pomp and luxurіouſneſs of it, weep and wail: 20 But all the elect rejoice for that juſt vengeance of God.

A. D. 96.

AND [1] after theſe things, I ſaw another [2] angel come down from heaven, having great power, ſo that the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried out mightily with a loud voice, [3] ſaying, * It is fallen, it is fallen, Babylon that great city, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of all foul ſpirits, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.

* Ch. 14. 8. Isa. 21. 9. Jer. 51. 8.

3 For all nations have drunken of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich of the abundance of her pleaſures.

4 [4] And I heard another voice from heaven ſay, [5] Go out of her, my people, that ye [6] be not partakers of her ſins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 For her ſins are [a] come up into heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.

[25] Namely, to moleſt with perſecutions the churches of Chriſt, as the hiſtories do accord, and I have briefly noted, chap. 2. 10.

[26] The third place of this deſcription, as I ſaid verſe 8. is a prophetical prediction of things to come, which the beaſt ſhould do, as in the words following Saint John doth not obſcurely ſignify, ſaying, "Which have not yet received the kingdom, &c." For there is an Antitheſis or oppoſition between theſe kings and thoſe that went before. And firſt, the perſons are deſcribed in this verſe, then their deeds in the two verſes following.

[27] That is, ariſing with their kingdoms out of the Roman beaſts: at ſuch times as that political empire began by the craft of the Popes greatly to fall.

[28] Namely, with that ſecond beaſt, whom we called before a falſe prophet, which beaſt, aſcending out of the earth, got unto himſelf all the authority and power of the firſt beaſt, and exerciſeth the ſame before his face, as was ſaid, chapter 14. 11, 12. For when the political empire of the Weſt began to bow downwards, there both aroſe thoſe ten kings, and the ſecond beaſt took the opportunity offered, to uſurp unto himſelf all the power of the former beaſt. Theſe kings long ago many have numbered, and deſcribed to be ten, and a great part of the events plainly teſtifieth the ſame in this our age.

[29] That is, by conſent and agreement, that they may conſpire with the beaſt, and depend upon his beck Their ſtory is divided into three parts, counſels, acts, and events. The counſellors ſome of them conſiſt in communicating of judgments and affections: and ſome in communicating of power, which they are ſaid to have given unto this beaſt, in this verſe.

[30] With Chriſt and his church, as the reaſon following doth declare, and here are mentioned the facts and events, which followed for Chriſt his ſake, and for the grace of God the Father towards thoſe that are called elect, and are his faithful ones in Chriſt.

[31] This is the other member of the enarration, as I ſaid, verſe 7. belonging unto the harlot, ſhewed in the viſion, verſe 3. In this hiſtory of the harlot theſe three things are diſtinctly propounded: what is her magnificency, in this verſe, what is her fall, and by whom it ſhall happen unto her, in the two verſes following: and laſtly, who that harlot is, in the laſt verſe. This place, which by order of nature ſhould have been the firſt, is therefore made the laſt, becauſe it was more fit to be joined with the next chapter.

[32] That is, as unconſtant and variable as are the waters. Upon this foundation ſitteth this harlot as queen; a vain perſon, upon that which is vain.

[33] The ten kings, as verſe 12. The accompliſhment of this fact and event is daily increaſed in this our age, by the ſingular providence and moſt mighty government of God. Wherefore the facts are propounded in this verſe, and the cauſe of them in the verſe following.

[34] A reaſon rendered from the chief efficient cauſe, which is the providence of God, by which alone Saint John by inverſion of order affirmeth to have come to paſs, both that the kings ſhould execute upon the harlot that which pleaſed God, and which he declared in the verſe next beforegoing: and alſo that by one conſent and counſel, they ſhould give their kingdom unto the beaſt, &c. verſe 13, 14. for as theſe being blinded have before depended upon the beck of the beaſt that lifteth up the harlot, ſo it is ſaid, that afterward it ſhall come to paſs, that they ſhall turn back, and ſhall fall away from her, when their hearts ſhall be turned into better ſtate by the grace and mercy of God.

[35] That is, Rome, that great city, or only city (as Juſtinian calleth it) the king and head whereof was then the Emperor, but now the Pope, ſince that the condition of the beaſt was changed.

[1] The ſecond place (as I ſaid before, chap. 17. 1.) of the hiſtory of Babylon, is of the woful fall and ruin of that whore of Babylon. This hiſtorical prediction concerning her is threefold. The firſt a plain and ſimple foretelling of her ruin, in three verſes. The ſecond a figurative prediction by the circumſtances, thence unto the 20th verſe. The third a confirmation of the ſame by ſign or wonder, unto the end of the chapter.

[2] Either Chriſt, the eternal word of God the Father (as often elſewhere) or a created angel, and one deputed unto this ſervice, but thoroughly furniſhed with greatneſs of power, and with light of glory, as the enſign of power.

[3] The prediction or foreſhewing of her ruin, containing both the fall of Babylon, in this verſe, and the cauſe thereof uttered by way of allegory concerning her ſpiritual and carnal wickedneſs, that is, her moſt great impiety and injuſtice, in the next verſe: her fall is firſt ſimply declared of the angel, and then the greatneſs thereof is ſhewed here, by the events, when he ſaith, it ſhall be the ſeat and habitation of devils, of wild beaſts, and of curſed fowls, as of old, Iſaiah 13. 21. and often elſewhere.

[4] The ſecond prediction, which is of the circumſtances of the ruin of Babylon: of theſe there are two kinds: one going before it, as that beforehand the godly are delivered, unto the ninth verſe: the other following upon her ruin: namely, the lamentation of the wicked, and rejoicing of the godly, unto the twentieth verſe.

[5] Two circumſtances going before the ruin, are commanded in this place: one is, that the godly depart out of Babylon: as I mentioned, chap. 12. to have been done in time paſt, before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; this charge is given here, and in the next verſe. The other is, that every one of them occupy themſelves in their own place in executing the judgment of God, as it was commanded the Levites of old, Exod. 32. 27. and that they ſanctify their hands unto the Lord, verſe 6, 7, 8.

[6] Of this commandment there are two cauſes: to avoid the contagion of ſin, and to ſhun the participation of thoſe puniſhments that belong thereunto.

[a] He uſeth a word which ſignifieth the following of ſins one after another, and riſing one of another in ſuch ſort, that they grew at length to ſuch an heap, that they came up even to heaven.

A. D. 96.

6 [7] Reward her, even as ſhe hath rewarded you, and give her double according to her works: and in the cup that ſhe hath filled to you, fill her the double.

7 Inaſmuch as ſhe glorified herſelf, and lived in pleaſure, ſo much give ye to her torment and ſorrow: for ſhe ſaith [b] in her heart, I ſit being a queen, and am [c] no widow, and ſhall [d] ſee no mourning.

8 Therefore ſhall her plagues come at [e] one day, death, and ſorrow, and famine, and ſhe ſhall be burnt with fire: for that God which condemneth her, is a ſtrong Lord.

9 And [8] the kings of the earth ſhall bewail her, and lament for her, which have committed fornication, and lived in pleaſure with her, when they ſhall ſee that ſmoke of that her burning.

10 And ſhall ſtand afar off for fear of her torment, ſaying, Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city: for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 [9] And the merchants of the earth ſhall weep and wail over her: for no man buyeth their ware any more.

12 The ware of gold, and ſilver, and of precious ſtones, and of pearls, and of fine linen, and of purple, and of ſilk, and of ſcarlet, and of all manner of thyne wood, and of all veſſels of ivory, and of all veſſels of moſt precious wood, and of braſs, and of iron, and of marble,

13 And of cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincenſe, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beaſts, and ſheep, and horſes, and chariots, and ſervants, and ſouls of men.

14 ([10] And the [f] apples that thy ſoul luſted after, are departed from thee, and all things which were fat and excellent, are departed from thee, and thou ſhalt find them no more)

15 The merchants of theſe things which were waxed rich, ſhall ſtand afar off from her, for fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

16 And ſaying, Alas, alas, that great city that was clothed in fine linen and purple and ſcarlet, and gilded with gold, and precious ſtones, and pearls.

17 [11] For in one hour ſo great riches are come to deſolation. And every ſhip-maſter, and all the people that occupy ſhips, and ſhip-men, and whoſoever traffick on the ſea, ſhall ſtand afar off,

18 And cry, when they ſee that ſmoke of that her burning, ſaying, What city was like unto this great city!

19 And they ſhall caſt duſt on their heads, and cry, weeping, and wailing, and ſay, Alas, alas, that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ſhips on the ſea by her coſtlineſs: for in one hour ſhe is made deſolate.

20 [12] O heaven, rejoice of her, and ye holy apoſtles and prophets: for God hath puniſhed her, to be revenged on her for your ſakes.

21 [13] Then the mighty angel took up a ſtone like a great milſtone, * and caſt it into the ſea, ſaying, With ſuch violence ſhall that great city Babylon be caſt, and ſhall be found no more.

*Jer. 51.63.

22 [14] And the voice of harpers, and muſicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, ſhall be heard no more in thee: and no craftſman, of whatſoever craft he be, ſhall be found any more in thee: and the ſound of a milſtone ſhall be heard no more in thee.

23 And the light of a candle ſhall ſhine no more in thee: and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride ſhall be heard no more in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth, and with thine inchantment were deceived all nations.

24 And in her was found the [15] blood of the prophets, [16] and of the ſaints, and of all that were ſlain upon the earth.

CHAP. XIX.

1 The heavenly company praiſe God for avenging the blood of his ſervants on the whore. 9 They are written bleſſed, that are called to the Lamb's ſupper. 10 The angel will not be worſhipped. 11 The mighty King of kings appeareth from heaven. 19 The battle, 20 wherein the beaſt is taken, 21 and caſt into the burning lake.

AND [1] after theſe things I heard a great voice of a great multitude in heaven, ſaying,

---

[7] The provocation of the godly, and the commandment of executing the judgments of God, ſtand upon three cauſes, which are here expreſſed: the unjuſt wickedneſs of the whore of Babylon, in this verſe; her curſed pride, oppoſing itſelf againſt God, which is the fountain of all evil actions, verſe 7. and her moſt juſt damnation by the ſentence of God, verſe 8.

[b] With herſelf.

[c] I am full of people, and mighty.

[d] I ſhall taſte of none.

[e] Shortly, and at one inſtant.

[8] The circumſtances following the fall of Babylon, or the conſequent thereof (as I diſtinguiſhed them verſe 4.) are two: namely, the lamentation of the wicked, unto the 19th verſe, and the rejoicing of the godly, verſe 20. This moſt ſorrowful lamentation, according to the perſons of them that lament, hath three members: the firſt whereof is, the mourning of the kings and mighty men of the earth, in two verſes: the ſecond is, the lamentation of the merchants that traffick by land, unto the 19th verſe: The third is, the wailing of thoſe that merchandiſe by ſea, verſe 16, 17, 18. In every of thoſe the cauſe and manner of their mourning is deſcribed in order, according to the condition of thoſe that mourn, with obſervation of that which beſt agreeth unto them.

[9] The lamentation of thoſe that trade by land, as I diſtinguiſhed immediately before.

[10] An apoſtrophe, or turning of the ſpeech by imitation: uſed for more vehemence, as if thoſe merchants, after the manner of mourners, ſhould in paſſionate ſpeech ſpeak unto Babylon, though now utterly fallen and overthrown. So Iſaiah 12. 9. and in many other places.

[f] By this is meant that ſeaſon which is next before the fall of the leaf, at what ſeaſon fruits ripen, and the word ſignifieth ſuch fruits as are longed for.

[11] The manner of mourning uſed by them that trade by ſea.

[12] The other conſequent upon the other ruin of Babylon, is the exultation or rejoicing of the godly in heaven and in earth, as was noted verſe 9.

[13] The third prediction, as I ſaid verſe 1. ſtanding of a ſign, and the interpretation thereof: the interpretation thereof is in two ſorts, firſt, by a ſimple propounding of the thing itſelf, in this verſe, and then by declaration of the events, in the verſes following.

[14] The events are two: the one of them oppoſite unto the other, for amplification ſake. There ſhall be, ſaith he, in Babylon, no mirth nor joy at all, in this and the next verſe, but all heavy and lamentable things, from the bloody ſlaughters of the righteous, and the vengeance of God coming upon it for the ſame.

[15] That is ſhed by bloody maſſacres, and calling for vengeance.

[16] That is, proved and found out, as if God had appointed a juſt inquiry concerning the impiety, unnaturalneſs, and injuſtice of theſe men.

[1] This chapter hath in ſum two parts: one tranſitory, or of paſſage unto the things that follow, unto the tenth verſe: another hiſtorical, of the victory of Chriſt gotten againſt both the beaſts, unto the end of the chapter: which I ſaid was the ſecond hiſtory of this argument, chap. 17. 1.

A. D. 96. ing, [a] [2] Hallelujah, ſalvation, and glory, and honour, and power be to the Lord our God.

2 For true and righteous are his judgments: for he hath condemned that great whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his ſervants, ſhed by her hand.

3 And again they ſaid, [3] Hallelujah: and that her ſmoke roſe up for evermore.

4 And the four and twenty elders, and the four beaſts fell down, and worſhipped God that ſat on the throne, ſaying, Amen, Hallelujah.

5 [4] Then a voice came out of the [5] throne, ſaying, Praiſe our God, all ye his ſervants, and ye that fear him, both ſmall and great.

6 And I heard [6] like a voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of ſtrong thunderings, ſaying, Hallelujah: for the Lord that God, that Almighty one, hath reigned.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give glory to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath [7] made herſelf ready.

8 And to her was granted, that ſhe ſhould be arrayed with [8] pure fine linen and ſhining, for the fine [9] linen is the [b] righteouſneſs of ſaints.

*Matt.22.2. 9 [10] Then he ſaid unto me, Write, * Bleſſed are they which are called unto the Lamb's ſupper. And he ſaid unto me, Theſe words of God are true.

*Ch. 22. 8. 10 [11] And I fell before his feet, * to worſhip him: but he ſaid unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellowſervant, and one of thy brethren, which have the [c] teſtimony of Jeſus, Worſhip God: for the teſtimony of [d] Jeſus is the ſpirit of prophecy. A. D. 96.

11 [12] And I ſaw [13] heaven open, and behold a white horſe, and he that ſat upon him was called faithful and true, and he judgeth and fighteth righteouſly.

12 And his eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns: and he had a name written, that no man knew but himſelf.

13 And he was clothed with a garment dipt in blood, and his name was called THE WORD OF GOD.

14 [14] And the hoſts which were in heaven followed him upon white horſes, clothed with fine linen white and pure.

15 [15] And out of his mouth went out a ſharp ſword, that with it he ſhould ſmite the heathen: for he ſhall * rule them with a rod of iron: for he it is that treadeth the wine-preſs of the fierceneſs and wrath of Almighty God. *Pſ. 2. 9.

16 [16] And he hath upon his garment, and upon his thigh a name written, * THE KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS. *Ch.17.14. 1 Tim.6.15.

17 [17] And I ſaw an angel ſtand in the [18] ſun, who cried with a loud voice, ſaying to all the fowls that did fly by [19] the midſt of heaven, Come, and gather yourſelves together unto the ſupper of the great God,

18 That ye may eat the fleſh of kings, and the fleſh of high captains, and the fleſh of mighty men, and the fleſh of horſes, and of them that ſit on them, and the fleſh of all free men, and bond men, and of ſmall and great.

19 [20] And I ſaw the beaſt, and the kings of the

The tranſition hath two places, one of praiſing God for the overthrow done unto Babylon, in four verſes: and another likewiſe of praiſe, and prophetical, for the coming of Chriſt unto his kingdom, and his moſt royal marriage with his church, thence unto the tenth verſe. The former praiſe hath three branches, diſtinguiſhed after the ancient manner of thoſe that ſing προσφωνεσις, that is, an invitation or provokement, in two verſes: αντιφονια, a reſponſe or anſwer in the third verſe: and συνωδια, a cloſe or joining together in harmony: all which I thought good of purpoſe to diſtinguiſh in this place, leſt any man ſhould with Porphyrus, or other like dogs, object unto Saint John, or the heavenly church, a childiſh and idle repetition of ſpeech.

[a] Praiſe the Lord.

[2] The propoſition of praiſe, with exhortation, in this verſe, and the cauſe thereof, in the next verſe.

[3] The ſong of the antiphony or reſponſe, containing an amplification of the praiſe of God, from the perpetual and moſt certain teſtimony of his divine judgment, as was done at Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. 19.

[4] The ſecond place of praiſe, as I ſaid, verſe 1. which firſt is commanded from God in this verſe: and then is in moſt ample manner pronounced of the creatures, both becauſe they ſee that kingdom of Chriſt to come, which moſt they deſire, verſe 6. alſo becauſe they ſee that the church is called forth to be brought home into the houſe of her huſband by holy marriage, unto the fellowſhip of his kingdom, verſe 7, 8. Wherefore Saint John is commanded to write in a book the Epiphonema, or acclamation joined with a divine teſtimony, verſe 9.

[5] Out of the temple from God, as 11. 19,

[6] Without the temple in heaven.

[7] Namely, unto that holy marriage, both herſelf in perſon in this verſe, and alſo furniſhed of her ſpouſe with marriage-gifts princely and divine, is adorned and prepared in the next verſe.

[8] As an enſign of kingly and prieſtly dignity: which dignity Chriſt beſtoweth upon us, chap. 1. 6.

[9] This is a gift given by the huſband for marriage ſake, and a moſt choice ornament which Chriſt beſtoweth upon us, as upon his ſpouſe.

[b] Good works, which are lively teſtimonies of faith.

[10] Namely, the angel, as appeareth by the next verſe.

[11] The particular hiſtory of this verſe is brought in by occaſion, and as it were beſides the purpoſe, that St. John might make a public example of his own infirmity, and of the modeſt ſanctimony of the angel, who both renounced for himſelf the divine honours, and recalled all the ſervants of God unto the worſhip of him alone: as alſo 22. 8.

[c] Which are commanded to bear witneſs of Jeſus.

[d] For Jeſus is the mark that all the prophecies ſhoot at.

[12] The ſecond place of this chapter (as I ſaid verſe 1.) is of the victory gotten by Chriſt againſt both the beaſts: in which firſt, Chriſt is deſcribed as one ready to fight, unto the ſixteenth verſe; then is ſhewed the battle to be begun, thence unto the eighteenth verſe. Laſtly, is ſet forth the victory, unto the end of the chapter. In this place do ſhine forth moſt excellent properties of Chriſt as our heavenly judge and revenger, according to his perſon, company, effects and names.

[13] Properties belonging to his perſon, that he is heavenly, judge, faithful, true, juſt, in this verſe, ſearching out all things, ruling over all, to be ſearched out of none, ver. 12. the triumpher, and the very eſſential word of God, verſe 13.

[14] The company or retinue of Chriſt, holy, innumerable, heavenly, judicial, royal, and pure.

[15] The effects of Chriſt prepared unto battle, that with his mouth he ſtriketh the Gentiles, ruleth and deſtroyeth.

[16] The name agreeing unto Chriſt, according to the former properties, expreſſed after the manner of the Hebrews.

[17] The ſecond member, as I ſaid verſe 11. A reproachful calling forth of his enemies unto battle: in which not themſelves (for why ſhould they be called forth of the King of the world, or provoked being his ſubjects? for that were not comely) but in their hearing the birds of the air are called to eat their carcaſes.

[18] That is, openly, and in ſight of all, as Num. 25. 4. and 2 Sam. 12. 11.

[19] That is, through this inferior heaven, and which is nearer unto us: an Hebrew phraſe.

[20] The third member (as was ſaid verſe 11.) of the victory obtained by Chriſt. Unto this appertaineth two things: his buckling with the beaſt and his forces, in this verſe: and the event moſt magnificent, deſcribed after the manner of men, in the verſes following. All theſe things are plain.

the earth, and their hoſts gathered together to make battle againſt him that ſat on the horſe, and againſt his army.

20 But the beaſt[21] was taken, and with him that falſe prophet that wrought miracles before him, whereby he deceived them that received the beaſt's[22] mark, and them that worſhipped his image. Theſe both were alive caſt into a lake of fire burning with brimſtone.

21 And the remnant were ſlain with the ſword of him that ſitteth upon the horſe, which cometh out of his mouth, and all the fowls were filled full with their fleſh,

CHAP. XX.

1 The angel 2 bindeth Satan for a thouſand years. 8 Being looſed, he ſtirreth up Gog and Magog, that is, privy and open enemies againſt the ſaints, 11 but the vengeance of the Lord cutteth off their inſolency. 12 The books are opened, by which the dead are judged.

AND[1] I ſaw an angel come down from heaven, having the key[2] of the bottomleſs pit, and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he took the dragon, that old ſerpent, which is the devil and Satan, and he bound him[3] a thouſand years:

3 And caſt him into the bottomleſs pit, and he ſhut him up, and ſealed the door upon him, that he ſhould deceive the people[4] no more, till the thouſand years were fulfilled: for after that he muſt be looſed for[5] a little ſeaſon.

4[6] And I ſaw[a] ſeats: and they ſat upon them, and judgment was given unto them, and I ſaw the ſouls of them that were[8] beheaded for the witneſs of Jeſus, and for the word of God, and which[9] did not worſhip the beaſt, neither his image, neither had taken his mark upon their foreheads or on their hands: and they lived and reigned with Chriſt a thouſand years.

5[10] But the reſt of the dead men[11] ſhall not live again, until the thouſand years be finiſhed: this is the firſt reſurrection.

6 Bleſſed and holy is he that hath part in the firſt reſurrection: for on ſuch the[12] ſecond death hath no power: but they ſhall be the prieſts of God and of Chriſt,[13] and ſhall reign with him a thouſand years.

7[14] And when the[15] thouſand years are expired, Satan ſhall be looſed out of his priſon,

8[16] And ſhall go out to deceive the people, which are in the four quarters of the earth: even * Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, whoſe number is as the ſand of the ſea.

* Ezek. 39. 2.

9 And they went up into the[b] plain of the earth, and they compaſſed the tents of the ſaints about, and the beloved city: but[17] fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10[18] And the devil that deceived them, was caſt into a lake of fire and brimſtone, where that beaſt and that falſe prophet are, and ſhall be tormented even day and night for evermore.

11[19] And I ſaw a great[20] white throne, and [21] Namely, that beaſt with ſeven heads, of which before chap. 13. 1. and 17. 3.

[22] That is, that beaſt with two heads, of which 13. 11. Look more, chap. 16. 14.

[1] Now followeth the third place of the prophetical hiſtory, which is of the victory whereby Chriſt overcame the dragon, as I noted, chap. 7. 1. This place muſt neceſſarily be joined with the end of the twelfth chapter, and be applied unto the juſt underſtanding thereof. This chapter hath two parts. one of the dragon overcome, unto the tenth verſe: the other of the reſurrection and laſt judgment, unto the end of the chapter. The ſtory of the dragon is doubled: Firſt, of the firſt victory, after which he was bound by Chriſt, unto the ſixth verſe. The ſecond is of the laſt victory, whereby he was thrown down into everlaſting puniſhment, thence unto the ſixteenth verſe. This firſt hiſtory happened in the firſt time of the Chriſtian church, when the dragon, thrown down from heaven by Chriſt, went about to moleſt the new birth of the church in the earth, chap. 12. 17, 18. For which cauſe I gave warning, that this ſtory of the dragon muſt be annexed unto that place.

[2] That is, of hell, whither God threw down the angels which had ſinned, and bound them in chains of darkneſs to be kept unto damnation, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6.

[3] The firſt whereof (continuing this hiſtory with the end of the twelfth chapter) in the thirty-ſixth year from the paſſion of Chriſt, when the church of the Jews being overthrown, Satan aſſayed to invade the Chriſtian church gathered of the Gentiles, and to deſtroy part of her ſeed, chap. 12. 17. The thouſandth year falleth preciſely upon the times of that wicked Hildebrand, who was called Gregory VII. a moſt damnable necromancer and ſorcerer, whom Satan uſed as an inſtrument when he was looſed out of bonds, thenceforth to annoy the ſaints of God with moſt cruel perſecutions, and the whole world with diſſentions and moſt bloody wars: as Benno the cardinal reporteth at large. And this is the firſt victory gotten over the dragon in the earth.

[4] Namely, with that public and violent deceit which he attempted before, chap. 12. and which after a thouſand years (alack for woe!) he moſt mightily procured in the Chriſtian world.

[5] Which being once expired, the ſecond battle and victory ſhall be, of which, ver. 7, 8.

[6] A deſcription of the common ſtate of the church of Chriſt in earth, in that ſpace of a thouſand years, for which the devil was in bonds: in which firſt, the authority, life, and common honour of the godly is declared, verſe 4. Secondly, newneſs of life is preached unto others by the goſpel, after that ſpace, verſe 5. Finally, he concludeth with promiſe, verſe 7.

[a] For judgment was committed to them, as to members joined to the head: not that Chriſt's office was given over to them.

[7] This was a type of the authority of the good and faithful ſervants of God in the church, taken from the manner of men.

[8] Of the martyrs which ſuffered in thoſe firſt times.

[9] Of the martyrs which ſuffered after both the beaſts were now riſen up, chap. 15. for there theſe things are expounded.

[10] Whoſoever ſhall lie dead in ſin, and not know the truth of God.

[11] They ſhall not be renewed with that newneſs of the life by the enlightening of the goſpel of the glory of Chriſt. For this is the firſt reſurrection, by which the ſouls of the dead do riſe from their death, in the ſecond reſurrection their bodies ſhall riſe again.

[12] That whereby both body and ſoul, that is, the whole man, is addicted and delivered unto eternal death, ſee chap. 2. 11.

[13] A return unto the intended hiſtory, by reſuming the words which are in the end of the fourth verſe.

[14] The ſecond hiſtory, of the latter victory of Chriſt, as was ſaid verſe 1. In which are ſummarily deſcribed the work, overthrow, and eternal puniſhment of Satan.

[15] Of which I ſpake, verſe 2. Then therefore ſhall be given unto him liberty to rage againſt the church, and to moleſt the ſaints for the ſins of men: unto whom the faithful ſhall have aſſociated themſelves more than was meet, taſting with them of their impurity of doctrine and life.

[16] The work, or act of Satan (which is the firſt member, as I diſtinguiſhed in the verſe beforegoing) to deceive the whole world, even unto the uttermoſt nations thereof: to arm them againſt the people of God, in this verſe; and to beſiege and oppreſs the church, with his whole ſtrength, in the verſe following.

[b] As if he ſaid, Inſomuch that the whole face of the earth, how great ſoever it is, was filled.

[17] The wrath of God, conſuming the adverſaries, and overthrowing their enterpriſes, Heb. 10. 27. And this is the ſecond member mentioned verſe 7. the overthrow of Satan.

[18] The third member, eternal deſtruction againſt thoſe that are overcome: as I noted in the ſame place.

[19] The ſecond part of this chapter, in which is deſcribed the judge, in this verſe, and the laſt judgment in the verſe following.

[20] That is, a tribunal-ſeat moſt prince-like and glorious: for ſo doth the Greek word alſo ſignify.

A. D. 96.

one that ſat on it, [21] from whoſe face fled away both the earth and heaven, and their place was no more found.

12 And I ſaw the dead, both great and ſmall, ſtand before [22] God: and the [23] books were opened: and * another book was opened, which is the book [24] of life: and the dead were judged of thoſe things which were written in the books, according to their works.

* Ch. 5. 3. and 21. 27. Phil. 4. 3.

13 [25] And the ſea gave up her dead which were in her, and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 [26] And death and hell were caſt into the lake of fire: this is the ſecond death:

15 And whoſoever was not found written in the book of life, was caſt into the lake of fire.

CHAP. XXI.

2 [2] And I John ſaw the holy city New Jeruſalem come down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride trimmed for her huſband.

3 [3] And I heard a great voice out of heaven, ſaying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them: and they ſhall be his people, and God himſelf ſhall be their God with them.

A. D. 96.

9 [6] And there came unto me one of the ſeven angels, which had the ſeven vials full of the ſeven laſt plagues, and talked with me, ſaying, Come: I will ſhew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife.

[21] That is, Chriſt, before whom, when he cometh unto judgment, heaven and earth ſhall periſh for the greatneſs of his majeſty, 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10, &c.

[22] That is, Chriſt the judge, 2 Cor. 5. 10.

[23] As it were his books of reckoning or accompts, that is, the teſtimony of our conſcience, and of our works, which by no means can be avoided. This is ſpoken after the manner of men.

[24] The book of the eternal decree of God, in which God the Father hath elected in Chriſt, according to the good pleaſure of his will, thoſe that ſhall be heirs of life. This alſo is ſpoken according to the manner of men.

[25] This is a prevention, or an anſwer to an objection: for happily ſome man will ſay, But they are dead, whom the ſea, death, and the grave, hath conſumed, how ſhall they appear before the Judge? Saint John anſwereth, By reſurrection from death, whereunto all things (howſoever repugnant) ſhall miniſter and ſerve at the commandment of God, as Dan. 12.

[26] The laſt enemy which is death ſhall be aboliſhed by Chriſt (that he may no more make any attempt againſt us) 1 Cor. 15, 16. and death ſhall feed upon the reprobate in hell for evermore, according to the righteous judgment of God, in the next verſe.

[1] Now followeth the ſecond part of the hiſtory prophetical (as I ſaid chapter 1. and 11. 1.) of the future eſtate of the church in heaven, after the laſt judgment, unto the fifth verſe of the next chapter. In this are two things briefly declared: the ſtation, ſeat, or place thereof, verſe 1. Then her ſtate and condition, in the verſes following. Before the ſtate of the church deſcribed, is ſet down the ſtate of the whole world, that there ſhall be a new heaven, and a new earth, as Iſaiah 65. 7. and 66. 12. and 2 Peter 3. 13. and this is the ſeat or place of the church, in which righteouſneſs ſhall dwell.

[2] The ſtate of this glorious church is firſt deſcribed generally unto the eighth verſe, and then ſpecially, and by parts, in the verſes following. The general deſcription conſiſteth in a viſion, ſhewed afar off, verſe 2, and in ſpeech ſpoken from heaven. In the general theſe things are common, that the church is holy, new, the workmanſhip of God, heavenly, moſt glorious: the ſpouſe of Chriſt, and partaker of his glory, in this verſe.

[3] The church is deſcribed by ſpeech, firſt of an angel, in two verſes, then of God himſelf, in four verſes. The angel's ſpeech deſcribeth the glory of the church, by a moſt familiar cohabitation of God therewith, by communication of all manner of good things according to the covenant, in this verſe: and by removing or putting far away of all evil things, in the verſe following.

[4] In the ſpeech of God himſelf deſcribing the church, is, firſt, an exordium, or entrance, verſe 5. Then followeth a magnificent deſcription of the church, by the preſent and future good things of the ſame, in three verſes following. In the exordium, God challengeth unto himſelf the reſtoring of all the creatures, of which verſe 1. and witneſſeth the calling of Saint John unto the writing of theſe things, in this verſe.

[5] The deſcription of the church is of three ſorts, by aboliſhing of old things, by the being of preſent things in God, that is, of things eternal: and by the communication all good things with the godly, verſe 6. If ſo be they ſhall ſtrive manfully, verſe 7. But the reprobate are excluded from thence, verſe 8.

[a] Their lot and inheritance, as it were.

[6] A tranſition unto the particular deſcribing of the heavenly church, by the expreſs calling of Saint John, in this verſe; and his rapting up by the Spirit, in confirmation of the truth of God, in the verſe following.

[7] He meaneth the place and ſtately ſeat of the church, ſhadowed out in a mountain.

[8] A type of that church which is one ample, or catholic, holy, celeſtial, built of God, in this verſe: and glorious, in the verſe following. This type, propounded generally, is after particularly declared, verſe 12, &c.

[9] A particular deſcription (as I noted verſe 2.) of the celeſtial church. Firſt, by the eſſential parts of the ſame, under the ſimilitude of a city, unto verſe 22. Secondly, by the foreign accidents, unto the end of the chapter. Thirdly, by the effects, in the beginning of the next chapter, the eſſential parts are noted, the matter and the form in the whole work: of theſe the ſuperficies and foundation of the wall are intire parts (as they uſe to be called) which parts are firſt deſcribed in figure, unto the 14th verſe, afterwards more exactly.

[10] According to the number of the tribes, of which, chapter 7. For here the outward part is attributed unto the Old Teſtament, and the foundation to the New Teſtament.

[11] He meaneth the prophets, who are the meſſengers of God, and watchmen of the church.

13 On the Eaſt part there were three gates, and on the North ſide three gates, on the South ſide three gates, and on the Weſt ſide three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had [12] twelve foundations, and in them the names of the Lamb's twelve apoſtles.

15 [13] And he that talked with me, had a golden reed, to meaſure the city withal, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 [14] And the city lay [b] four ſquare, and the length is as large as the breadth of it: and he meaſured the city with the reed, twelve thouſand furlongs: and the length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.

17 And he meaſured the wall thereof, an hundred forty and four cubits, by the meaſure of man, that is, of the [c] angel.

18 [15] And the building of the wall of it was of jaſper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glaſs.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garniſhed with all manner of precious ſtones: the firſt foundation was jaſper: the ſecond of ſapphire: the third of a chalcedony: the fourth of an emerald:

20 The fifth of a ſardonix: the ſixth of a ſardius: the ſeventh of a chryſolite: the eighth of a beril: the ninth of a topaz: the tenth of a chryſopraſus: the eleventh of a jacinth: the twelfth an amethyſt.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls, and every gate is of one pearl, and the [d] ſtreet of the city is pure gold, as ſhining glaſs.

22 And I ſaw no temple therein: for the Lord God almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

* Iſa. 60. 19. 23 * [16] And the city hath no need of the ſun, neither of the moon to ſhine in it: for the glory of God did light it: and the Lamb is the light of it.

* Iſa. 60. 3. 24 * And the people which are ſaved, ſhall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth ſhall bring their glory and honour unto it.

* Iſa. 60. 11. 25 * And the gates of it ſhall not be ſhut by day: for there ſhall be no night there.

26 And the glory and honour of the Gentiles ſhall be brought unto it.

27 And there ſhall enter into it none unclean thing, neither whatſoever worketh abomination or lyes: but they which are written in the Lamb's * book of life. * Ch. 3. 5. and 20. 12. Phil. 4. 3.

CHAP. XXII.

1 The river of the water of life is ſhewed, 2 and the tree of life: 6, 7 Then followeth the concluſion of this prophecy, 8 where John declareth, that the things herein contained, are moſt true. 13 And now the third time repeateth theſe words, All things come from him who is the beginning and the end.

AND he ſhewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as chryſtal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

2 In the midſt of the ſtreet of it, and of either ſide of the river, was the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and gave fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree ſerved to heal the nations with.

3 And there ſhall be no more curſe, but the the throne of God and of the Lamb ſhall be in it, and his ſervants ſhall ſerve him.

4 And they ſhall ſee his face, and his name ſhall be on their foreheads.

5 * And there ſhall be no night there, and they need no candle, neither light of the ſun: for the Lord God giveth them light, and they ſhall reign for evermore. * Iſa. 60. 19.

[13] A tranſition unto a more exquiſite deſcription of the parts of the church, by finding out of the meaſure of the ſame, by the angel that meaſured them.

[14] The meaſure and form moſt equal, in two verſes.

[b] A four-ſquare figure hath equal ſides, and outright corners, and therefore the Grecians call by this name thoſe things that are ſteady, and of continuance, and perfect.

[c] He addeth this, becauſe the angel had the ſhape of a man.

[15] The matter moſt precious and glittering, which the preſence of God maketh moſt glorious.

[d] By ſtreet, he meaneth the broadeſt place of the city.

[16] The ſecond form of particular deſcription (as I ſaid, verſe 12.) from foreign and outward accidents, which are theſe. Light from God himſelf, in this verſe: glory from men, verſe 24. perfect ſecurity from all harm, verſe 25. Finally, ſuch truth and incorruption of glory, verſe 26. as can bear and abide with it: nothing that is inglorious, verſe the laſt.

[1] Here is abſolved and finiſhed the deſcription of the celeſtial church (as I ſhewed before, chap. 21. 12.) by the effects in five verſes, and then this book is concluded in the reſt of the chapter. The effects proceeding from God, who dwelleth in the church, are theſe: the everlaſting grace of God, in this verſe, the eternal living of the godly, as chap. 2. 7. the eternal fruits which the godly bring forth unto God, themſelves and others, verſe 2. freedom and immunity from all evil, God himſelf taking pleaſure in his ſervants, and they likewiſe in their God, verſe 3. The beholding and ſight of God, and ſealing of the faithful from all eternity, verſe 4. the light of God, and an everlaſting kingdom and glory, verſe 5.

[2] This whole book is concluded and made up by a confirmation and a ſalutation. The confirmation hath three places: the words of the angel unto the 15th verſe; the words of Chriſt, verſe 16, 17. and the obteſtation made by St. John from divine authority, thence unto the 20th verſe. By the ſpeech of the angel this prophecy is confirmed unto the 8th verſe, and then he ſpeaketh of the uſe of this book in the verſes following. The prophecy is firſt confirmed by the angel from the nature thereof, that it is faithful and true: Secondly, from the nature of the efficient cauſe: both principal, which is God; and inſtrumental, which is the angel in this verſe. Thirdly, from the promiſes of God concerning his coming to effect all theſe things, and concerning our ſalvation, verſe 7. Fourthly, from the teſtification of St. John himſelf, verſe 8. The reſt of the ſpeech of the angel tending to the ſame end. St. John interrupted or broken off by his unadviſed act of worſhipping him, in the ſame verſe which the angel forbidding, teacheth him that adoration muſt be given not to him, but only to God: as for himſelf, that he is of ſuch nature and office, as he may not be adored: which thing alſo was in like manner done, chap. 16. verſe 10.

[3] The angel returneth to his former ſpeech: in which he teacheth the uſe of this book both towards ourſelves, in this and the next verſe: and in reſpect of God for declaration of his truth, thence unto the 15th verſe.

[4] That is, propound this prophecy openly unto all, and conceal no part of it. The contrary whereunto is commanded, Iſa. 8. 6. and Dan. 8. 26.

A. D. 96.

words of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

11 [5] He that is unjuſt, let him be unjuſt ſtill: and he that is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous ſtill: and he that is holy, let him be holy ſtill.

12 [6] And behold, I come ſhortly, and my reward is with me, * to give to every man according as his work ſhall be.

* Rom. 2. 6.

13 I am * Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the firſt and the laſt.

* Ch. 1. 8. and 21. 6. Iſa. 41. 44. and 44. 6.

14 Bleſſed are they that do his commandments, [7] that their right may be in the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For without ſhall be dogs, and enchanters, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whoſoever loveth or maketh lyes.

16 [8] I Jeſus have ſent mine angel, to teſtify unto you theſe things in the churches: I am the root and the generation of David, and the bright morning ſtar.

17 And the Spirit and the bride ſay, Come. And let him that heareth ſay, Come: and let him that is athirſt, come: and * let whoſoever will, take of the water of life freely.

* Iſa. 55. 1.

18 [9] For I proteſt unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man ſhall add unto theſe things, God ſhall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man ſhall diminiſh of the words of the book of this prophecy, God ſhall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from thoſe things which are written in this book.

20 [10] He which teſtifieth theſe things, ſaith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even ſo, come, Lord Jeſus.

21 [11] The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt be with you all. Amen.

---

[5] An objection prevented. But there will be ſome that will abuſe this occaſion unto evil, and will wreſt this ſcripture unto their own deſtruction, as Peter ſaith. What then ſaith the angel? the myſteries of God muſt not therefore be concealed, which it hath pleaſed him to communicate unto us. Let them be hurtful unto others, let ſuch be more and more vile in themſelves whom this ſcripture doth not pleaſe: yet others ſhall be further confirmed thereby unto righteouſneſs, and true holineſs. The care and reformation of theſe may not be neglected, becauſe of the voluntary and malicious offence of others.

[6] The ſecond place belonging unto the uſe of this book, as I ſaid verſe 10. Alſo (ſaith God by the angel) though there ſhould be no uſe of this book unto men: yet it ſhall be of this uſe unto me, that it is a witneſs of my truth unto my glory, who will come ſhortly, to give and execute juſt judgment in this verſe: who have taught that all theſe things have their being in me, in the 13th verſe, and have denounced bleſſedneſs unto my ſervants in the church, verſe 14. and reprobation unto the ungodly, verſe 15.

[7] The bleſſedneſs of the godly ſet down by their title and intereſt thereunto, and their fruit in the ſame.

[8] The ſecond place of confirmation (as I ſaid verſe 6.) is the ſpeech of Chriſt ratifying the vocation of St. John, and the authority of his calling and teſtimony, both from the condition of his own perſon, being God and man, in whom all the promiſes of God are Yea and Amen, 2 Cor. 1. 20. and alſo from the teſtification of other perſons, by the acclamation of the Holy Ghoſt, who here is, as it were, an honourable aſſiſtant of the marriage of the church as the ſpouſe, and of every of the godly as members: and finally, from the thing preſent, that of their own knowledge and accord, they are called forth unto the participation of the good things of God, verſe 17.

[9] The obteſtation of St. John (which is the third place of the confirmation, as was noted verſe 6.) joined with a curſe of execration to preſerve the truth of this book intire and uncorrupted in two verſes.

[10] A divine confirmation or ſealing of the obteſtation, firſt, from Chriſt avouching the ſame, and denouncing his coming againſt all thoſe that ſhall put their ſacrilegious hands hereunto: then from St. John himſelf, who by a moſt holy prayer calleth Chriſt to take vengeance of them.

[11] The ſalutation apoſtolical, which is the other place of the concluſion, as I ſaid verſe 6. and is the end almoſt of every epiſtle: which we wiſh unto the church, and to all the holy and elect members thereof, in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, until his coming to judgment. Come, Lord Jeſus, and do it. Amen, again Amen.

THE END.

A BRIEF TABLE of the Interpretation of the Proper Names which are chiefly found in the Old Teſtament, wherein the First Number ſignifieth the Chapter, the Second the Verſe.

Whereas the wickedneſs of time, and the blindneſs of the former age hath been ſuch, that all things altogether have been abuſed and corrupted, ſo that the very right names of divers of the holy men named in the ſcriptures have been forgotten, and now ſeem ſtrange unto us; and the names of infants, that ſhould ever have ſome godly advertiſements in them, and ſhould be memorials and marks of the children of God received into his houſhold, have been hereby alſo changed and made the ſigns and badges of idolatry and heatheniſh impiety: we have now ſet forth this table of the names that be moſt uſed in the Old Teſtament, with their interpretations, as the Hebrew importeth, partly to call back the godly from that abuſe, when they ſhall know the true names of the godly fathers, and what they ſignify, that their children now named after them, may have teſtimonies by their very names, that they are within that faithful family that in all their doings had ever God before their eyes, and that they are bound by theſe their names to ſerve God from their infancy, and have occaſion to praiſe him for his works wrought in them, and their fathers; but chiefly to reſtore the names to their integrity, whereby many places of the ſcriptures, and ſecret myſteries of the Holy Ghoſt, ſhall better be underſtood. We have meddled rarely with the Greek names, becauſe their interpretation is uncertain, and many of them are corrupted from their original; as we may alſo ſee theſe Hebrew names, ſet in the margin of this table, which have been corrupted by the Grecians. Now for the other Hebrew names that are not here interpreted, let not the diligent reader be careful: for he ſhall find them in places moſt convenient amongſt the annotations; at leaſt ſo many as may ſeem to make for any edification, and underſtanding of the ſcriptures.
